I. SUMMARY

In August, 1859, the trustees of The University of Georgia voted to establish a law school "in which facilities for the best legal education would be afforded." This year The University of Georgia School of Law celebrates its 125th anniversary. Great challenges lie ahead for the school as the nation enters a period of declining law school enrollments and continued state fiscal uncertainty, but there is good reason to suppose that the University trustees who set the school on course in the middle of the nineteenth century would be pleased with the progress of the institution over the past century and a quarter. Measured by the quality of its student body, faculty, and facilities, The University of Georgia School of Law has taken its place among the best state institutions of legal education in the nation. This 1983-84 annual report reviews the accomplishments of the past year and discusses the problem areas that must be addressed in coming years.

1. Educational Program: The Conversion to Semesters

On May 12, 1984, the Law School completed its first year under the semester system. The Law School's experience under the new calendar undoubtedly will be of interest to the rest of the University as the other schools and colleges continue to assess the advisability of a University-wide switch from quarters to semesters. The evidence after one year suggests strongly that the Law School's move to semesters has produced the expected benefits without causing serious new problems.

a. The Semester System and the Educational Program in General

Because the semester calendar allows four additional weeks of instruction before the examination period, faculty members this year were able to provide more intensive coverage of complex areas of the law. Moreover, the switch to the semester system allowed more efficient use of the standard law school teaching materials, which are prepared on the assumption that they will be used under the semester system. Students enrolled in clinical programs this year benefited from the change to the semester calendar, because they were able to follow cases further through the judicial process before moving on to other courses. Finally, and perhaps most importantly, the semester system allowed students more time this year to prepare written work, including the third-year writing requirement. Under the quarter system, the ten-week period proved an unrealistically short time within which to complete a first-rate seminar paper.

b. The Semester System and the Early Bar

Georgia, unlike other states, allows law students to take the bar examination before graduation. The early bar disrupted the curricular and co-curricular programs of the law school even under the semester system, but there is general agreement that the change to semesters diminished the disruptive impact of the early bar to some extent. Under the quarter system, the early bar fell only a couple of weeks before winter quarter exams. This year the semester calendar allowed third-year students some time to recover from the bar before taking law school finals. Also, the semester system alleviated the impact of the early bar on the student staffs of the law school's two periodicals. Under the quarter system, the third-year staff members of the periodicals could not cope well with the conflicting winter quarter demands of editorial work, course work, and bar preparation. The additional four weeks provided by the semester system before final examinations allowed the student staff members to devote more time to their editorial work between January and April. Finally, the flexibility introduced by the semester system may have contributed to the law school's improved passing percentage on the February, 1984 bar examination. Last year 17 of 168 University of Georgia students failed the examination, for a passing rate of 90.5 percent. This year 9 of 178 failed, for a passing rate of 94.5 percent.

c. The Semester System: Law School Placement, Admissions, and Registration

Large law firms typically hire new associates from the ranks of their summer clerks. Because our students did not complete their final examinations until well into June under the quarter system, they could not begin their clerkships until approximately a month after clerks from other schools had begun work. With the change to the semester calendar this year, our students began their summer clerkships at the same time as students from other schools, ending what many of our students considered an unfair "head start" for the students from other institutions.

The change to the semester system may be partially responsible for the excellent placement rates for Law School students and graduates in 1984. Of the second-year students seeking jobs in the summer of 1984, 64 percent had accepted jobs as of May 10. The average placement rate for the previous five years at the same time of year was 44 percent. The first-year class also did well this year. Eighty-six students, or 42 percent of the class, secured law-related employment for the summer. And on June 5, three weeks after graduation, 64 percent of the Class of 1984 reported employment. The average placement rate for the previous five years in June was 60 percent.

In the increasingly competitive and important area of law school admissions, semester system schools had enjoyed a subtle advantage over The University of Georgia before the Law School abandoned the quarter system. Students on the Law School's "hold" list often decided to enroll at a semester system school in August rather than to continue to gamble on a spot in the Law School's incoming class in September. Although some of these students withdrew from the other schools after a month's worth of classes if accepted here, others did not. Under the semester system, the Law School is able to compete more effectively for those students initially put on hold.

Finally, the semester system streamlined the Law School registration process this year. Only two registration periods were required rather than the three periods necessary under the quarter system.

2. Student Body

The Class of 1986 enrolled for the first year of law studies on August 29, 1983. These 216 class members came to us with a median LSAT score of 38, which roughly translates into a 660 on the old three-digit LSAT scale. This median score places the class above the 84th percentile in national comparison. The average grade point average for the entering class was 3.4.

National trends reveal that the number of LSAT takers and the subsequent applicant pool is down approximately 12 percent this year. Some law schools are experiencing application shortfalls of as much as 30 percent. According to the Law School Admissions Council, the heaviest overall losses have been at public institutions. At the same time, private law schools are at both the high and low end of the spectrum in application shortfalls.

In addition, the overall quality of law school applicants has been a concern this year at many institutions. The prevailing theory is that as the number of candidates decreases, the lesser "name" schools will have fewer highly qualified students to enroll.

This Law School, by every current indication, will enroll a class this August as qualified as the class that entered in the fall of 1983. The median LSAT score for the class should again be a 38 or at the 84th percentile nationally.

We are watching the national trends carefully, planning our recruitment strategy accordingly, and employing as many marketing techniques as appropriate to continue to attract a high quality student body.

One factor which is greatly in our favor is the low tuition which makes Georgia a very good educational bargain. The June 4, 1984 edition of USA Today published a list of the yearly tuition rates at ten selected law schools. In the first category were the five most expensive law schools in the nation - each costing more than $10,000 a year to attend. The second category included those law schools with tuitions less than $3,000 which are among the most selective in the nation, based on LSAT scores. These five were the Universities of Texas, North Carolina, Florida, California at Berkeley, and Georgia. It is gratifying to be in the company of such a select group of public institutions.

3. Faculty Productivity

The University of Georgia ranked 24th among 174 law schools in a recent measurement study of the relative scholarly productivity of law faculties.

The study, conducted by Arizona State professor Mark Ellman, was a 54-month tally of articles and pages appearing in 23 of the most highly respected and competitive law journals. The list of journals was generated by reference to a 1976 study of the frequency with which various legal periodicals were cited.

The University of Georgia is one of only six schools among the top 25 in the survey whose own journals were not included in the study. This is particularly impressive because most of the faculty members at the schools listed publish heavily in their own "in-house" journals. For example, if the Virginia Law Review were not included in the survey, Virginia faculty production would decline from 1926 pages to 603, reducing its rank from first to eighteenth place. The survey reports on Georgia faculty writings which are in addition to those that appear in the Georgia Law Review.

One of the central ingredients of a first class university is a faculty which produces respected scholarship. An important criterion in this regard is the placement of faculty research pieces in periodicals which are extensively cited and are highly selective in the manuscripts they accept for publication.

A number of significant books were written and published during the 1983-84 year by our faculty. These are listed on page 42.

Also, some of our professors were selected for important foreign assignments during the past year:

a. Louis B. Sohn was chosen to head the United States delegation to a 35-nation meeting of experts on the examination and elaboration of a method for the peaceful settlement of disputes, held in Athens, Greece this spring.

Sohn, the Woodruff Professor of International Law, was chairman of the U.S. delegation to the meeting held within the framework of the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe. The meeting was held March 21-May 1.

Secretary of State George Schulz appointed Sohn to lead the delegation, citing Sohn's "long experience in the areas of international dispute resolution, both academically and as a consultant to government."

Representatives of member nations of NATO, the Warsaw Pact and nine neutral countries met for six weeks to study ways of settling disputes, ranging from negotiation to arbitration.

b. Gabriel Wilner visited six West African countries during a four week period in May and June. Under the auspices of the United Nations, the French speaking Economic Community of West Africa (CEAO) requested him to prepare a coordinated plan for the unification of the investment and transfer of technology laws of the six member states (Ivory Coast, Senegal, Mali, Mauritania, Upper Volta and Niger).

Wilner recently spent five months in India on a Senior Research Fellowship granted by the United States - India Cultural Subcommission. His principal areas of research were the Indian policies on foreign investment and the transfer of technology as part of the general national plan for economic development. He is preparing a book on international law and economic development.

While in India, Wilner was based in New Delhi and affiliated with the Jawaharlal Nehru University. For his research he met with government officials, practicing attorneys, businessmen, the U.S. Ambassador and embassy officials dealing with economic matters, and with other researchers. He also met with the Chief Justice of India.

c. Eric M. Holmes, who is teaching this year in Ireland, was the Reporter for the European Economic Community conference on "The Obstacles to the Implementation of the Amended Draft on Product Liability" held in Dublin, Ireland at the end of March. Holmes held the Jefferson Smurfit Chair of Business Law at the University College, Galway, Ireland.

4. Visiting Faculty, New Appointments, Retirement

a. Visitors

Gareth H. Jones of Cambridge University visited the Law School during the fall semester. He taught restitution and contracts. Jones holds the Downing Professorship of the Laws of England at Cambridge.

Guest lecturers and visiting scholars at the Rusk Center of the Law School included:

Professor Wei Hou Zhao of Wuhan University in China. He visited and conducted research for six months during the spring semester.

Professor Nobuo Kumamoto, of Hokkaigakuen University in Japan, was here from February 16 to March 30, and offered a mini-course in Japanese law.

Professor Gunther Roth, University of Innsbruck, Austria, visited in October.

Professor Hermann Soell of the University of Regensburg, Germany, came in November.

Professor Robert Grime, now dean of the College of Law of the University of Southampton, England, came in March.

Dr. Bernhard Schloh, Legal Counsel to the European Economic Communities, conducted a mini-course the end of the spring semester. He has formerly taught on the Georgia faculty during the fall terms of 1979 and 1980.

Zhao, Kumamoto, Grime, and Schloh participated in a conference on the legal aspects of exporting which was sponsored by ICLE and the Rusk Center March 29-30.

b. Appointments

Ronald L. Carlson has been named to fill the newly-established John Byrd Martin Professorship. Carlson, a nationally recognized scholar in the area of evidence and trial practice, will assume the professorship in August. He comes from the law faculty of Washington University in St. Louis. The student team which Carlson coached there won the national championship in the National Trial Competition sponsored by the ABA and the American College of Trial Lawyers. We look forward to his work with our students in the trial practice program.

James C. Smith of Ohio State will join the Georgia faculty in August. Before entering law teaching, Smith was an associate with Baker and Botts in Houston, Texas. He taught first year property and oil and gas law at Ohio State.

c. Retirement

On April 25, Professor Dean Rusk was honored by a faculty dinner in tribute to him as he retires from full-time teaching. He will continue to teach and lecture intermittently while maintaining daily office hours in the Rusk Center.

The dinner program was a tribute to Rusk's many career accomplishments and the value of his reputation and expertise to the School of Law.

The sheer number of his public speaking engagements, virtually all of which have been non-profit (or the honorarium given by Rusk to Law School scholarship or fellowship funds), has been astounding.

Since coming to the University of Georgia in the fall of 1970, Professor Rusk has accepted 704 speaking commitments in addition to his regularly scheduled classes and individual student tutoring and research guidance. This includes 141 visits to other university and college campuses as well as 21 visits to law schools.

Thirty-one colleges and universities have presented Rusk with honorary degrees from their institutions. Among these are Princeton, Harvard and Columbia Universities.

He is truly a great friend of higher education, and we feel blessed to have him on this faculty. We wish him continued strength and vigor as he celebrates his 75th birthday this year.

c. Promotions

The promotions of Walter Hellerstein to full professor and Maxine Thomas to associate professor were approved by the Board of Regents this spring.

5. Computer-assisted Instruction and Administration

At the faculty-administrative retreat held in August before the opening of the academic year, our topic was the computer revolution and its impact on law schools and law libraries. This year, for the first time, we have had a faculty committee to look into the school's data processing needs and make recommendations.

Fortunately, we were able to add WESTLAW to the law library's research capabilities. This enhances the computerized research capacity which we have with LEXIS.

The new system recommended by the committee is one which will effectively incorporate library, administration, and faculty research needs. The core of the system is an IBM System 36, which costs $125,000. We are most appreciative of President Davison's advance of $50,000 for a down payment on the system. We are hoping for an August delivery date on the new computer system.

Once the system becomes operational, we will be able to keep a record path on an individual from his or her status as an applicant on through to becoming an alumni donor. The next step will be to acquire individual terminals for faculty offices for connection with WESTLAW or LEXIS. The adoption of this system will make word processing capability available to faculty secretaries as early as next fall.

6. Private Funding

As part of its Bicentennial Celebration, The University of Georgia has launched a major capital funds campaign to ask alumni, friends, corporations and foundations to make a large capital investment in the University's pursuit of sustained excellence.

This Spring, the School of Law prepared a "case statement" to include in the outreach to major gifts prospects. The presentation describes the role of The School of Law in the overall plan for the University's $60 million campaign. It projects the endowment needs of the School in the next decade which will make it possible to maintain strength in four critical areas: teaching competency, law library resources, co-curricular programs, and student body quality.

Summarized below are several aspects of the Law School's growth plan, which seeks approximately $8 million to round out existing needs.

a. The Law Library - $2 million

In 1973, The University of Georgia Law Library "broke in" to the ranks of the top 20 law school libraries in the nation. This was in recognition of its volume count and the comprehensive nature of its collection. For the last ten years it has been possible to stay in the top twenty through state appropriated funding for book purchases. Today, that is no longer the case. Last summer our top ranking slipped and it has become extremely difficult to maintain the continuing serials needed without additional resources. A substantial endowment to provide annual income for library acquisitions is genuinely needed.

b. Professorships - $2 million

The two official Bicentennial Fund projects relating to law professorships are the Harmon W. Caldwell Chair in Constitutional Law and the Martin E. Kilpatrick Chair in Corporate Finance and Securities Law.

Major gifts made by donors to these professorships will help to place them in comparable positions to the Law School's other endowed professorships: The Emily and Ernest Woodruff Chair in International Law, the Herman E. Talmadge Chair in Public Law, the Robert C. Alston Chair, the Fuller T. Callaway Chair, the John B. Martin Chair, the J. Alton Hosch Chair and the Francis Shackelford Chair. In addition, it is anticipated that endowment funding would be forthcoming for professorships in the vital teaching areas of legal ethics and corporate law.

c. Scholarships - $2 million

The School of Law vigorously pursues highly qualified student applicants for its entering classes. If the State of Georgia and this region is to retain the most gifted young people for the study and practice of law, then the School must be prepared to compete with out-of-state law schools in providing scholarship assistance. At the present time, there are seventeen endowed law scholarship funds. Ten of these are funded by a sole donor or have reached the $500,000 mark. Others are established by a group of donors in honor of an individual, and these funds are open for additional contributions. They are:

- A. Pratt Adams Memorial Scholarship Fund
- Frank Brogan Memorial Scholarship Fund
- Welborn B. Cody Memorial Scholarship Fund
- Frank A. Constangy Memorial Scholarship Fund
- D. Meade Field Memorial Scholarship Fund
- Robert B. Troutman Memorial Scholarship Fund
- Talmadge Scholarship Fund

The corpus of each of these funds is below $100,000. Major gifts to one or more of these designated funds will be helpful in bringing them to a level where five or more tuition-and-books grants could be awarded each year from the fund's income.

d. Co-Curricular Activities - $2 million

A consistent theme of the most comprehensive and thoughtful evaluations of modern legal education is that law schools must devote more resources to programs designed for the teaching of lawyering skills. The Law School administration and faculty believe that the challenge to educate students in the more "practical" aspects of lawyering is best addressed by reinforcing the school's long-standing commitment to such programs as Moot Court, law review, international journal, indigent legal services, and Prosecutorial Clinic. These co-curricular activities are expensive because they are labor-intensive (instructor-student ratio) and because they require funding for travel (in moot court competitions) and printing costs (student journals).

These endowment funds have been recently established to accept private contributions for the support of co-curricular programs:

The Georgia Law Review Endowment Fund

The Moot Court Endowment Fund

7. Conclusion

At the present time, the total endowment of the Law School, including deferred gifts and pledges, is approximately $10 million. Because a part of this portfolio is contained in wills and trusts which will not be available until sometime in the future, it is wise to build a framework for future growth and have it set in place when such funds become available.

This means evaluating the curriculum to determine weaknesses in subject fields where a chaired professorship may be needed. It means exploring ways to make better use of the extensive research collection which the law library now possesses in order to predict where the trimming and expansion should occur.

These kinds of evaluations are valuable introspectives of ourselves and our mission. The Law School's Self-Study is an excellent tool with which to formulate a blueprint. The Self-Study has been in careful preparation now for several months, and many hours will be spent on it before it is officially turned over to the American Bar Association/ Association of American Law School's re-accreditation inspection team. The years ahead will be spent pursuing goals formulated this year, along with recommendations outlined by the re-inspection committee after its visit next spring.

As the School of Law moves into its 125th fall term of operation shortly, we are grateful to those trustees who conceived the Lumpkin Law School in 1859. We also take this opportunity to thank President Fred C. Davison for his encouragement and support during his 17 years as administrative head of The University of Georgia.

C. Academic Evaluation

1. Academic Performance

Class of 1984

In September of 1981, 211 students registered as members of the Class of 1984. In September 1982, 200 (186 + 14 transfer) registered and in August 1983, 200 (186 + 14 transfer).

Including transfer students, 195 received their degrees in May 1984 or July 1984. This includes a retention rate of 88% of the original first year class.

Class of 1985

In September of 1982, 261 students registered as members of the Class of 1985. In August 1983, 243 (241 + 2 transfer) registered and in the spring 242 took final examinations -- a retention rate of 92% of the original class members.

Class of 1986

In August 1983, 216 students registered as members of the Class of 1986, and in May, 206 sat for examinations. Until all examinations are graded and cumulative averages computed, it is not known how many first year students have maintained the necessary academic standing to continue law studies. The retention rate for the first year class can be determined at the time of fall quarter registration.

2. Bar Exam Results

Under the provisions of an act passed by the Georgia General Assembly in January 1974, third year law students are eligible to take the Georgia Bar Examination if they have completed at least five semesters of law studies leading to the J.D. degree.

The Class of 1984 therefore, is comprised of December and June graduates who could have passed the examination in either July 1983, February 1984, or July 1984, and still be considered as having become a member of the State Bar of Georgia during the year of his or her graduation.

Of the 202 seniors who graduated in December 1983, May 1984, or August 1984, 178 took the July 1983 or the February 1984 Georgia Bar Examination. The July 1984 Bar Exam has not yet been administered.

The results are as follows:

1. Number of Georgia law graduates who sat for Georgia Bar Examination in July, 1983: 4
2. Number of Georgia law graduates who sat for Georgia Bar Examination in February, 1984: 174
Total: 178
3. Number of seniors who passed July 1983 Bar Exam: 4
4. Number of seniors who passed February 1984 Bar Exam: 165
Total: 169
5. Number of seniors who failed July 1983 Bar Exam:
but passed February 1984 Bar Exam: 0
Total: 169
6. Number of seniors who failed July 1983 Bar Exam: 0
7. Number of seniors who failed February 1984 Bar Exam: 9
Total: 9
8. Percentage of graduates who took the Georgia Bar Examination in July 1983 or February 1984 and passed it: 94.9%

D. Clinical Experience

1. Legal Aid and Defender Society

The advent of the semester system at the Law School saw some changes in the manner in which the Legal Aid and Defender Society functioned. The lengthening of the period during which students were enrolled in the work of the society from a quarter to a semester brought about increased opportunity for students to follow their cases and to hopefully see the resolution of them. At the same time the change decreased the number of students who had the opportunity for work in the clinic. As a consequence of the smaller number of students who could be accepted each semester, a lottery system was devised to limit the number of first-time students in the program.

A maximum of fifty-five students was established for both the fall and spring semester and was fully met. The summer session saw a dramatic decrease in enrollment. The number was down to ten students.

The number of students certified under the Third Year Practice Act also decreased from that of previous years with seven students being certified in the fall semester, ten in the spring semester and two in the summer session.

Although fewer students were afforded the opportunity to enroll in the clinic, a most beneficial result was observed. The ratio between students and attorneys supervising the work was reduced to approximately 1:8, a situation which permitted much closer supervision of students and at the same time increased the learning experience opportunities of the students.

Attempts were made to find additional areas for student involvement in the representation of clients, particularly in administrative law areas. As a consequence, students were used in the representation of clients in Unemployment Compensation hearings, Social Security hearings, and as assistants to attorneys representing clients in mental health commitment proceedings. This innovation has proved most beneficial since it not only increases the opportunities for student involvement, but does so in areas other than criminal cases.

The number of criminal cases opened during the current year was approximately 1450. It should be observed that not all of these represent bona fide criminal cases. Many were Driving Under the Influence Cases, Traffic Cases, etc. Yet in each of these cases, students are afforded the opportunity to interview the client, counsel the client, confer with the supervising attorney, prepare pleadings if necessary, and observe the process of the case through the courts.

The number of civil cases handled during the year was approximately 275.

The work of the Prisoner Legal Counseling Project during the year was marked by the expansion of the Reidsville Office (Georgia State Prison at Reidsville) to two attorneys and three paralegals, all involved in providing legal services to prisoners at that institution. Attempts were made to fill the paralegal positions with law students who desire to be employed for a semester at the office. During this year we have been able to use two law students as paralegals at the Reidsville Office.

The work at the Jackson Office (Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center) continues at the high level of recent years. All adult male prisoners entering the system do so through Jackson. As a consequence, personnel at that office are inundated with requests from inmates concerning such matters as appeals, new trials, and personal legal problems.

Those attorneys of the Project stationed in Athens continue to travel throughout the state visiting the smaller prisons and county camps. Maximum possible exposure to third year students is obtained through the use of students as assistants to attorneys in the preparation of letters, briefs, court pleadings, etc.

The scope of the work of the project is indicated by the number of interviews. During FY84 more than 8,000 prison interviews will be accomplished by personnel of the project. Of this number more than 1000 will have been at Reidsville, more than 2000 will have been at Jackson, and the remainder will have been at the various other prisons in the state.

2. The Prosecutorial Clinic

The thirteenth year of operation of the prosecutorial clinic program was marked by continued participation in local prosecutorial activity and special attention to fundamental trial skills. Forty-three second and third year law students were enrolled during 1983-84. Approximately 40 second year students wrote tryout memos during the spring as a means of application for one of the 22 entering positions. For the past ten years, demand has exceeded the slots available by a 2:1 margin.

The Clinic continues to operate based on the premise that legal education cannot be complete without attention to the practical aspect of trial practice. Prosecution has remained a successful vehicle for offering clinical experiences for law students. The experience provides an exercise in carrying the burden of proof, a responsibility which requires preparation and investigation. It is excellent training for understanding the principles of evidence, criminal law, criminal procedure and trial practice.

Second year students investigated 445 felony cases in 1983-84. Instead of contrived or simulated exercises, clinic students took cases as they were made, developed interviewing skills with police, victims and witnesses as they found them, evaluated and summarized the case for prosecutorial merit, and applied those facts to the laws of Georgia. Second year students also wrote five appellate briefs to the Court of Appeals of Georgia and two briefs to the Supreme Court of Georgia.

Third year students concentrated on courtroom experiences. In addition to preparing the 445 cases for courts of inquiry in the Magistrate's Court of Athens-Clarke County (an average of 12 actual hearings per student), five students tried a total of seven felony trials before juries during 1983-84. The range of participation ran from making the opening statement and examining most of the State's witnesses to trying the entire case without any active participation by the Director, except in an advisory capacity. This was the lowest number of trials in six years, but it represented participation in almost 20 percent of the cases actually tried before juries in Clarke County. Additionally, several formal probation revocation and motion to suppress hearings were prosecuted by clinic students under the Director's supervision.

In addition to the extensive courtroom work and preparation, the Clinic had a weekly one-hour period of formalized instruction. This year's topics were the rules of evidence, pretrial criminal practice, plea bargaining, and sentencing alternatives. Videotape instruction was used extensively.

In response to pressures brought about by conversion to the semester format, and the need to make quicker progress, an intensive program of training during the first two weeks of the fall semester is being developed for implementation this fall. The program is expected to accelerate student readiness to participate in jury trials.

3. Legal Research and Writing Course

The required Legal Research and Writing course contributes to the first-year student's development of legal analysis, research, and writing skills through both classroom instruction and practical experience. During the 1983-84 academic year, three full-time instructors taught the students the fundamentals of legal process, bibliography, legal research, and legal writing. Students were required to complete a systematic library research project, to write two law office memoranda of varying complexity, to prepare an appellate brief, and to participate in at least one round of oral argument. Additionally, instruction in the use of LEXIS and WESTLAW, computerized legal research data bases, was made available during the winter semester by the library staff.

The Law School's conversion to the semester system allowed more classroom instruction than in the past as well as more time for individual consultation with instructors and for library experience. Several changes in the required texts and in the order in which the subject material was presented were made this year. Those changes proved satisfactory to both students and instructors and will be continued during the 1984-85 academic year.

E. Graduate Studies Program

During the 1983-84 academic year, eight students were enrolled in the LL.M. degree program. Five are graduates of universities in England, Germany and Belgium doing comparative research on various governance and monetary issues. Two lawyers from Nicaragua and India are examining law of the sea and humanitarian issues and a Korean lawyer is pursuing a two-year study program relating to economic regulation. All these lawyer-researchers received study fellowships from various Law School funds, national governments, and international organizations.

The Graduate Studies Committee continued its policy of limiting admission to a small number of students per year. All applicants must submit a detailed statement of career goals and intentions as well as a proposed program of coursework and research before admission. Because admission review is stringent to insure serious, goal-oriented graduate study at the Law School, the LL.M. students now in residence have far exceeded the minimum 3.0 grade average and are qualified to pursue unique job opportunities.

The admission process for 1984-85 is complete. Fourteen students with superior education and diverse backgrounds from Holland, Belgium, Germany, Austria, Korea, Taiwan, the P.R.C., Thailand, Jordan, Egypt and the U.S. have been admitted. Several are completing their doctorate level education in Europe. Over two-thirds come to the Law School with at least several years of legal experience in government, business, law school teaching or law firm practice. Nearly all are receiving funds from national governments, law firms, universities or foundation funds.

The students will undertake comparative research on the ability of national and sub-national legal systems to deal with contemporary problems associated with international relations, trade and investment at the national and international levels, national governance and private rights. L.L.M. research undertaken this year will involve a broad range of our faculty, many who are nationally recognized experts in traditional law courses such as corporations, commercial law, criminal law, and property.

In summary, the LL.M. program over the last five years has acquired international stature based on its content and has not needed to actively promote its image. The fact that most of the program's participants are funded by foreign governments, law firms, universities abroad and private foundations, illustrates the high value others place on LL.M. degree work in the Law School. From this foundation the Law School plans to actively build a nationally significant graduate studies program.

Committee member, Marital Property Act project, NCCUSL. The project was approved by NCCUSL in August, 1983. It is a uniform or model statute designed for enactment by all states including the forty-two jurisdictions that follow a common law (rather than community property) system of organizing ownership of property by married individuals. Presentation of the project, Uniform Marital Property Act (UMPA), to the House of Delegates, American Bar Association, was delayed following various discussions in and about the mid-year meeting of the ABA in Las Vegas, Nevada in February, 1984.

IV. LAW LIBRARY

A. Introduction

The Law Library has a unique relationship to the Law School not paralleled by any other type of library on this campus. Because the Library is located in the same building as the School and is administratively responsible to the Dean, there is a closer relationship between the faculty and the Law Library than exists between the University Library and the University faculty. This special relationship makes it imperative that the Law Library respond to the requests of the faculty such as personal services including circulating periodicals for the perusal of individual faculty members, which would not be possible if this relationship did not exist. The Law Library is in a sense a reserve collection as few of its materials circulate. For these reasons, the mission of the Law Library can be defined as:

1. Support the educational programs of the Law School;
2. Support faculty research;
3. Support the work of student publications including the GEORGIA LAW REVIEW and the GEORGIA JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW;
4. Support the legal profession and judiciary as a major resource center for the state.

The Library Staff during this academic year did an intensive self-study of the Library problems, trying to determine what resources were necessary to implement the solutions. This study identifies the problems which the Library will face in the future. The chief of these problems is the application of the computer to the Library's operations. The cost of the computers will have an impact on the funds available for book purchasing.

B. Collection

On May 31, 1984, the Law Library's collection consisted of 298,055 bound volumes, 4,049 reels of microfilm, or 12,147 equivalent volumes, and 197,411 microfiche or 49,353 equivalent volumes. This constitutes a total collection of 361,500 physical and equivalent volumes.

The Law Library managed to retain its ranking among law school libraries in the 22d position. This was a result of extra financial support from the University for which the Law Library is grateful. The Library Staff tried to spend this money very wisely and kept in mind the formula of lower per volume cost as a means of raising the book count. The Law Library received from the main University Library a large collection of state documents including the full collection of the New York Legislative documents beginning in 1896 to the present time. All of this material has not been processed but is being incorporated into the collection as time permits.

Among the notable purchases made with the extra money were the microfiche collection of the documents of the European Community, the Lincoln's Inn collection of Sixteenth and Seventeenth English legal manuscripts, and the collection of trials. The Law Library has tried to improve its holdings of the practice books from the surrounding states and has added a large number of titles from the offerings of the California Continuing Education of the Bar. The Library sought to add indepth coverage of its court rules. For the purpose of making the congressional documents more accessible, the Library purchased the CONGRESSIONAL INFORMATION SERVICE INDEX from 1970 to 1978. Another notable purchase was the collection of staff research and project reports purchased from the National Center for State Courts. In addition, this Law Library has been designated as a depository by the National Association of State Judicial Educators and has received a collection of approximately 1000 volumes of judicial education volumes published throughout the United States for local judges.

With all of these additional purchases and the materials which are being added, it is hoped when the statistics are reported that reflect accomplishments of this academic year, our ranking will improve.

C. Budget

For several years, the operating budget of the Law Library was very small. For example, in 1981-1982, the total amount budgeted was $6,191.00 yet the total operating expenses exceeded $37,570.00. For this reason, $22,000.00 had to be transferred in July, 1982 from the book budget to the operating expenses and the balance of this deficit was made up through transfers from salaries and other sources. At the beginning of the current academic year 1983-1984, the budget for operating expenses was increased by $30,000.00 so no money had to be removed from the equipment (book) budget. However, $5,000.00 was transferred to cover the cut in the University's budget mandated by the Governor. Through the efforts of Dean Beaird, additional funds in the amount of $30,000.00 were transferred to the equipment (book) budget. The attached charts of expenditures for books will illustrate the amounts transferred into the book budget from various sources by authorization of Dean Beaird. The Law Library has certainly improved its budget situation.

	1982-1983	1983-1984
Budget	$348,400.00	$363,999.00
Transfers	20,200.00	57,819.00
Income	849.61	2,976.00
Gifts	75.00	-
Restricted Accounts	7,964.91	1,814.00
Credit from Dealers	6,999.31	3,516.00
TOTAL	$384,488.83	$430,124.00
Binding	19,600.00	17,000.00

D. Public Service

Service to the public is very demanding and very few appreciate the difficulty in keeping up with and helping to find so many individual items or books. No check-out system is perfect for a person who checks out a book will keep it, under the assumption that no one else will be using that title because he is the only one doing research in that area. Hence no harm is done if the book is not returned within the period prescribed by the rules. Each morning, the staff of the public services goes through the circulation records to determine what books are due back and those which have been overdue long enough to send notices to the borrowers. However, before this is done, the shelves are checked to make sure that the book was not returned and circulation records not cleared through oversight. Staff time is invested in each volume which is not returned promptly. The Public Service Department is very generous about extending time limits on books which they loan but many individuals will not accept the decisions of the staff.

A number of services are rendered to the faculty. Each faculty member is given the weekly issue of the INDEX TO LEGAL PERIODICALS so that they may keep abreast of articles being published in their area. In addition, at the request of the faculty, the table of contents for approximately ten law review titles are xeroxed and circulated to them. In addition, the Library Staff prepares an ACQUISITIONS LIST which is given to every faculty member.

The Public Service Department conducts training for both students and faculty on the use of LEXIS and WESTLAW. During this academic year, approximately 125 individuals were trained on the use of LEXIS and approximately 75 on the use of WESTLAW. Obviously, not all students in the Law School are taking advantage of the opportunity to learn how to use these computers which raises the question of whether the use of the computer should become a part of the legal research course. The Library Staff's opinion is that the first year students should not be required to come into the Library to attend sessions but all training should be voluntary. The Library Staff's experience with reluctant students is that they pay little attention to this training and it would not be productive to give hands-on experience at the terminal to the entire first year class in groups of five to eight.

The normal routine followed by the staff is to give a lecture on the theory of the computerized legal research. At this point, each student is encouraged to read the appropriate pamphlets on WESTLAW or LEXIS. The next step is to set up training groups consisting of five to eight individuals which are entirely voluntary, to give hands-on experience on the terminal. When these sessions are announced, students can sign up for the session most convenient for them. These training sessions are normally conducted between 12:30 and 1:30 p.m. when there are no classes.

This year, the Law Library joined the OCLC interlibrary loan subsystem and the number of loans have increased. Through this system, a library sends its request by the computer. The terminal is checked every morning to see whether any requests have been posted and if so, the material is sent that very day. As one can observe, this is an improvement over the old interlibrary loan system where requests were sent by mail and then the items requested were returned by mail, which consumed a couple of weeks in many cases.

The Library has subscribed to the "mimeograph documents" published by the United Nations. This group of documents are the working documents which are passed out to delegates and are current and necessary for the GEORGIA JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW. The Public Service Department is responsible for organizing these documents by their document number and helping individuals to find the material through existing indexes. This is a complex task and is done with a high degree of skill and competency. The Library's objective is that the Public Service Department staff should become experts in the use of these international documents. Hopefully, money will be available to purchase the documents of lesser known international organizations, and that this library through its Public Service Division will render valuable support to the international programs of the Law School.

One of the underused services performed by the Public Service Department is the index prepared for the GEORGIA LAW REVIEW, GEORGIA JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW, and approximately five other legal periodicals published in Georgia. We hope these indexes will increase the use of these periodicals, since many of them are not indexed elsewhere.

Increasingly, the staff of the Public Service Division has taken more of the responsibility of filing loose-leaf services. Students who work at the Circulation Desk during the evenings are required to file the same services during their employment. The Serials Division is responsible for filing pocket parts and some of these services. It appears that more of the books purchased are supplemental through the loose-leaf form.

E. Computers

The computer has come to be a part of the operation of the Law Library in ways that no one could have envisioned a few years ago. The Law Library has been a subscriber to OCLC for a number of years and all our cataloging is done through that means. As reported elsewhere, during the current academic year, the interlibrary loan subsystem was put into operation whereby borrowing libraries make their requests known through the OCLC terminal. The Library Staff has studied the OCLC acquisitions subsystem but its limitation for our purpose is that it does not reduce clerical work within this Library. It is true that it will keep up with the bookkeeping and all orders but nevertheless that information has to be conveyed to other parts of the University by hard copy means. It is our thinking that no acquisitions system should be introduced until it can be integrated with the University and the information once generated can be used by any number of University agencies needing that information.

In 1979, the Library introduced LEXIS and in January, 1984 the WESTLAW went on-line. The Library now possesses both systems which are being heavily used. Certainly the use of these computers will increase and the Library Staff expects to need additional terminals for both WESTLAW and LEXIS within two years. The demand for these terminals will be increased as students and faculty realize that searches now conducted manually in areas such as taxes and labor will be more readily available through these computer banks.

During the conclusion of the last academic year, the Law Library received four IBM PC model 5150 terminals and two printers. These terminals are located in Conference Room A212. The Law School joined the Center for Computer Assisted Legal Instruction which is located at the University of Minnesota. Through this Center, the Law Library receives 19 programs, a list of which is attached. In addition to these 19 programs, the Law Library receives a copy of the program on the use of Shepard's citations from Cornell University Law Library, a training diskette for WESTLAW, and a copy of the program developed by Professor Maxine Thomas on the recording statutes. [These programs are listed later on in the report.]

These diskettes are kept at the Circulation Desk with a sign-up sheet for their use. All these diskettes are duplicated and masters retained so that the programs will not be lost. The number of copies made for each program varies as the staff anticipates its use. During this academic year, the program developed by Maxine Thomas was heavily used as were three other programs directly concerned with evidence. Very often there are written instructions which must be used with the diskettes and kept with them. Computer Assisted Instruction will increase as more programs are developed and students and faculty come to realize their importance. Dean Beaird has encouraged members of the faculty to develop such programs in the areas in which they teach and this will have an impact on the number of such programs.

The Library is studying the steps necessary to computerize its operations and during the coming academic year, it is expected that our bookkeeping service will be on-line.

The Acquisitions Staff studied the computer acquisition system used by the Main University Library but many questions were left undecided. There is no operating manual for the system and hence the staff could not familiarize themselves with the procedures. The Law Library is assured that the system can absorb the work of the Law Library but from our observations this is very doubtful.

Because the Law Library is studying the various computer soft-ware programs to apply to the administrative operation of the Library, it has been recommended that a programmer be added to the staff. During the coming academic year of 1984-1985 such a position has been funded and hopefully, availability and the application of existing programs can be better considered.

A frequently asked question among librarians is, "Will the computer replace the printed book?". It can almost be said with certainty that during the next decade the printed book will still be an important resource in a Law Library. The value of the computer lies in its ability to provide reference to sources with greater speed and for this reason, its chief value lies in its ability to locate information. In the near future, certain types of information will only be located through the computer data bank which includes such well known sources as digests, indexes, especially those to the law reviews, statistics, ephemeral data, and Shepard's. The cost of printing long articles or books off the computer certainly (at the present time) exceeds the cost of the hard copy. There is no danger that this country is entering a printing-on-demand era that has been so long predicted. The reasonable expectation is that the computer will provide a greater number of abstracts of a wide range of materials including periodicals and decisions of the courts, thus making this material more accessible. Many more decisions will be available on the computer than was economically feasible to produce in hard copy.

One of the great disadvantages of the text on the present computer programs is that the pagination is not included. The providers of legal data bases have not indicated their willingness to provide this and are certainly unwilling to go back and provide the pagination for data bases that are presently on-line arguing that the cost will be prohibitive!

What types of legal materials will be replaced by the computer? Data bases such as LEXIS and WESTLAW will replace digests and other finding aids. Some will argue that the computer programs will replace loose-leaf services which provides some savings in the acquisition of books. The computer will provide a quicker means to up-date commentaries on rapidly changing areas of the law including taxes and labor. However, basic source materials including statutes, decisions, and regulations will best be in printed form. The printed hard copy will provide a useful adjunct to the computer software program.

F. Space

Within the foreseeable future, the Law Library will have need for additional space to house the books which are currently in the collection.

Several solutions have been proposed to remedy this need and only two are viable prospects. The first and the one favored by the staff is to install compact shelving which would triple the space now available in the basement of the present Law Library. This would certainly be less expensive than any other solution that suggests itself.

The University Library has proposed an off-site storage facility which would not be as elaborate as a library frequently visited by the public. Such a building would require minimum maintenance with a controlled atmosphere. There does not appear to be a reasonable prospect of the University building such a facility and for that reason, the staff feels very strongly that the compact shelving is the only solution.

Other solutions suggested have been to put many of the books on microfilm and dispose of the hard copy. This presents a dilemma for the Librarian in that purchasing microfilm of much of the collection would take funds away from purchasing new and current legal materials. For example, it would cost over $80,000 to purchase all of the State Reports available on the second floor of the Annex. Such a purchase would only free approximately two-thirds of the present shelves in that area. This expenditure would go a long way in providing compact shelving, provided such funds are considered in lieu of funds expended on a building.

The University administration has every right to raise the question of why this need has become so imperative when the Annex has only been in operation for over two years. The answer to that observation is the fact that floor space on the third floor of the Annex which was destined to be library stacks was taken over for creation of offices for the student publications. This took away shelving for approximately 30,000 volumes. The books which were in boxes and stored in the Main University Library practically took up all the space provided by the Annex.

G. Hours

Several significant changes were made in the hours of the Law Library during this academic year. On the recommendation of the faculty, the Law Library was required to open at 7:30 a.m. during the regular academic year under the theory that students will have one hour to study in the library before their first class begins at 8:30 a.m. This has put an additional burden on the Law Librarian and the head of the Public Services, Mr. Rodriguez. Both of these individuals have had to come in early to supplement the student who arrived at 7:15 a.m. to prepare for the opening at 7:30 a.m.

The hours of the Library during the academic year were as follows:

Monday - Thursday	7:30 a.m. - 12 midnight
Friday	7:30 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Saturday	9:00 a.m. - 9 p.m.
Sunday	1:00 p.m. - 12 midnight

Since the Law School is on the semester system, this has presented some problem in coordinating the hours of the Law Library for those undergraduates who have been given assignments requiring them to use the Law Library. Some departments outside the Law School depend upon the Law Library very heavily, especially the Accounting School for the tax materials and the School of Environmental Design for environmental legal materials. The semester system ends much earlier than the quarter system. The last exam in the Law School was May 9, 1984 and in the University on June 7, 1984. From May 9th until May 20th, the hours of the Law Library were:

Monday - Friday	8 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Saturday	Closed
Sunday	Closed

During the summer school, beginning May 21, 1984. the hours of the Library were as follows:

Monday - Thursday	8 a.m. - 10 p.m.
Friday	8 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Saturday	9 a.m. - 5 p.m.
Sunday	1 p.m. - 5 p.m.

H. Visiting Librarians

During the year, at least two librarians from other institutions have visited this Law Library including Ms. Robin Mills, the newly appointed Law Librarian at Emory University on April 9, 1984. On May 7th, the Law Librarian met with Ms. Robin Mills and Ms. Leah Chanin of Mercer at Emory University to discuss cooperation among the three chief academic law libraries. The program is developed which hopefully will implement some form of cooperation among the three law libraries.

I. Staff

During the course of the year, the Law Library has had three resignations among the Library Assistants. Mrs. Susie Courtney resigned July 15, 1983 to move with her husband out-of-state. Mrs. Sylvia Faucett who has been employed in the Library since October 1979, resigned as she was expecting her second child and wanted to spend a period of time at home with her children. Mrs. Faucett was a dedicated staff member who approached her duties with care and concern for their accurate performance. Mrs. Kathleen Going who is moving away from the community resigned effective June 8, 1984. Mrs. Going was an intelligent and extremely diligent file clerk, the best this Library has ever had. She was a pleasant person to work with. All of the staff shall miss Mrs. Going and Mrs. Faucett.

Two members of the staff, Mrs. Linda Jackson and Miss Margaret Durkin, are attending the Library School at Emory University. Mrs. Jackson took leave without pay during the month of June, 1984 to attend Library School full-time. She expects to get her library degree in June, 1985. The Law Librarian would like to do everything in his power to see that a position is created so that we can keep the services of Mrs. Jackson who has been so loyal for over six years. She made it possible to have the Library open at times when the weather closed down the University because she walked from her house to the Law School.

Miss Durkin received a scholarship for the academic year 1984-1985 from the American Association of Law Libraries in the amount of $2,000.00 to help defray her expenses in library school. She does not expect to complete this program until December, 1985. Miss Durkin also received a travel grant from the Association to attend the annual convention in San Diego, California in June, 1984.

Miss Carol Ramsey and Miss Durkin attended the Conference of the Southeastern Chapter of the American Association of Law Libraries in Nashville, Tennessee, April 12-14, 1984.

The Library Staff have performed with a high degree of competency and have greeted the introduction of computer programming with anticipation. The duties of the Library Staff requires them to work a varied schedule. The professional staff works one evening a week from 6 to 10 p.m. and a Saturday and Sunday in rotation. The clerical staff works from 5 to 8 p.m. during the weekdays in rotation and a full day on Saturday or Sunday.

Their hours are full of details, checking for this title or that, seeing that each title is fully cataloged, filing cards, checking in the pocket parts, supplements, issues of periodicals, and myraids of other details. In fact, it is difficult to describe these duties and the conception abroad is that all the staff does is read. They do work diligently to provide good service!

V. RESEARCH AND SERVICE PROGRAMS

A. Continuing Legal Education

The University of Georgia School of Law continues its extensive financial and professional support of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education in Georgia, which was organized in 1965 by the Law Schools of the University of Georgia, Emory, and Mercer, and the State Bar of Georgia. Barney L. Brannen, a member of the Law School administrative faculty is Director of the Institute, supported by Lawrence Jones, who serves as the Assistant Director, six full-time and several part-time employees. Approximately 300 lawyers each year serve as writers, planners, and speakers in the continuing legal education program.

From July 1, 1983, to June 30, 1984, the Institute presented 50 programs in 38 areas of the law attended by 7783 registrants. One program was held at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education in Athens. The other seminars were conducted in cities throughout Georgia in order to make these programs available to every lawyer with a minimum of travel. During the year 11 courses were telephone conferenced to 18 locations around the state. An extensive course was conducted to train and develop trial lawyers; for eight days lawyers were trained in trial tactics. During this rigorous period, the lawyer-students were on their feet, arguing, questioning, and developing skills in actual trial work. From opening to closing statements, from direct to cross-examination, from expert witness to eye witnesses, lawyers improved their skills under scrutiny and criticism from experienced trial lawyers and faculty members. Performances of students were videotaped in order to help them to learn not only from the critiques and demonstrations by faculty members but also by reviewing their own performances visually.

The faculty of the University of Georgia School of Law continues to play a role in continuing legal education. As consultants, speakers, and writers, their contributions were indispensable in making this program a success.

Dean J. Ralph Beaird, University Professor of Law, is a member of the Institute's Board of Trustees and actively participates in Board meetings, serves on various committees, and contributes substantially to the decision-making process. He is a frequent speaker on continuing legal education programs.

Professor R. Perry Sentell, Jr., Professor of Law, spoke at the 30th Institute for City and County Attorneys held in Athens on "Recent Judicial Developments Affecting City and County Attorneys."

Professor Albert M. Pearson, III, served as a lead faculty at the Georgia Institute of Trial Advocacy presented by the Institute of Continuing Legal Education in Georgia.

During the fiscal year, the Institute in its own printing shop prepared 38 publications totaling 13,235 copies and reprinted 21 other publications totaling 3,060 copies that were in demand by Georgia lawyers. Enclosed is a list of the programs presented during the year as well as the publications and reprints.

The Institute of Continuing Judicial Education conducts a comprehensive program of basic and continuing professional training for members of the judiciary, including both judges and court support personnel. To fulfill this responsibility, the Institute conducted 21 programs attended by approximately 1729 persons in 1983-84. In addition, the Institute provided financial support for 42 judges and court support personnel to attend training programs conducted by nationally-based judicial educational institutes.

In creating and presenting its programs, the Institute cooperates with the Administrative Office of the Courts, the Council of Superior Court Judges, the State Trial Judges and Solicitors Association, the Council of Juvenile Court Judges, the Executive Probate Court Judges Council, the Superior Court Clerks Training Council, the Georgia Association of Independent Juvenile Courts, and the Magistrate Courts Training Council.

During FY 1984, funding for Institute activities came from three major sources. The University of Georgia Law School provided facilities and a portion of the personnel costs incurred by the Institute. A state appropriation to the Administrative Office of the Courts provided for operational costs, including staff supplies and overhead, travel and program design expenses, as well as reimbursement of travel, lodging and meal expenses for some of the attendees. Certification and recertification programs for Georgia Magistrates were conducted by the Institute under a contract with the Georgia Magistrate Courts Training Council.

In 1983-84, the Institute's Board of Trustees approved final adoption of a formal set of written guidelines for individual participation in nationally-based training, as well as a set of standards for design and execution of state-based programming. Additionally, the Board devised and recommended for Supreme Court consideration a workable plan for mandatory continuing judicial education of all state judges. In the event the Supreme Court elects to impose such a requirement, as it recently did for Georgia lawyers, this plan would be the one ICJE suggests the court put in place.

C. The Dean Rusk Center

The year 1983-84 was one of many activities in the Dean Rusk Center for International and Comparative Law. It was the first year of tenure of Thomas J. Schoenbaum as Executive Director.

1. The Rusk Center began a newsletter in a substantially changed format. The Newsletter consists of an essay followed by a resume of international developments affecting Georgia and a booklist of recent library acquisitions in the international area. The Newsletter comes out three times per year. This year the essays were written by Professor Dean Rusk, Professor Louis Sohn, and Professor Eugene Rostow of Yale University. These three issues of the Newsletter were sent out to about 3000 persons in Georgia and around the world.

2. The Rusk Center sponsored many international visitors for the purpose of teaching and research:

Professor Gunter Roth of Innsbruck University, Austria, did research in the area of economic law. He also gave a series of lectures on economics and law to the Law School community.

Professor Hermann Soell of Regensburg University, Austria, did research in the area of environmental law. He, too, gave lectures on German law of air pollution and on German land use planning law.

Professor Nobuo Kumamoto of Hokkaigakuen University, Sapporo, Japan, offered a minicourse on Japanese law for one credit hour to Georgia law students.

Professor Bernhard Schloh, Legal Counsellor at the Council of the European Communities, Brussels, Belgium, gave a minicourse on European law for one credit hour to the Georgia law students.

Professor Robert Grime of Southampton University, England, gave a series of lectures on marine insurance law to the Georgia students.

Professor Wei-hou Zhao of Wuhan University, People's Republic of China, in cosponsorship with the United States Committee on Legal Educational Exchange with China, did research on private international law.

3. The Rusk Center hosted many international visitors during the 1983-84 school year. On September 20, 1983, Dr. Lee, President of Busan Sanub University of Korea came to the Center to discuss exchanges and relationships between the Rusk Center and Busan Sanub University. On October 11 and 12, 1983, a delegation from the Ministry of Education from the People's Republic of China visited the Rusk Center for the purpose of discussing exchange programs. On February 28, 1984, Alan Gottlieb, Canadian Ambassador to the United States visited the Rusk Center and gave a lecture to the Law School on U.S.-Canadian relations. On February 29, 1984, Professor Nomura of the Japan Energy Center in Tokyo visited the Rusk Center to discuss relationships in the area of energy law.

4. From October 1 - October 14, 1983, the director of the Center, Dr. Thomas J. Schoenbaum, was the invited guest of the Japan External Trade Organization in Tokyo for the purpose of conducting interviews and doing research on Japanese trade law. He gave a speech at the Japanese Business Training Institute on U.S. trade law.

5. From December 5 to December 12, 1983, the director was the guest of Southampton University and delivered lectures on U.S. environmental law and U.S. maritime law.

6. From April 22 - April 25, 1984, the director visited Japan for the purpose of giving two papers on the extraterritorial impact of U.S. trade and antitrust laws. The first paper was given at a conference of the U.S.-Japanese Trade Study Group. The second paper was given at the Japan International Business Training Institute.

7. On March 29-30, 1984, the Rusk Center sponsored a major conference on how to export in the 1980s. Fifty registrants attended the conference from Georgia and the rest of the nation. The speakers and their subjects were as follows:

"The Changing International Law Framework for Exports: The GATT and Side Agreements," John H. Jackson, Hessel E. Yntema Professor of Law, University of Michigan Law School, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

"The Changing Regulatory Framework: The Export Administration Act, The Export Trading Company Act, and the Boycott," the private sector view, Arthur T. Downey, Sutherland, Asbill & Brennan, Washington, D.C.; the government view, Cecil Hunt, Assistant General Counsel for International Trade, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C.

"International Licensing," Mark Joelson, Harkrader & Ross, Washington, D.C.

"Comments on Regulation -- U.S. and International Law Session," Charles Hunnicutt, International Trade Commission, Washington, D.C.

8. The Center sponsored a survey of Recent Developments in Trade Law published by the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law.

9. The Rusk Center also consulted with various businesses in Georgia in order to give guidance on various aspects of international and comparative law. The Rusk Center is preparing possible study projects in the areas of agricultural trade law, trade and foreign policy, international banking law, and the future of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

10. The Rusk Center employed first, second, and third-year law students to perform intensive research for various projects and was assisted by student volunteers in making visitor arrangements.

VI. STUDENT AFFAIRS

A. Placement

1. Office Activity

The 1983-84 academic year of The University of Georgia School of Law's Placement Office was one of continued development and success in the areas of office services and employment of our students in the legal job market. The fall 1983 on-campus interview program was the largest ever sponsored by the Placement Office. There has been a 103% increase in the number of employers conducting fall on-campus interviews since the inception of the office in 1977. This past year there was a record high number of first and second year students reporting summer employment (42% and 64% respectively). Also, the third year class again exceeded the national average of 60% reporting permanent employment at the time of graduation.

While it is gratifying to view the Placement Office's record of success in servicing both students and employers with their employment needs, it is vital that the office continues in its efforts to improve and increase the quality and scope of services offered. In the current climate of increased competition among job applicants for positions and employer efforts to curb recruitment costs, it will be necessary for the successful placement office to provide innovative yet economical programs to ensure high visibility of their students among potential employers.

With that in mind, the Placement Office will continue to direct its energies towards expanding and strengthening its on-going placement program so as to maintain a competitive edge in the marketplace. The on-going program's three primary objectives are:

1. Increased employer representation
2. Expanded in-house services
3. Provision of office-sponsored programs

The primary objective, increased employer representation by way of on-campus interviews, recruiting conferences and job postings for students to pursue, continues to be one that this office expends a tremendous amount of time and energy towards achieving. This past fall the office had 138 employers conduct interviews at the law school, which is an 103% increase over those conducted when the office was created in 1977. The office also had 156 employers this past fall who requested packets of student resumes to be mailed to them; there were also 331 job notices posted for students to contact employers directly.

During the past fall, the office continued to participate in the Southeast Law Placement Consortium (SELPC) of which Georgia is a founding boardmember. There was a total of 92 nationwide legal employers participating in the 1983 Eighth Annual SELPC Recruiting Conference. A total of 67 Georgia law students attended the October recruiting conference, which provides exposure for our students to employers from outside the southeast region and also complements our on-campus interview program which is at least 70% Georgia employers. Of the 58 students responding to the SELPC follow-up survey, 21% received job offers and 7% accepted their SELPC job offer.

Although the fall season is by far the most hectic time for the placement office, it is important to note that only 25% of both second and third year students will have obtained employment by the start of spring semester. This 25% is generally in the top academic quartile of their class. Through the years, the placement office has been making conscious efforts to increase employer representation during the spring semester for the remaining 75% of students who are still seeking either summer or permanent employment. The employer market sought consists of small law firms, federal/state/local government agencies, businesses and judicial clerkships that do not have stringent academic hiring criteria and tend to interview applicants closer to the actual time of hiring. It is frustrating, however, that this is the very same employer market that is reluctant to identify itself for fear of being deluged by applicants, to spend money (or lose billing hour time) by having a lawyer come to campus to conduct interviews and prefers to hire through what is commonly called "the good ole boy" network.

At the start of spring semester, the office mailed out approximately 1,500 letters of invitation to this "hidden" employer market. Accompanying the letter was a profile sheet about our student body, faculty and school facilities. We were quite pleased with the results of our mailing as we had a total of 35 on-campus interviews, 64 employer requests for students resume packets and 209 job postings for students to contact employers directly during spring semester.

It is ironic that while during the spring we concentrate our efforts to assist those students who are generally in the lower academic ranks and still seeking employment, we must also begin preparations for the upcoming fall interview season (which is still a good six months away). This February we mailed out approximately 2,500 invitations to legal employers that do all of their recruiting in the fall each year.

To date, we have already scheduled approximately 130 employers to conduct interviews at the law school this fall.

Our office continues to produce a graduate directory of third year law students and to mail it to approximately 3,000 legal employers. The directory contains photos and resume synopses of third year students and is mailed to employers at the beginning of these students' senior year. For the first time since the directory has been published, second year students seeking summer clerkships will be included in this publication. Due to the strong emphasis employers place on their summer clerk programs producing associate candidates, we expect the inclusion of the second year students in the directory to greatly enhance our efforts in marketing those students among prospective employers.

Two new programs developed this year in an effort to increase employer representation were the England Summer Clerkship Program and the UGA Law School Off-Campus Washington, D.C. Interview Program.

The England Summer Clerkship Program did very well in its first year. Three first year students obtained summer clerkships with British firms. One student is working in London and the other two are in Brighton, England. With further recruiting among English firms, we hope to double the number of participating English firms for the summer of 1985.

The Washington, D.C. Off-campus Interview Program went very well with a total of twelve D.C. area employers participating and twelve Georgia law students attending. The students were responsible for their own travel and lodging expenses to D.C. Several students were invited back for second interviews at the employer's office and one of the employers was so impressed with the students he saw during this program that his law firm has decided to conduct on-campus interviews this fall. Two students accepted job offers as a result of participating in this program.

The second objective of expanded in-house services is one that this office continues putting forth a great deal of time and effort to achieve. We are very fortunate to have a large, centrally located placement resource center, which houses bulletin boards for job postings, bookshelves for employer data sheet notebooks, a variety of directories and career-related materials, two filing cabinets of employers' resumes, and three typewriters for student use in their job hunt. We have office subscriptions to two national legal periodicals and also have a two volume directory set of selected law firms in America and a directory of corporate counsel. Both sets provide a wealth of information that can only be found in these particular directories.

We continue to publish a bi-monthly Alumni Newsletter, under the capable editorship of the office's administrative secretary, and have approximately 100 subscribers to the Newsletter. The Newsletter contains job postings for employers seeking to hire a lawyer with one to six years experience and is mailed to Georgia law school alumni on the first and fifteenth of each month.

The addition of individual student message boxes to the area directly outside of the Placement Office has greatly facilitated the delivery of employment-related messages to students and has provided a better survey method which our office may use when collecting employment status information from students for our record keeping duties.

This past spring the Placement Office received approval and the necessary funding to hire a graduate student to work twenty hours a week as an administrative assistant to the Placement Director. The student will ideally start July 1st and work a twelve month contract. It is expected that with the additional help the office will be able to maintain the high quality and variety of placement programs offered.

The final objective of provision of office-sponsored programs is one that is ever-changing to suit the needs of the currently enrolled student body. Our office surveys each class at the beginning of fall and identifies from the student body response the type of programs to be scheduled during the year.

Our standard offerings are seminars on resume preparation, cover-letter writing, interview dress, interview techniques, self-directed job searches, and judicial clerkship opportunities. The office makes available video-taped practice interviews. Our office also relies on special interest student groups to sponsor career-related forums as well as the Younger Lawyers Section of the Georgia State Bar to sponsor forums.

Our office has a good working relationship with the central UGA Placement Office and coordinates programs with them when appropriate for law students.

While the above described placement office activities may reflect a basic program of any law school, the results must be seen as more than simply helping a student to acquire employment. Through contacts with law school alumni, state bar members and professional colleagues, student employment possibilities were increased, but service to the state and region were enhanced as well. Through involvement in the National Association for Law Placement (NALP), of which the placement director was recently elected to the National Advisory Board, through the Southeastern Law Placement Consortium, through committee work for the State Bar of Georgia and through personal visitation trips to cities where legal employers demonstrate an interest in our graduates, the school's representation and reputation is furthered and strengthened.

2. Recruitment and Placement Activity

During the academic year 1983-84, the Law Placement Office scheduled 173 on-campus interview sessions for prospective employers of University of Georgia law graduates. In addition, the Law Placement Office provided assistance to 104 employers who recruited off-campus, to 220 employers who requested student resume packets, to 540 employers who posted job notices for students to contact them directly, and to 648 employers who posted a job notice in the Alumni Newsletter. The total number of employer contacts for the 1983-84 academic year was 1685.

B. Student Activities and Publications

1. Georgia Law Review

The Managing and Editorial Boards of Volume 18 (1983-84) of the Georgia Law Review enjoyed another successful year. The Volume 18 Boards completed issue 17:4 left by last year's Boards and their own issues 18:1 and 18:2. Issue 18:3 is scheduled for publication during June of this year. The Boards also have initiated a new policy of long-term planning. This policy allows each Managing Board to commit the Review to publish selected articles in future volumes. The greater flexibility provided by this long-term planning will increase the Review's competitive position in the market for the highest quality articles.

b. Content of Volume 18

The dual purposes of the Review are, first, to publish timely professional articles and student notes of interest to the profession and, second, to develop the writing, research, and editorial skills of the members of the Review.

The articles and notes published in Volume 18 of the Review undoubtedly made a contribution to the law. For example, in 18:1, Professor Joseph Blackburn of the Cumberland School of Law explored the implications of recent federal cases on the use of nonrecourse financing as a tax sheltering device. An article on private RICO actions for securities fraud, written by Andrew Bridges, also appeared in 18:1. In his work, Mr. Bridges argued for a narrow construction of the RICO statute in order to restrict its use in securities litigation. The Review has already agreed to have this work republished, with appropriate acknowledgments, in the RICO Reporter and in the Corporate Practice Commentator. Professor Jeffrey Parnen of Northern Illinois University and Gigi Woodruff wrote the third article in 18:1 on the availability of attorney's fees for prevailing parties on section 1983 claims in state administrative hearings. The student works in this issue explored recent developments concerning constitutionally mandated proportionality analysis for criminal sentences and the unconstitutional use of deadly force against nonviolent fleeing felons.

The second issue of Volume 18 also contained three professional articles of national significance. Headlining the issue was an article by Sibley Lecturer Justice Hans Linde of the Oregon Supreme Court. This fascinating work explored how both modern constitutional theory and state constitutional law could be enriched by a careful consideration of each other. Our own Professors Michael Wells and Tom Eaton wrote the second article on the scope of constitutional tort. This ground-breaking article offered a convincing analysis of the purposes and limits of tort actions founded upon the federal Constitution. Finally, Steve Larrimore wrote an illuminating article on the interface between Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 23 class actions and the Anti-Injunction Act.

The student notes in Volume 18 also served the profession. The first note on the awarding of attorney's fees in environmental litigation exhaustively explored the history of such awards and suggested standards for courts to use in making such awards in the future. The second note dealt with recent developments in Georgia law concerning tort liability of third persons for the criminal acts of another. The final note in the issue offered an assessment of the use of cameras in the courtroom.

The third issue of Volume 18 will feature an article by Professor Elmer Shaefer of the College of William and Mary on base-point pricing. Also in that issue, Professor Susan Liebler of Loyola Law School will advocate the rescission of the shareholder proposal rule. Since the Review accepted her article for publication, Professor Liebler has been named to the International Trade Commission. Finally Professor Robin West of the Cleveland Marshall College of Law will posit a utilitarian justification for substantive judicial review.

c. The Symposium

The Georgia Law Review is planning in the coming year to continue its tradition of publishing quality symposia. The Review in issue 18:4 will publish a jurisprudence symposium on the duty to obey the law. The following jurists and philosophers have committed themselves to participate in the symposium: Professor Milner Ball, University of Georgia School of Law; Dr. Bernard Dauenhauer, University of Georgia (Philosophy); Professor Tom Flynn, Emory (Philosophy); Professor Carol Gould, Stevens Institute of Technology (Philosophy); Professor Kent Greenawalt, Columbia School of Law; Professor Graham Hughes, New York University School of Law; Professor William McBride, Purdue University, (Philosophy); Professor David A.J. Richards, New York University School of Law; Professor Anthony Simmons, University of Virginia (Philosophy); and Professor Richard Weisberg, Cardozo School of Law.

Professor Kent Greenawalt, the 1984 Winter Sibley Lecturer, provided the Review with the initial idea for the symposium by his Sibley Lecture on the duty to obey the law.

d. Long-Term Planning

Law reviews are unique among professional publications. They alone are managed by new staff every year. As a result, discontinuity is a major problem for reviews all across the nation. This year the Boards of Volume 18 have implemented policies designed to foster continuity among managing boards. For example, the Volume 18 Managing Board this year broke with the past and has committed the Review to selected articles by outstanding experts in their fields. The Managing Board has committed the Review to publish in Volume 19:1 an article by Professor Richard

Stewart of Harvard University. This type of long-range planning will increase the competitiveness of the Review in the market for the highest quality goods.

e. Conclusion

No other student organization has a greater effect on the national reputation of the law school than the Review. The Review reflects the quality of the school when it is mailed to every federal judge and almost every law school and law library in the country. Important articles by well-known academics published in the Review evidence the quality of our school. In fact, the quality of a school's law review figures prominently in Professor Van Alstyne's method of rating law schools. This year Volume 18 of the Georgia Law Review fulfilled its obligation to the law school by publishing superior articles and notes and its obligation to the student members by involving them in the preparation of that work. The University of Georgia School of Law will reap the benefits of the hard work of the Volume 18 Boards now and in the future. These issues stand preserved as a testimony to this law school, its faculty, and students.

2. Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law

The 1983-84 Managing and Editorial Boards of Volume 14 of the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law had a productive and successful year. The Volume 14 Boards completed issues 13:Supplement, 13:2, and 13:3 left by last year's Boards. Issues 14:1, 14:2, and 14:3 are in various stages of the publication process. The diligent efforts of the Volume 14 Boards this year have placed the Georgia Journal closer to its publication schedule, with the anticipated publication of Issue 14:3 in early fall, 1984.

b. Highlights of Volumes 13 and 14

The Georgia Journal has established itself as a leading legal periodical serving the international legal community in over forty countries worldwide. Its nearly 800 subscribers include law firms, corporations, government agencies, individual practitioners, universities, and law libraries. The focus of the publication is to provide its readers with a balance of articles of current interest in the fields of international and comparative law. The Georgia Journal is designed to be of value to the academician as well as to the practitioner by analyzing developments in both domestic and foreign law. The resources at its disposal include: a substantial collection of foreign law materials occupying one floor of the law library annex; another floor of international legal materials and United Nations documents; the Dean Rusk Center for International and Comparative Law; a renowned international law faculty; and excellent facilities including word processing capabilities.

The work of the Volume 14 Boards has developed the Georgia Journal's reputation for excellence as an international publication. The Volume 14 Boards published the proceedings of the 1982 Special Law Professor Workshop on "Coping with Internal Conflicts: Dilemmas in International Law" in honor of Dean Rusk in issue 13:Supplement. The International Law Section of the American Bar Association ordered and distributed approximately 500 copies of the Volume 13:Supplement issue. The Volume 14 Boards also published issues 13:2 and 13:3 this year. A student note from issue 13:2 on United States bilateral investment treaties has been selected for inclusion in a ten-volume work entitled "Modern Legal Systems Cyclopedia" edited by Professor Kenneth R. Redden of the University of Virginia School of Law. In addition to having published issues 13:2 and 13:3, the Volume 14 Boards have selected, spaced and edited issues 14:1 and 14:2. Issue 14:1 contains a new feature which will be updated annually: A Survey of Developments in Private International Trade Law. This new catalogue of trade law developments is aimed primarily at trade law practitioners and is intended to increase the Georgia Journal's subscription base. Issue 14:3 will contain articles selected from a conference held in March 1984 by the Dean Rusk Center entitled "Exporting in the 80's: The New Economic Challenge." The professional contributions in issue 14:3 may include articles by John H. Jackson, the Hessel E. Yntema Professor of Law, University of Michigan Law School, and Dr. Mitsuo Matsushita, Professor of Law, Tokyo University, Tokyo, Japan. The student contributions in issue 14:3 deal specifically with international trade regulation and exporting problems.

In addition to these publication accomplishments, the Georgia Journal sent four members of the Volume 15 Managing Board to the Conference of International Law Journals held in Washington, D.C. in April 1984. The consistent involvement of the Georgia Journal Boards in this annual Conference helps to ensure the Journal's commitment to quality publication in the field of international law.

3. The Moot Court Program

Each year the American Bar Association sponsors the National Appellate Advocacy Competition. Regional rounds are held in the spring semester to choose the national finalists, who compete during the annual meeting of the A.B.A. In 1984, the Law School entered two teams in the regional competition, which was held here in Athens and included sixteen teams from across the Southeast.

The Georgia team of Nancy Vorpe and Buddy Hendrick defeated Nova and Stetson in the preliminary rounds, emerging as the top-seeded team going into the quarterfinals. Vorpe and Hendrick then defeated another Nova team and a team from the University of Florida to reach the final round. The other Georgia team of Robert Paige and Jim Kelly reached the final round as well, defeating Mercer, Florida State, and Emory after losing to the same Emory team in the first preliminary round.

The final round took place in the Hatton Lovejoy Courtroom and was heard by Judges James Hill and Thomas Clark of the United States Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit and former Georgia Court of Appeals Judge Norman Underwood. In the final round, the team of Paige and Kelly defeated the team of Vorpe and Hendrick. Both Georgia teams will travel to Chicago in August to represent this region in the national finals of the competition. The teams were coached by Jim Cook.

For the second year in a row, the University of Georgia won the Intrastate Moot Court Competition sponsored by the Younger Lawyers Section of the State Bar of Georgia. The team of Ginny Looney, Bob Hunter, and Judy Aust compiled a perfect 5-0 record and defeated an Emory team in the final round. The team also took the award for Best Brief. The second-ranking brief in the competition was the one submitted by the other Georgia team -- Chris Welton, Dan Mohan, and Bill Rogers. The team of Welton, Mohan, and Rogers finished third in the overall competition, compiling a 2-2 record. The teams were coached by Jeff Sharp and Care Hoye.

In the regional competition held this year at Tulane, our Jessup International Moot Court Team finished with a 3-1 record, defeating Emory, Miami, and South Carolina. The team's loss was to Mercer. The Mercer team reached the final round and lost to Tulane. Tulane won best team, best brief, and best oralist. The members of the Jessup Team were Buddy Allen, Sydney Cleland, Kerry Tassopoulos, Max Wood, and brief writer Mary Craft. Eddie Staples coached the team.

The regional rounds of the National Moot Court Competition were held this year in Tampa. For the first time in five years, Georgia did not reach the final round of the regionals. The team of Kim Logue, Mike Weathersby, and Bob Woodland compiled a 2-2 record. In the two preliminary rounds, the team defeated Nova and lost to Stetson. Georgia then defeated Stetson in the quarterfinal round and lost to Florida in the semifinals.

4. Association of Trial Lawyers of America (ATLA)

ATLA has just completed its second year as a student organization of the law school. ATLA's first year was very successful, as shown by the number of students that participated in ATLA functions. This second year has been marked by even greater achievements than the first year.

Last fall, ATLA held its second annual Intrascchool Mock Trial Competition. In the first round of the competition, 32 two-person teams competed, doubling the size of the competition over the previous year. Each trial gives the team members the opportunity to make an opening statement, conduct direct and cross-examination and make a closing argument. The competition is open to the entire law school. The teams of Kevin Silvey/Keith Reisman and Andy Davis/Betsy Bloom reached the final round, which was judged by Federal District Judge Dudley Bowen. Judge Bowen awarded Kevin Silvey and Keith Reisman first place in the 1983-84 ATLA Intrascchool Mock Trial Competition.

In addition to sponsoring the trial competition, ATLA also provides seminars on legal topics given by practicing attorneys. Two seminars were conducted this year. In the fall semester, Col. Peckham, chief counsel of the Clarke County Legal Aid and Defender Society, conducted a seminar on trial techniques. The major purpose of this seminar was to instruct students on how to prepare and organize a case for trial.

During the winter semester, Michael Bowers, the Attorney General of the State of Georgia, spoke to ATLA. Mr. Bower's seminar covered the function and responsibilities of the Law Department of the State of Georgia. In addition, he spoke on current legal issues including the parole grid system and capital punishment.

ATLA sponsors trial teams that compete within the state and the region. These teams include the Intrastate Mock Trial teams, the ATLA National Mock Trial team and the ABA National Mock Trial teams.

The two Intrastate Mock Trial teams competed against teams from Mercer and Emory. Jim Budd and David Blevins were members of one team. Wayne Bond, Randy Coggins and Kevin Silvey were members of the other. Each team defeated its opponents from the other schools and reached the final round. The team of Jim Budd and David Blevins took first place, and Randy Coggins was named "Best Advocate." Tim Floyd of the Clarke County Legal Aid and Defender Society coached the intrastate teams. In the five years that the Intrastate Mock Trial Competition has been in existence, the University of Georgia has placed first four times and second once.

The ATLA National Mock Trial team also had a successful year. The members of the team were Cary Ichter and Betsy Bloom. This team advanced to the semi-final round of the regional competition. In addition, the ATLA National team won the award for the best brief in the region for the second straight year. Professor Thomas Eaton coached the ATLA National Mock Trial teams.

ATLA also sponsors the ABA National Mock Trial teams. Mike Flinn, Randy Coggins and Julia Kerestine were members of one team. Care Hoyè, Wayne Bond and Kevin Silvey composed the other team. The team of Hoyè, Bond, and Silvey advanced to the quarter-finals of the regional competition. Tom Cook, the Chief Assistant District Attorney for Clarke County, coached the ABA National teams.

This year ATLA National sponsored an Environmental Law Essay Competition. Dorinda Dallmeyer was this year's winner. Ms. Dallmeyer received $100 for placing first within the law school. Her essay will now go to the national competition.

5. Honor Court

This year a committee composed of faculty and students undertook a review of the Honor Court's operating procedures and effectiveness. The Committee, chaired by Professor Pearson, has not recommended any changes in the Honor System. As a result of the committee's work, the Honor Court decided to take steps to ensure that its files would be more detailed so that faculty members would be able to gauge more accurately the nature and quality of honor proceedings.

Ten allegations of infractions were reported by law students to the Honor Court this year; one case was recommended for prosecution. That case hearing resulted in a finding of "innocent" by the Court. The Court felt that the increase in reported allegations resulted from increased student awareness of the Honor Court and Honor Code, a continuing goal of the Court.

6. Black Law Students Association

Open to individuals in law school who wish to join, BLSA sponsors recruiting as well as social service projects that affect minority students and civil rights causes. In the past such projects have included detailed exploration and investigation of legal cases that specifically require the interpretation of civil rights laws.

This year BLSA participated in a drive to register voters, established a permanent Emergency-in-Aid Program to provide financial assistance to BLSA members, and initiated publication of an alumni newsletter mailed to all past BLSA members. A BLSA Resume Directory, which includes the resumes of all BLSA members, was mailed to various law firms, bar associations and legal organizations throughout the country. This publication directly resulted in a permanent legal position for one of the BLSA members included in the directory.

BLSA continues to work closely with the Admissions Office to develop an extensive recruiting plan for black law students. Assistance from the law school has made it possible for BLSA to invite guest speakers to the University. Georgia BLSA was represented this past year on the National and Southern Regional Executive Boards of BLSA and in the Frederick Douglass Moot Court Competition. BLSA also participated in the Regional Conference in Atlanta, Georgia, the Regional Convention in New Orleans, Louisiana, and the National Convention in St. Louis, Missouri.

7. Women Law Students Association

A portrait of the Law School's first woman graduate, Edith House, now hangs in the third-floor portrait gallery. WLSA commissioned the portrait this year and unveiled it in conjunction with the second annual Edith House Lecture. This year's lecturer was Judge Gladys Kessler. Each year WLSA cosponsors an award for the outstanding female graduate. The recipient this year was Dorinda Dallmeyer.

8. Environmental Law Association

The Environmental Law Association (ELA) enjoyed a particularly active and successful year in 1983-84. In addition to its hosting of current relevant legal events and sponsorship of speakers on environmental topics, ELA also hosted the popular annual Clean Air Biathalon, sent students to the ALI-ABA/ELA Environmental Law Course in Washington, D.C., and organized and operated the first annual Environmental Moot Court Competition. Officers for 1983-84 were: Melissa Heath, third-year co-chairperson; Jay Palmer, second-year co-chairman; and Amy Gellins, Treasurer. ELA had a membership of about thirty students, although the programs this year reached more students and should encourage increased membership next year.

a. Speakers:

ELA sponsors speakers at lunchtime and in late afternoon or evening. These included:

Bob Kerr: Executive Director of the Georgia Conservancy.

Ogden Doremus: Noted pioneering Georgia Environmental attorney from Metter.

Professor Hermann Soell: A professor visiting from Regensburg, West Germany, who compared German and U.S. land use systems.

Pete Conroy: Ornithologist, accompanied by a live hawk.

Laurie Fowler and Brian Spears: Atlanta environmental lawyers who brought a viodecassette on their defense of nuclear protesters at the Savannah River Plant.

Admiral La Rocque: Retired U.S. Navy rear admiral and nationally-recognized advocate of nuclear arms control.

ELA was also privileged to sponsor the on-campus address by Democratic Presidential candidate Senator Gary Hart.

Most of the speakers obtained by ELA came with little or no remuneration for their time and effort. ELA has been fortunate to attract such speakers to the law school, and thereby serves an important educational role at Georgia.

b. Biathalon

The third Annual Clean Air Biathalon was a clear success, because of the efforts of organizer Libbi Black, a third-year ELA member. Held on a loop from the UGA Botanical Gardens, the race consists of 6.2 miles on foot followed by 20.4 miles on bicycles. This year's Biathalon attracted about 180 entrants in five categories as well as many spectators. All entrants received t-shirts, and trophies were awarded. This program reaches out into the community and promotes a healthful and fun activity. It also raises money, through entry fees, for an environmental charity. This year's race raised $1500 for the Legal Environmental Assistance Foundation (LEAF), a non-profit public interest law firm founded in 1983 by two UGA law school graduates, Laurie Fowler and Vicki Bremen.

c. Environmental Moot Court Competition

This new competition was well-received by students. The problem selected, environmental challenges to U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency spraying of paraquat in National Forests to eradicate marijuana, was timely and interesting. Twenty-one students entered the competition, researching difficult environmental issues (including the Environmental Impact Statement requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act) and then competing in oral argument. Many students -- some experienced in environmental studies and some experienced in moot court -- helped judge the preliminary rounds. The competition culminated in finals before a distinguished panel of two environmental law professors and three practicing environmental attorneys.

This competition was successful in several respects. It gave students experience in oral advocacy. It exposed not only participants but also student judges and on-lookers to contemporary environmental issues. Additionally, preparation for the competition brought ELA into contact with parallel student organizations at Harvard, Stanford, and Mercer law schools. The competition will continue as an annual event.

d. ALI-ABA/ELI Environmental Law Course

Through financial assistance from the administration, ELA was able to send two students to this annual conference, held in February 1984 in Washington D.C. Not only does the course, run by ALI-ABA and the Environmental Law Institute, offer the students a chance to learn about recent developments in this area of the law, it also enables them to meet practitioners in the field -- on all sides of the issues. Through these conferences ELA has built a network of contacts, enhancing the visibility of the law school in this area and increasing job prospects for UGA students.

e. Public Interest Superfund

ELA as a founding organization of this non-profit charitable fund, continues to make a substantial annual donation to the Superfund ($100 in 1983). Superfund provides a stipend to enable selected students to work in public interest law jobs over the summer. The 1983 recipient, Libbi Black, spent the summer working for the Sierra Club Legal Defense Fund in San Francisco. All donations to Superfund are tax-deductible.

f. Conclusion

ELA continues to serve an ever-expanding and important role in environmental education at UGA law school. In addition, ELA has pot-luck suppers and camping trips to the mountains and coast. Through its successful programs, ELA seeks to increase environmental awareness in the law school community and to promote environmental law as a vital and rewarding career option.

9. Christian Legal Society

The Christian Legal Society (CLS) is a national organization of Christian attorneys, judges and law students. The University of Georgia chapter offers law students a forum for discussing the law from a Christian perspective and an opportunity for Christian fellowship and service. In addition to regular weekly meetings which include Bible study prayer and fellowship, the CLS sponsors speakers and social activities, and provides free exam week coffee and doughnuts to the law student body. The CLS consisted of approximately thirty members during the 1983-84 school year -- more than half of the membership being first-year students.

Speakers who addressed CLS this year included Georgia Law School Alumnus Bruce Hedrick (now working with Campus Crusade for Christ); Georgia Law School Professor Larry Blount; Dr. Stewart Sims; Dr. Tom Waddell; local attorney and University instructor J. Owens Smith (also faculty advisor for CLS); Mr. John Deans; Dr. Paige Patterson; Georgia law alumnus Dave Johnson; Atlanta attorney and executive director of the Georgia Rutherford Institute, Rick Summers; Atlanta attorney and president of the Georgia Christian Conciliation Service, John Tucker; Atlanta attorney and executive director of the Georgia Christian Conciliation Service, David Montgomery; Atlanta attorney and candidate for the U.S. Congress, Pat Swindall; and many of our own members. The CLS calendar also included several group dinners at local restaurants and two picnics. Officers for 1983-84 were David Blevins and John Lewis; officers for 1984-85 are Eddie Fleming and Bill Ellard.

VII. SPECIAL EVENTS

A. The John A. Sibley Lecture Series

1. Justice Hans A. Linde of the Supreme Court of Oregon was the Sibley Lecturer for the fall semester at the School of Law. His lecture, presented October 18, was entitled, "Constitutional Law Theory and the State Courts." He talked about the role of state courts in the development of constitutional doctrine.

The author of 11 law review articles and book reviews, Justice Linde is a former law teacher. His home teaching base was The University of Oregon, with visiting appointments at Berkeley, Stanford, and UCLA. He held Fulbright Lectureships at Freiburg and Hamburg Universities, West Germany.

He earned his law degree from the University of California where he was Editor-in-Chief of the California Law Review. Upon graduation in 1950, he served as law clerk to the late United States Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

2. R. Kent Greenawalt, who is considered to be one of the nation's leading authorities on jurisprudence, delivered the spring Sibley Lecture on March 28. Greenawalt is the Cardozo Professor of Jurisprudence at Columbia University. His lecture topic was entitled, "Promise, Benefit and Need - Ties that Bind Us to the Law." He outlined several sources of obligation to obey the law and evaluated their application to various theories of compliance.

Greenawalt's books include Discrimination and Reverse Discrimination and The Sectarian College and the Public Purse. He has also published 44 articles on the subject of conscientious objection, judicial activism, civil disobedience and the legal protection of privacy.

He earned his law degree from Columbia, where he was editor-in-chief of the Columbia Law Review. Greenawalt clerked for U.S. Supreme Court Justice John M. Harlan, and he earned a degree in political philosophy at New College, Oxford, England.

B. Edith House Lecture

Gladys Kessler, associate judge of the Superior Court of the District of Columbia, presented the second annual Edith House Lecture at the Law School on April 3. Judge Kessler, who is presiding judge in the Superior Court's Family Division, addressed the topic, "The Crisis in Child Support." She provided statistical data which conveyed the extent of the non-support program and outlined several approaches to dealing with it, including judicial and administrative remedies.

Before becoming a judge, Kessler worked eight years as a partner in a Washington, D.C. public interest law firm. She was the founding president of the Women's Legal Defense Fund, and is a former president of the National Association of Women Judges. She earned her law degree at Harvard, and has taught at George Washington University Law School.

C. Law Day

Sam Nunn, United States Senator from Georgia, was the keynote speaker for Law Day, 1984. The theme of his message was the urgent need to contain the spread of violence and terrorism throughout the world, and that it should be done by lawful means. He discussed the Senate's reaction to the Reagan Administration's withdrawal from the jurisdiction of the World Court following the mining of harbors in Nicaragua.

Nunn's address was made at an 11:00 a.m. outdoor ceremony on April 14. Earlier in the day, the Law School received the portrait of Georgia House Speaker Thomas Murphy. Murphy, a 1949 law graduate, serves on the Board of Visitors of the Law School. The portrait was a gift to the School from a committee of friends headed by Earl T. Leonard, Jr., Senior Vice President of the Coca-Cola Company and president of the University of Georgia Alumni Society. Bob Argo, representative to the Georgia General Assembly from the 63rd (Athens) district, gave remarks on the career accomplishments of Speaker Murphy at the ceremony. Dr. John Skandalakis, chairman of the University System of Georgia, unveiled the portrait.

At the Law School Association luncheon following the outdoor ceremonies, Distinguished Service Scrolls were presented to three persons: G. Robert Reinhardt of Tifton, Robert M. Heard of Elberton, and Professor Emeritus Sigmund A. Cohn of Athens.

The Law Day Banquet was held Friday April 13 at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education. The Georgia Law Review staff and the Moot Court Board sponsored the event and invited Judge Pasco Bowman to be the banquet speaker. Bowman serves on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eighth District in Kansas City, Missouri. He was a faculty member at the Georgia Law School in the late 1960's before becoming dean at Wake Forest Law School and at the University of Missouri-Kansas City Law School.

The Georgia Journal and the Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law jointly held a banquet on the Thursday before Law Day weekend. Dr. Samuel Asante, Legal Counsel for the United Nations Center on Transnational Corporations, was the speaker.

The Law School's chapter of Black Law Students Association held its banquet on the Saturday evening of Law Day. The speaker was Judge Romae Powell, Juvenile Court of Fulton County.

The Student Bar Association hosted a reception preceding the Friday night banquet at the Taylor-Grady House in Athens. The Moot Court Board held the final round of the Talmadge and Russell Competitions on Friday, April 13.

D. Commencement Activities

The School of Law awarded degrees to 1983 graduates May 12 in the first actual commencement ceremony the school has conducted.

John C. Godbold, chief judge of the U.S. Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals, spoke at the 11 a.m. ceremony on the lawn of the quadrangle of the North Campus.

Since 1974, the law school has held a diploma ceremony in June following the university's commencement. Graduates received a symbolic diploma at the ceremony.

This year, however, university President Fred C. Davison actually conferred the J.D. degrees on the graduates. Gary Blasingame, treasurer of the Law School Association, welcomed the graduates into the school's alumni organization.

The ceremony was held in May as a part of the new semester system. The university's regular commencement, under the quarter system, was held June 9.

Fred A. Bading, president of the law school senior class, presided at the ceremony. Honorary marshalls, chosen by the seniors from the faculty, were Verner F. Chaffin and John C. O'Byrne.

The graduating class and their families were honored at a May 11 reception in the Taylor-Grady House in Athens sponsored by the Law School Alumni Association.

E. Joint Meeting Weekend

The Law School hosted the State Bar of Georgia Board of Governors on November 11 and 12. On the same weekend, the School's two advisory groups, the Board of Visitors and the Law School Alumni Association Council, held business meetings. Other highlights of the Auburn football weekend for the Law School included the induction ceremony for the Order of the Coif, a banquet with a musical performance by The University of Georgia Women's Glee Club, and a pre-game luncheon in the Law School rotunda attended by 275 people.

In addition, the Law School administrative staff assisted President Fred Davison's office in preparing the dedication of the Harmon W. Caldwell Hall on Saturday, November 12. The ceremony was the formal dedication of the new classroom building adjacent to the Law School which houses the offices of the School of Environmental Design and classrooms predominately devoted to College of Business Administration use. The building was named for Caldwell, a former dean of the Georgia Law School who served as chancellor of the University System of Georgia from 1948 to 1964.

F. Visitors to the Law School

1. A delegation from the Peoples' Republic of China visited the campus in October as part of a tour of selected U.S. law schools. The three visitors, accompanied by an interpreter, were officials or law teachers representing the Chinese Ministry of Education. Their purpose in visiting the Law School was to exchange ideas on teaching methods and materials, library management and methods of facilitating research, and curriculum development.

The delegation attended classes in criminal procedure, criminal law and import-export law. They had dinner and lunch with faculty members who teach in the same fields. Their visit included a tour of the facilities, particularly the law library.

The delegation presented to Dean Beaird for the library a four-volume set of books which is the entire Criminal Code of China. They also gave an embroidered silk table cover. The Law School gave the ministry a copy of Professor Paul Kurtz' book on criminal law and a set of UGA ties and scarves for the visitors.

The University of Georgia was selected to receive Ministry of Education officials along with the law schools of Stanford, California at Berkeley, UCLA, Minnesota, Michigan, Yale, Kansas, Duke, Virginia, Pennsylvania and Columbia.

2. In addition to the visiting scholars which the Rusk Center sponsored, these visitors were invited to the campus to give class lectures and visit informally with faculty and students during the past year:

The general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, William A. Lubbers, was a guest speaker at the School on November 8. His topic was current labor issues facing the NLRB.

The Canadian Ambassador to the United States, Alan Gottlieb, visited February 24.

Professor Bart De Schutter of the Free University of Brussels (VUB) spoke on "Computer Crime in the International Setting" on February 3.

Robert Proctor and Russell Grove of the Atlanta firm of Hansell and Post conducted a half-day Saturday seminar in January on sales contracts and conveyancing in commercial real estate.

On October 26 and 27, the Law School hosted 60 federal and state superior court judges who were in Athens for a seminar conducted by the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education.

VIII. ALUMNI RELATIONS

A. The Law School Association

1. The Law School Association Council held its annual fall meeting Saturday, November 12. President Thomas J. Dillon was chairman for the meeting.

2. The Law School Association's Law Day Luncheon was held April 14 at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education. A brief meeting of the council was held on the morning of the Law Day Exercises. The 1984-85 budget for the Law School Fund was approved for recommendation to the entire Association.

3. The Law School Association scheduled its two annual breakfasts in conjunction with the State Bar of Georgia meetings. One was held January 13 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel. Jule W. Felton, Jr., president-elect for 1983-84, was installed as president and took office at the annual meeting held June 8 in Savannah. Other officers elected were: Marion Pope, president-elect; Verner Chaffin, secretary and Gary Blasingame, treasurer.

4. An alumni regional meeting was held in Savannah on May 29. It was hosted by Frank W. Seiler and the law firm of Bouhan, Williams and Levy. The Florida and Washington, D.C. chapters of the Law School Association held their annual meetings in June and December. John Robinson of Tampa was elected president of the Florida chapter at a reception held June 22 at Innisbrook (Tarpon Springs), Florida. The reception was jointly held with the law alumni of Emory and Mercer Law Schools.

The Washington, D.C. chapter of the Law School Association has taken an active role in sponsoring alumni programs since it was formally chartered in April, 1983.

Under the leadership of John L. Carr, Jr., Class of 1978, who serves as president, and Pamela Hill Anderson, Class of 1981, who serves as secretary-treasurer, the chapter has held numerous meetings with featured speakers.

In July, 1983, the chapter held a luncheon in the Mansfield Room of the U.S. Capitol and had Senator Sam Nunn as special guest. In November, the groups met for lunch at Blackie's and had former presidential press secretary Jody Powell as speaker. In December, a reception was held at the Sheraton-Carlton at which Dean Ralph Beaird gave a talk on the state of the Law School. In March, the chapter held a luncheon meeting at Blackie's and heard remarks by FTC Chairman James C. Miller III (a UGA undergraduate). In May, the group scheduled a luncheon and in June it sponsored a picnic for the families at Fort Hunt Park.

The Law School Association has been holding annual alumni receptions in the D.C. area since 1976, but the formal establishment of the chapter took place last year.

The regional law alumni reception activity has been somewhat curtailed this year in order to give added emphasis to the series of Bicentennial Fund dinners held throughout the state and region. These events, held in cities throughout Georgia and the East Coast, are a part of the major gifts phase ($10,000 to $99,000) of the University of Georgia's capital gifts campaign. The Law School has encouraged its graduates to participate in these regional events and to earmark their gifts for the School. The Law School has been represented at virtually all of the Bicentennial Fund kick-offs.

In February, the Law School Association hosted a luncheon for members of the General Assembly who are Georgia law graduates. Invited were alumni who serve in all three branches of state government.

5. The Law School Alumni Office assisted planning groups in the arrangements for a class reunion during the Law Day weekend. The Classes of 1953, 1954 and 1955 held its reunion April 14 at the Athens Country Club. Sam Zusmann, Tom Dillon and Jule Felton were coordinators for the reunion.

B. Board of Visitors

The Law School Board of Visitors held quarterly meetings on November 11, 1983 and April 13, 1984. The winter meeting was held just before the luncheon with Georgia legislators in February. Sam Zusmann of Atlanta was elected to the chairmanship of the Board for 1984. New members joining the Board of Visitors at its winter meeting were Alexander Smith of Atlanta, Judge Aaron Cohn of Columbus and Frank W. Seiler of Savannah.

C. Law School Fund Campaign

The Law School Fund Campaign for 1983-84 was initiated in November with the mailing of a printed flyer to all law graduates which featured a list of specific projects within the Law School Fund to which donors could earmark their gifts.

A separate Law School telethon was not held this year. Instead, effort was concentrated on following up the Bicentennial Fund dinners with correspondence to prospective Presidents Club members. Law graduates attended these dinners in the cities of Columbus, LaGrange, Americus, Savannah, Marietta, Augusta, Athens, Brunswick, and Atlanta during April and May, 1984. They were shown a film about The University of Georgia and its program of instruction, research and service. Perk Robins, UGA Vice President for Development and University Relations, explained the University's capital funding needs and asked donors to join the Presidents Club level of giving at the dinners. Dean Ralph Beaird was present at most of the fund-raisers to discuss specific Law School funding projects.

From July 1, 1983 to June 30, 1984, the Law School Fund account received $116,553 given by approximately 767 donors.

D. Capital Gifts Campaign

From July 1, 1983 through June 30, 1984, approximately $656,158 was pledged or given to the Law School endowment through capital gifts. This was in addition to the $116,553 in annual giving. Descriptions of some of these gifts follows:

1. John Byrd Martin Estate

After two years in the process of liquidating, the assets of the estate of John B. Martin were transferred to the School of Law beginning in November, 1983. The cash value of the gift as of June 30 is approximately $411,340. Martin, a 1936 graduate of the Law School, died December 3, 1981 in Washington, D.C. In his will, he provided that his estate, estimated to be $1.1 million, would be given to the School of Law for the purpose of establishing a chaired professorship. The bulk of the estate consisted of rental property in the District of Columbia.

Attorneys from two law firms in the Washington area worked closely with Dean Ralph Beaird in the long and tedious process of settling rental contracts, liens, second mortgages, and other legal aspects before the nine pieces of property could be sold. The John Byrd Martin Chair will be filled beginning in 1984-85 with the appointment of Ronald Carlson, who will teach evidence and trial procedure.

2. Harmon W. Caldwell Chair

An endowment for the Caldwell Chair in Constitutional Law was formally established last year. At that time, the Thomas and Irene Kirbo Charitable Trust made a gift of $10,000. In April, 1984, the Kirbo Trust made an additional gift of $50,000. Charles Kirbo and Bruce Kirbo, trustees, are both graduates of the Georgia Law School.

3. Joseph H. Lumpkin House Restoration

The Law School, in cooperation with the Joseph Henry Lumpkin Foundation, has undertaken fund-raising efforts for the restoration of the interior of the Lumpkin House. It is anticipated that the antebellum structure, home of Georgia's first Chief Justice, will serve as an educational and community center which will enhance Law School programs.

The restoration of the exterior of the mansion, which is approximately 130 years old, was completed two years ago. The efforts to finance the interior, which is in great need of new plumbing, electrical and heating/air conditioning equipment, were helped with a $27,000 grant awarded under a federal jobs creation bill in October. The grant requires matching private funds.

Major gifts for the restoration project have been given by Donald Leeburn and Frank Lumpkin of Columbus, Mrs. Lamar Fearing of Macon, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Green of Athens, Field Yow of Augusta, Mary Jane Crayton of LaGrange and Render Hill of Greenville.

The descendants of the two other original members of the first Georgia Supreme Court, Eugenius Nisbit and Hiram Warner, are being contacted to help provide restoration funding. Plans call for rooms in the Lumpkin House to be designated as memorials in honor of Nisbet and Warner. Construction began on the interior in early February. If the funds hold out, the structure will hopefully be reopened in the fall of 1984.

4. Southeastern Bankruptcy Institute

The Southeastern Bankruptcy Institute made an additional gift of $10,000 to the scholarship fund it established last year.

5. R.E. Dorough Scholarship Fund

Trust officers of the R.E. Dorough Scholarship Fund of Atlanta awarded two scholarships at the School of Law in January.

The $1,000 grants will go to a male and female student who are native Georgians and residents of the Atlanta metro area. The fund was established through the estate of Robert E. (Red) Dorough, an Atlanta real estate developer and civic leader.

6. General Practice and Trial Section Scholarship

The General Practice and Trial Section of the State Bar of Georgia has awarded to the School of Law a scholarship grant, subject to renewal each year.

The grant is used by the School to assist a student or students who intend to practice in the State of Georgia and who demonstrate financial need.

In 1983-84, the General Practice Section grant was $1,000. The Section gave $1,500 for its 1984-85 grant. The scholarship check was presented at the annual meeting of the State Bar in June.

7. Presidents Club

As of June 30, 1984, the Presidents Club level of giving in The University of Georgia Foundation listed 95 alumni and friends of the Law School who have earmarked all or a part of their $10,000 or more commitment for Law School programs. This figure does not include graduates of the Law School who gave their gifts to other units of the University.

IX. PHYSICAL PLANT

A. Current Structures

In addition to the main law building complex, the School of Law utilized several other structures in 1982-83:

1. Law Library Annex, north campus quadrangle.
2. Waddel Hall, north campus quadrangle - home of the Dean Rusk Center for International and Comparative Law.
3. Athens Legal Aid and Defender Society - office in Saye Building on North Lumpkin Street.
4. Prosecutorial Clinic - housed in the Office of the District Attorney on Hancock Street.

B. Repairs and Renovations

During 1983-84, the Law School installed high quality, attractive message boxes for the entire student body in the lounge area outside the Placement Resources Center on the first floor. In the same lounge area, the Law School made new bulletin boards available for use by student organizations. Plans are now underway for substantial improvements in student lounge and office areas, including new furnishings for the main student lounge, area rugs for the lounge outside the Placement Resources Center, new wall coverings for the entire first-floor student area, and redecoration of various student office spaces.

Current plans also call for a new faculty lounge in what is now the law library smoking room. An alcove in the Annex will be converted into a smoking room for law library users.
