Former President Jimmy Carter was the keynote speaker at the Law School's annual observance of Law Day on May 1. He spoke to an outdoor audience of approximately 1,100 people from the brick pavilion of the newly-completed Presidents Club garden near the Law Building.

President Carter's address focused on his association with four world leaders whom he came to know as president: Leonid Brezhnev, Anwar Sadat, Omar Torrijos and Deng Xiaoping. He then turned from the lecture to a "town meeting" format in which he accepted questions from the audience. He commented on ways to reduce the interest rates and inflation; the loss of momentum reached by the Camp David accords between Israel and Egypt, the need to enact a nuclear arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union, and the U.S. involvement in negotiating the dispute between Britain and Argentina over the Falkland Islands.

President and Mrs. Carter and daughter Amy attended the Law School Association luncheon which followed his speech.

Before his address, a special ceremony was held in the Hatton-Lovejoy Courtroom to dedicate the portrait of Arthur K. Bolton, former Attorney General of Georgia. The portrait is a gift by more than 100 friends and associates of the retired attorney general to the Law School. He is a 1943 Georgia law graduate. The movement to sponsor the portrait gift was spearheaded by William Gunter, Robert Smalley, and David Gambrell. Carl Sanders spoke on the career accomplishments and civic contributions of the attorney general, who served in that capacity from 1964-1981.

The Law Day activities began April 30 with the Russell and Talmadge Moot Court Competitions. The banquet sponsored by the Georgia Law Review and the Moot Court Board, held on the Friday evening before Law Day, was addressed by Judge Abner J. Mikva of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit. The Student Bar Association hosted a reception for Judge Mikva before the banquet.

A portrait of former Georgia Attorney General Arthur Bolton of Griffin was presented to the School of Law on Law Day. Bolton, a 1943 graduate of the law school, was attorney general from 1965 until his retirement last year. He is pictured beside the portrait with his daughter, Marian Lee Bolton of Atlanta, who unveiled the painting.

Thoughts to Graduate By

Georgia Attorney General Michael J. Bowers was speaker for the Law School's diploma ceremony June 12. Bowers, a 1974 graduate of the Law School, was invited by the senior class to give the commencement address for the 214 graduates of the Class of 1982.

In his remarks, he paid tribute to the Law School and its administration under Dean Ralph Beaird, saying that his rise to the Attorney Generalship was based on the foundation of a sound legal education he received at the Georgia Law School.

Bowers made preliminary remarks about the role of new lawyers in the legal profession before addressing the two main points of his speech. He urged the new graduates to act in a manner which will earn the public's trust:

His first observation was that there has been a major shift in society from the optimistic to the pessimistic range of the spectrum. "For years, it was considered to be the birthright of every person to be optimistic about the future of this country," he said. "Americans were entitled to believe that the future would be brighter, and another name for this is hope." Unfortunately, he added, "we are, today, a nation that is unsure of its future and lacks hope or optimism. This is a tragic development in our national outlook," he said.

Bowers admonished those who would permit themselves to view problems as incapable of resolution. He said that he is not suggesting that life be approached with a "cheerleader mentality." He suggests, instead, that America return to a "legacy of quiet resolve" in tackling major problems.

His second observation was a specific comment on a major piece of legislation then pending before the U.S. Congress—the extension of the Voting Rights Act of 1965. Bowers called the original act one of the most successful pieces of civil rights legislation—one which worked to fulfill this nation's "long-cherished goal of being a truly integrated, multi-racial society."

He expressed alarm, however, that the debate was very poorly reported in the news media because there were references to various amendments as "extensions" of the act. Bowers warned that the Section II amendments of the Voting Rights Act would be to "the detriment of this nation."

One amendment would provide that no state may impose a voting measure which would result in the denial of the right to vote on account of race. The other amendment would prohibit a voting measure which would result in less opportunity for members of a protected class to participate in the political process and be elected.

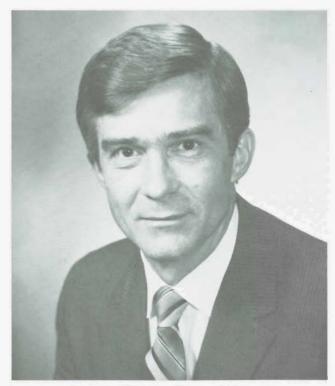

In spite of waivers to the contrary, Bowers noted, this amendment would pave the way for mandatory proportional representation. "This measure could be used for all sorts of mischief," he said. It is wrong, he said, to prescribe proportional representation because it is a division along racial lines which puts the "stamp of approval of the law on the polarization of races in this country." Such a measure could lead to the resegregation of the races, he predicted, and this would go against the national goal of equal access rather than forced equal results.

Bowers made his observation from the vantage point of his position as a State Attorney General who has come to know a great deal about election law as challenger of the Justice Department's ruling on congressional reapportionment in Georgia.

Until his appointment as Attorney General to succeed Arthur Bolton in August, 1981, Bowers served as director of the civil litigation division in the Georgia Department of Law.

The youthful attorney entered the legal field after a seven-year tour of duty in the U.S. Air Force. He graduated with distinction from the U.S. Military Academy at West Point in 1963, and he earned a masters degree in industrial engineering from Stanford University in 1965. He holds a masters degree in business administration from the University of Utah as well as the juris doctor degree from The University of Georgia.

This well-educated, articulate spokesman for the State of Georgia in its legal representation is also an alumni leader in the Georgia Law School. Bowers became the Law School Association's representative from the Fourth Congressional District last fall.

The Law School Association Distinguished Service Scroll is proudly presented to Kirk Martin McAlpin who received his LL.B. degree from the Georgia Law School in 1949. He has been a partner in the Atlanta firm of King and Spalding since 1963 and was formerly a partner in the Savannah firm of Bouhan, Lawrence, Williams, Levy & McAlpin. He has continued through the years to support The University of Georgia School of Law with his time and energy in addition to all of the many activities of his life.

Kirk McAlpin served as a member of the Board of Visitors of the Law School from 1967 through 1969. He was a member of the Law School Association Council in 1973, 1974, 1976 and 1977. His tireless efforts and imagination produced the first of series of joint meetings between the Board of Visitors and the Law School Association Council. Whenever a project was discussed and an agreement made for someone to be contacted, Kirk would immediately go to the phone, get it done, and say, "What's next?"

The Law School Association's regional meetings around the state may be attributed to the mastermind McAlpin. He will always be remembered the year that he was Association president for serving, unannounced, Bloody Marys at the Association's annual breakfast meeting at the unusual cocktail hour of 7:30 a.m.

In between his law school activities, Kirk has somehow managed to devote himself to the welfare of lawyers, judges, and the legal profession generally by engaging in nearly every type of bar service. His list of activities in the State Bar of Georgia include the chairmanships of the committees on Continuing Legal Education, Bar Service, Legal Economics, and the ad hoc Committee to acquire a State Bar Headquarters. In addition, he has held a trusteeship in the Institute of Continuing Legal Education, membership on the State Bar Board of Governors, Chairperson of the Fifth District Judicial Conference, membership on the Judicial Council of Georgia, the Presidency of the Younger Lawyers Section of the State Bar, and in 1979-80, the Presidency of the State Bar of Georgia.

Law School Association's

His credentials of service also include multiple committees of the American Bar Association including, but not limited to: Chairperson, General Practice Section; Chairperson, Ethics and Professional Responsibility Committee; Task Force on Younger Lawyers; Task Force on Advertising and Chairperson, Atlanta Host committee of the ABA annual meeting for 1976. He began his ABA service in the Junior Bar Conference in which he was National Chairman in 1958-1959. He has been the State Delegate from the State Bar of Georgia to the ABA House of Delegates since 1970. Presently he is a member of the Executive Council of the National Conference of Bar Presidents.

While in Law School, Kirk was a Phi Delta Phi. He spent a great deal of time in efforts to support himself, earning the nickname "Red Dog" on account of both his ruddy complexion and the fact that "Red Dog" was the name of a certain game of chance.

The Distinguished Service Scroll is presented to Kirk Martin McAlpin because he has found as much time as is necessary to do whatever needs to be done for The University of Georgia Law School and its alumni association—notwithstanding all of the endless engagements, meetings, obligations, trials and honors. He has found time for us. He continues to serve with enthusiasm and dedication. We salute and thank you, Kirk Martin McAlpin, a great lawyer, a true friend and leader of The University of Georgia Law School Association.

Alumni Service Awards

By Judge Marion T. Pope, Jr.

Chief Justice Robert Henry Jordan was born in Talbot County, Georgia on February 6, 1916. He was reared in Talbot County along with his five brothers and one sister.

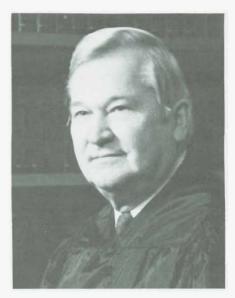

His cousin, who was an only child, once remarked that the only playmates available to someone growing up in Talbotton were "the billygoats or the Jordan brothers."

Jordan attended college at Georgia Southwestern College in Americus and earned the J.D. degree from The University of Georgia in 1941. Upon graduation from law school, he entered the U.S. Army and served his country during World War II.

Chief Justice Jordan then returned to Georgia to begin practicing law. Despite the opportunity and encouragement to practice law in other larger towns, he wanted to return to the west central Georgia town he had grown to love. He discussed his idea of starting to practice in Talbotton with a prospering lawyer and friend from Thomaston who told him the best thing he could do to get his practice off on the right foot would be to "go to the Talbot County Courthouse, have a close friend meet you on the courthouse steps, have him blindfold you, and then spin you around a number of times, remove the blindfold, and you should head out of town in that direction."

The young lawyer chose not to take the advice and began his practice in Talbotton as a sole practitioner. Through his diligence, ability, and integrity he distinguished himself as an able trial attorney and legal counselor during his 14 years in private practice.

Jordan was elected to the State Senate in 1953 and again in 1959 when he served as President Pro-Tem of that body. He served as a member of the three-member State Highway Board until his appointment as judge of the Georgia Court of Appeals in 1960 by Governor Ernest Vandiver. Thus, Justice Jordan has served in all three branches of state government.

He was appointed to the Supreme Court of Georgia in March, 1972 by Governor Jimmy Carter. He was elected Presiding Justice on March 1, 1980 and became Chief Justice ten months later. A highlight of Chief Justice Jordan's tenure on the Court was the celebration of the Supreme Court's 135-year anniversary. The first meeting of the newly-organized appellate court was held in Talbotton on January 26, 1846. Jordan presided over ceremonies commemorating the court's history at a special session held in his hometown in April, 1981.

Chief Justice Jordan was elected president of the Chattahoochee Circuit Bar Association and served as Vice-President of the Georgia Bar Association in 1958. He is a member of the Franklin D. Roosevelt Warm Springs Memorial Commission and is the author of "There Was a Land," a history of Talbot County, Georgia.

Chief Justice Jordan served this Law School as chairman of the Board of Visitors in 1980. He was awarded the Blue Key Award for Outstanding Service from The University of Georgia Blue Key National Honor Society in 1981.

Chief Justice Jordan's record as an appellate judge is one of great distinction. As a judge, he is fair and unprejudiced. He has a judicial mind and temperament and seeks always to learn and understand the facts and to determine the truth.

The courts of this state enjoy higher respect because of the service of this great Georgian, wise judge and dedicated servant of the people, Chief Justice Robert Henry Jordan.

Faculty Activities

Gregory S. Alexander, associate professor of law, has completed the article, "The Ackerman Thesis and the Liberal Concept of Property," which will be published by the Columbia Law Review in the fall of 1982. He spoke on the subject of wills and trusts at a conference for alumni of the Medical College of Georgia at Hilton Head Island in August. Alexander prepared a brochure on probate for the Cooperative Extension Service of The University of Georgia College of Agriculture. He also serves as a member of the University Council's Committee on Facilities.

Milner S. Ball, professor of law, is the author of "Of Rocks and Dams, PVC and Poetry: Conceptual Metaphors for Law," which was published in The Georgia Review in the spring, 1982 issue. He wrote "Law of the Sea: Expression of Solidarity,"[19 San Diego Law Review 461 (1982)] and "Don't Die Don Quixote," [59 Texas Law Review 787 (1981)]. Ball serves on The University of Georgia's Research Advisory Committee and the Environmental Ethics Faculty. He is a founding member of the Law and Humanities Institute and holds membership in the Lawyers Alliance for Nuclear Arms Control. "The Significance for Political Theory of John Calvin's Sermons on Second Samuel," was the title of a paper he delivered to the Calvin Studies Society of Davidson College in March. In April he delivered a paper, "Judicial Review," to the Florida Supreme Court's Commission on Jury Instructions. He was a participant in the Ossabaw Island Project's writers program in March 1982.

J. Ralph Beaird, Dean and University Professor of Law, is the author of a book review, "The Brandeis/Frankfurter Connection," which was printed in the Atlanta Journal-Constitution Sunday edition in April. He prepares a monthly column on constitutional issues for the Athens Banner Herald-Daily News.

Dean Beaird gave a speech on labor law to the Atlanta Federal Bar Association and made remarks to ICLE's Estate Planning Institute in February. He spoke to the Labor Law Section of the Atlanta Bar and the Augusta Bar Association in March, and was guest speaker for the Athens Rotary Club and the Macon Rotary Club in May. In June he spoke to the Columbus Rotary Club and to the Corporate Law Section of the State Bar of Georgia.

Throughout the winter and spring he gave reports on the state of the Law School to alumni groups in Marietta, Decatur, Brunswick, and Athens.

Dean Beaird led a delegation of lawyers and their spouses on an educational tour of the People's Republic of China June 22 through July 13. The tour group, sponsored by the People-to-People program, visited two law schools in China and met with law teachers and researchers who are working to codify the Chinese law.

Larry E. Blount, associate professor of law, is a contributing author to the textbook, Federal Tax Deductions to be published by Warren, Gorham and Lamont, Inc. in the fall of 1982. His book proposal for a text on income tax aspects of divorce has been accepted by Callaghan and Company. Blount served as an expert witness in a legal malpractice suit where he testified on the income tax aspects of divorce. He gave a speech, "Some Observations for the 1980s and the Need for Effective Legal Advocacy," which was presented to the faculty and student body of the University of Mississippi School of Law. Another speech, "Reaganomics: A Black Man's Perspective," was presented to the faculty and student body of Milsaps College, Jackson, Mississippi.

Robert Brussack, associate professor of law, was named Assistant Dean of the School of Law in July, 1982. His administrative role is to supervise the co-curricular student activities as well as the legal writing program and computerized instruction activity of the Law School. Brussack is working on an article which deals with selective disclosure of information protected by the attorney-client privilege. He is a member of the Law Revision Committee of the State Bar of Georgia.

Verner F. Chaffin, Callaway Foundation Professor of Law, is the author of "The Rule Against Perpetuities as Applied to Georgia Wills and Trusts: A Survey and Suggestions for Reform," [Georgia Law Review, Vol. 16, No. 2, Winter, 1982]. He is now preparing a textbook on The Law of Trusts. Chaffin presented a paper to the Georgia Bankers Association at its meeting in Savannah in June on "Case Law and Statutory Developments in Fiduciary Law 1981-1982." He was Counsel for the Appellants (Pro Hac Vice) in Earle v. International Paper Company, which is on appeal to the Supreme Court of Alabama (prepared brief and argument of appellants - case involved Rule Against Perpetuities). Chaffin attended the Estate Planning Institute in Athens in February and the C&S Will Drafting Competition in March.

B. Thomas Cook, Jr., Director of the Prosecutorial Clinic, is the author and editor of 20 briefs to the Court of Appeals of Georgia and one brief to the Supreme Court of Georgia. All but two briefs were co-authored by Prosecutorial Clinic students. An outline for a speech he wrote, "Recent Development in DUI Cases and Proof Problems" was distributed at the State Court judges seminar in Atlanta in March. He lectured to the criminal justice classes of Professor Lenora Alpert on the role of the prosecutor on three occasions during the year.

Samuel M. Davis, professor of law, is the author of Cases and Materials on Children in the Legal System (with Walter Wadlington and Charles H. Whitebread) which is to be published by the Foundation Press. His book, Rights of Juveniles: The Juvenile Justice System published by Clark Boardman Company, Ltd., is in its second edition. Davis serves on the Panel of Advocates of the Committee on Academic Freedom and Tenure of the Association of American Law Schools.

Thomas A. Eaton, assistant professor of law, is the author of "Causation in Constitutional Torts," which appeared in the Iowa Law Review. He has submitted for publication an article tentatively entitled 'Res Ipsa Loquitur and Medical Malpractice in Georgia—A Reappraisal." Eaton advised participants in the Phi Alpha Delta Juvenile Justice Program on developing materials in consumer rights and products liability to be presented in the Clarke County middle schools. He attended a conference on medicolegal aspects of litigation sponsored by the American Society of Law and Medicine and he participated in the 1982 meeting of the American Society of Law and Medicine for Health Law teachers.

C. Ronald Ellington, professor of law, has completed materials for the new edition of Green, Beaird and Ellington's Cases on Materials and Georgia Practice Procedure. His monograph, A Study of Sanctions for Discovery Abuse, continues to be cited and relied upon by the legal profession. It is cited several times by the Advisory Committee on Civil Rules in support of its recommended amendments to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.

Walter Hellerstein, associate professor of law, wrote an article for the Montana Law Review on the case, Commonwealth Edison Co. v. Montana, with Mike McGrath. He testified before the Subcommittee on Intergovernmental Relations of the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs on "The Commerce Clause and State Severance Taxes." Hellerstein prepared the 1982 supplement to State and Local Taxation, Cases and Materials, with Jerome R. Hellerstein. He is currently writing "State Taxation of Natural Resources in the Federal System: Legal, Economic, and Political Perspectives" which is to be published by Harvard University Press.

Eric M. Holmes, professor of law, completed materials for the third edition of Fundamentals of Business Law coauthored with Professor Robert N. Corley and published by Prentice-Hall, Inc. He also wrote the Teacher's Manual for Fundamentals of Business Law. Holmes is now preparing a textbook entitled Cases, Problems and Materials in Insurance Law, to be completed in 1983. He gave the day lecture for the Banking for Savings Association School sponsored by the UGA Institute of Financial Education in April. His topic was "Legal Aspects of Commercial Lending Authority." Holmes was elected to Who's Who in Georgia for the 1982 edition.

Fredrick W. Huszagh, professor of law, wrote "The Marketing of Laws as an Alternative to Enforcement," in Government Marketing Theory and Practice, published by Praeger and coauthored with Sandra M. Huszagh and K. Buice. He is the author of 33 reports in the first year of publication of Briefings, a summary of international trade news produced by the Rusk Center. Huszagh served as a panel member on the Immigration Policy Panel of the Economic Policy Council, United Nations Association. The panel published a report entitled, "Illegal Immigration: Challenge to the U.S." He prepared a briefing paper on "U.S.-China Trade Relationships," for Dean Beaird's Exchange visit to the People's Republic of China. Huszagh is writing the second edition of: Comparative Review of Resources, Human Dynamics and Values in Canada, Mexico and the United States: A Foundation for Trilateral Interaction (coauthored with Dr. Bobbie McCrackin) to be published in the Fall of 1982. He wrote "Agricultural Exports: A Unique Opportunity for State Growth, Community Development and Citizen Involvement," as a report to the Georgia Legislature.

Huszagh spoke on "Management of the International Economy: The Need for New Approaches to Education and Training" for a National Science Foundation program on International Economics held in Athens. He was director of a poultry export seminar of the Georgia Poultry Federation, and he spoke on agricultural exports to the Smyrna Rotary Club. Huszagh was a panel member for the Economic Policy Council's seminar on U.S. Trade Policy with Japan and Mexico held in New York in January as well as the one on international lending policy held in May. He led a panel for a discussion on "The Role of the Private Sector in Development" for the UGA Symposium on Development in Athens. In April he was a participant in the discussion of U.S. industrial objectives sponsored by the Society for International Development and the Economic Policy Council.

Huszagh was speaker for a University-Industry Research Workshop held in Athens in May. He was keynote speaker for the annual board of directors meeting of the Defense Research Institute held in Greenbrier, West Virginia in July. Huszagh spoke on international trade in poultry products to the annual meeting of the Georgia Egg Producers Association in July.

Ellen R. Jordan, associate professor of law, wrote "Government Regulation and Economic Efficiency: The Role of Conservative Legal Foundations," with Paul H. Rubin in the Blueprint for Judicial Reform published by Free Congress Foundation. She submitted for publication her work as editor of the proceedings, Liberty Fund Conference on the "Delegation Doctrine from a Public Choice Perspective" held in Atlanta last fall. Jordan was a discussion leader for the Association of American Law Schools Workshop on Teaching Administrative Law held in March. She was commentator on "The Litigation Society" at the Conference on Judicial Reform sponsored by the Free Congress Research Education Foundation in Washington, D.C. in June.

Paul M. Kurtz, associate professor of law, was program planner for the AALS southern regional meeting held in Savannah in August. He was speaker for a Georgia State Bar forum on the Criminal Insanity Defense and he spoke at a State Bar forum on Child Abuse in the Summer of 1982. Kurtz serves on the Board of Editors of the Family Law Quarterly published by the American Bar Association.

Robert N. Leavell, professor of law, has completed the article, "Corporate Governance and the Shareholder Role," which has been submitted for publication. He is a member of the Corporate and Banking Committee of the State Bar of Georgia. Leavell rendered legal services in assisting the Joseph Henry Lumpkin Foundation to finance the restoration of the Lumpkin House in Athens.

Julian B. McDonnell, professor of law, is the co-author of Commercial Transactions: Payment Systems; Sales; Secured Finance, with Frankel and Nimmer, a three-volume set of commercial law teaching materials published by Michie/Bobbs Merrill. He has completed the manuscript for "Current Developments in Secured Transactions: Fall 1982" which was written with Peter Coogan. McDonnell gave a speech entitled, "Current Legal Developments Affecting Lending," to the Credit Conference of the Georgia Bankers Association in Atlanta in January. He is a member of the Law Revision Committee of the State Bar of Georgia.

John C. O'Byrne, Francis Shackelford Professor of Law, wrote the Mother Goose Tax Summary for Law Students on the subjects of Partnership Taxation, Taxation of Corporations and Shareholders, Corporate Reorganizations, and Taxation of Trusts and Estates. He spoke on the topic of "Planning for the Tax Treatment on the Death or Retirement of a Partner" to the 15th Annual Institute on Estate Planning. He is a member of the editorial board of the Commerce Clearing House law school casebook and he recently revised chapter 4 on "Sales and Dispositions of Property." O'Byrne participated in an Estate Planning Course sponsored by the Institute of Continuing Legal Education and held in Athens. He taught an ALI-ABA Advanced Business Tax Planning seminar in Boston and Partnership Taxation seminars in St. Louis, Chicago, Boston, Phoenix, and Salt Lake City. He also spoke at farmers tax programs sponsored by the UGA Agricultural Extension in Tifton, Gainesville, Macon, and Statesboro. O'Byrne was a panelist for the Great Plains Tax Institute held in Lincoln, Nebraska.

Albert M. Pearson, professor of law, wrote a book review on Political Crime in Europe for the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law. He prepared the brief in U.S. v. Alley before the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit. Pearson served as chairman of The University of Georgia President's Ad Hoc Committee to Review Disciplinary Appeal. He testified before the Nevada Legislative Commission concerning the possible adoption of the Uniform Information Practices Code and was chairman of the Mass Communications Section of the AALS for 1981-82. He arranged the section's annual program. Pearson was an instructor for the week-long Georgia Institute of Trial Advocacy held in Athens in March. He presented a paper at the American Association of Public Opinion Research annual meeting. The panel subject was Forensic Polling and his paper was entitled, "Survey Research, Criminal Defense and the Highly Publicized Criminal Case." Pearson was a participant in the Economics Institute for Law Professors at its meeting at Captiva Island, Florida in June.

Robert D. Peckham, director of the Athens Legal Aid and Defender Society, prepared additional material for inclusion in the second edition of The Military and American Society. He participated in six training sessions of law enforcement officers at the Northeast Georgia Police Academy and tried eight jury cases in the Superior Courts of Clarke and Oconee Counties. Peckham is a member of the Criminal Justice Committee and the Corrections Committee of the State Bar of Georgia. He serves on the Special Committee of the State Bar of Georgia on Client's Trust Funds and is a member of the Criminal Justice Advisory Committee of the Northeast Georgia Area Planning and Development Commission.

Walter Ray Phillips, Associate Dean and Professor of Law, has completed the 1981 Supplement to Liquidation Under Chapter 7 and Chapter 13: Adjustment of Debts of Individuals. He wrote a casenote on subject of jurisdiction for the Georgia State Bar Journal for the May, 1982 issue. Dean Phillips was selected as judge for the final round for the Russell Moot Court Competition. In services to the University, Phillips chaired review panels for faculty promotions in the Political Science Department, School of Forest Resources and School of Journalism and Mass Communication. He conducted a seminar on bankruptcy for the Oklahoma Bar and the Tulsa Law School in April and lectured to several classes in the UGA College of Education. Dean Phillips attended ABA Consumer Bankruptcy Section meetings in Chicago and Washington, D.C. He was the Law Day speaker for the Columbus Bar Association and he spoke to the Northern Circuit Bar Association in April. Phillips serves on the ABA Special Committee to Review Proposed Bankruptcy Rules. He was listed in the 6th edition of Who's Who in the World.

Mack A. Player, professor of law, completed the 1981 supplement to his casebook, Employment Discrimination Law published by the West Publishing Company. He has completed and submitted for publication two articles on Title VII Disparate Treatment case analysis. Player was advisor to the Law School's Labor Law Moot Court team. He earned a fellowship from the National Endowment for the Humanities to participate in a summer seminar for law teachers on the subject: "Philosophical Underpinnings of Constitutional Law" at Columbia University. Player participated in the Midwestern Conference of Constitutional Law Professors at the University of Dayton in April.

James F. Ponsoldt, associate professor of law, wrote the article, "The Expansion of Horizontal Merger Defenses After General Dynamics," for volume 12 of the Loyola University of Chicago Law Journal. He is preparing several articles on issues in antitrust law. Ponsoldt served as advisor in The University of Georgia Athletic Association's antitrust litigation against the N.C.A.A. He attended the Law and Economics Institute's program on economics for law professors in June.

John B. Rees, Jr., professor of law, is preparing an article for the Mercer Law Review on why Georgia courts should apply modern methods to choice of law problems. He is developing a computer program for computation of "generation skipping" tax for course materials in the Estate and Gift Tax courses. He served on the University's Research Awards Committee.

Dean Rusk, Samuel H. Sibley Professor of International Law, wrote a book review on Your Man at the UN for the April issue of the American Journal of International Law. During the year he held advisory posts on four university committees and for three law student groups, as well as served on advisory boards of six educational institutions and governmental agencies.

Professor Rusk spoke to civic clubs in Oconee County, Gainesville, Atlanta, Thomasville and Charlotte. He visited the campuses of Emory University, Wofford College, Morris Brown College, the University of Florida, the University of Virginia, the University of North Carolina and East Carolina University. In addition, he gave the commencement address at Mills College in Oakland, California—the college where he taught before entering the military and diplomatic service.

He met with classes in two elementary schools and participated in nine conferences sponsored by various departments of The University of Georgia. He was interviewed by NBC News, ABC News, Cable News Network, and the French Television Network.

The government of South Korea presented its highest civilian diplomatic award to Professor Rusk at a ceremony in July.

R. Perry Sentell, Jr., Regents Professor of Law, is the author of "Local Government and Liquor Licensing: A Sobering Vignette" which appeared in volume 15 of the Georgia Law Review. His article, "Survey of Georgia Local Government Law 1980-1981," was published in the Mercer Law Review. Urban Georgia published his article, "Argumentum Ab Inconvenienti" in its March, 1982 issue. "It Hardly Seems Fair" was a piece which appeared in volume 2 of Calendar Call. Sentell continues to write "Towns and the Law in Georgia," a feature page in each monthly issue of Urban Georgia. He has completed and submitted for publication several articles on the subjects of defamation in local government law, county spending power and home rule. He served on two committees of the Georgia Alumni Society Board of Managers. Sentell earned the award for the "Best Legal Article by A Member of the State Bar of Georgia, 1981," presented by the Authors' Court, State Bar of Georgia. The winning article was "Statutes of Non-Statutory Origin" (14 Georgia Law Review 239).

Louis B. Sohn, Woodruff Professor of International Law, is the author of "International Consequences of U.S. Human Rights Policies," a chapter published in The Dynamics of Human Rights in U.S. Foreign Policy. He wrote a piece entitled, "The Rights of Minorities," for the book, The International Bill of Rights: The Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. Sohn wrote "Models of Autonomy within the United Nations Framework," for the book Models of Autonomy. The Fine Print publication asked him to write "The Role of Conciliation in International Disputes." Professor Sohn has seven book revisions in progress. These include a casebook on the Law of the Sea, a casebook on United Nations law, books on international administration, international protection of human rights, and African regional organizations. He is Assistant Reporter for the American Law Institute, in charge of chapters on the law of the sea and environment for the Institute's Restatement on Foreign Relations Law.

Sohn delivered the Woodruff Chair Inaugural Lecture, "Settlement of International Disputes," at the School of Law on November 5, 1981. He gave a speech on "Research in International Law," to the Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law, and spoke to Amnesty International, Athens, Chapter, on the present status of international human rights. He addressed the United Nations Association and Ocean Education Project audience in Atlanta in January and spoke to the International Law Society of Emory University in February. He spoke at a forum on Education for International Careers at the Center for Global Studies, The University of Georgia, and talked about "International Aspects of Environemental Law, the Law of the Sea, and International Treaties Regulating Pollution," to the Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law and the Environmental Law Association.

He led a discussion group at Harvard Law School on human rights and the Law of the Sea in November and February. He addressed the American Society of International Law in Washington, D.C. in February and discussed transfrontier pollution at the Joint Meeting of U.S.-Canada Commissioners on Uniform Law in Toronto. He spoke on "The Role of Arbitration in Recent International Multilateral Treaties," at a colloquium sponsored by the University of Virginia School of Law. Sohn was Senior Advisor, U.S. Delegation to the Third United Nations Law of the Sea Conference, held in New York, March 22-April 30, 1982. He was the delegate of the American Society of International Law to the American Council of Learned Societies meeting in New York in April. Sohn addressed the United Nations Institute for Training and Research in May and the American Bar Association Council of the International Law Section in Boston in April. Sohn gave lectures on "The New International Law: Protection of Rights of Individuals, Not States," at the College de France, Paris, France in June.

Erwin C. Surrency, Law Librarian and Professor of Law, prepared a transcript of laws passed by the Royal Government of Georgia (1777-1781). He submitted for publication a manuscript entitled "Insuring the Law Library: Fire and Disaster Risk Management." Surrency reviewed school text books in law and government for the Georgia Department of Education. He was honored by the American Society for Legal History by a newly-established award named for him, and he received a resolution of the Board of Trustees of Temple University commending him for 25 years of services as editor of the American Journal of Legal History. Surrency gave a speech on international trade to the New York University School of Law and spoke to the Atlanta University Library School. Maxine S. Thomas, assistant professor of law, wrote "Differential Treatment of Pregnancy in Employee Disability Benefit Programs: Title VII and Equal Protection Clause Analysis," which appeared in volume 60 of the Oregon Law Review. Her article, "Municipal Liability for Code Enforcement Under Section 1983," will be published in the Urban Law Journal. Thomas is a member of the Special Committee on Housing and Urban Development of the American Bar Association. She gave a speech on affirmative action in the 80's to a session sponsored by the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia. She spoke on the topic, "Women and the Law in Georgia," to a workshop sponsored by the National Organization for Women.

Richard V. Wellman, Robert Cotten Alston Professor of Law, wrote "A Report About Recent Developments—The Struggle for Probate Reform," for volume 79 of the Michigan Law Review. He is completing work on the fourth edition of Palmer's Trusts and Succession, by Wellman, Waggoner and Browder. In his position as educational director of the Joint Editorial Board for the Uniform Probate Code, Wellman served as consultant to California's probate code; consultant to Clerk of the Senate, South Carolina General Assembly regarding pending probate legislation; consultant for several members of Georgia General Assembly regarding pending probate legislation; proposed amendments to the Uniform Probate Code to adjust the proposal to the Economic Recovery Act of 1981; and was consultant to HALT concerning its "Citizens Legal Manual on Probate."

Wellman is a member of the Marital Property Act project, NCCUSL and he serves as co-reporter of the Uniform Protective Proceedings Act project, NCCUSL. He is a committee member of the Succession Without Administration Act project, NCCUSL. Wellman is consultant to the U.S. State Department regarding U.S. ratification and implementation of International Will Convention and he serves on the NCCUSL Review Committee, Uniform Ante-Nuptial Agreements Act project. Wellman is Special Consultant to the American College of Probate Cousel project relating to the national institute on the durable power of attorney.

> These faculty activities cover the period from January through June, 1982.

Michael L. Wells, associate professor of law, is completing an article to be co-authored with Professor Tom Eaton on affirmative duties in constitutional torts.

D. Eugene Wilkes, Jr., associate professor of law, is the author of Federal and State Postconviction Remedies and Relief which will be published by the Harrison Company in November, 1982. He is conducting research on the history of the writ of habeas corpus, the development of English criminal procedure, and the evolution of individual rights protection. Wilkes continued to serve pro bono until April, 1982, in case of Isaacs v. Zant, now pending in U.S. Court of Appeals for the Eleventh Circuit. He participated in a panel discussion on pornography conducted by Women Against Pornography for The University of Georgia student activities program. He was a panel participant for a discussion conducted by the Black Law Students Association at its regional meeting at the School of Law in February.

Gabriel M. Wilner, professor of law, has submitted for publication an article entitled "The Second Enlargement: Effect on Law and Policies on Investment and the Transfer of Technology to and from Latin America" for a study on the "Impact of An Enlarged European Community on Latin America" conducted by the Latin American Studies Program at Georgetown University. He completed an article entitled: "European Communities Directives on Company Law: Workers' Rights and Transnational Corporations" for the papers of the Fifth Sokol Colloquium on Private International Law. Wilner's article, "Gilartiga v. Pena-Irala: Comments on Sources of Human Rights Law and Means of Redress for Violations of Human Rights," appeared in volume 11 of the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law. He is preparing an article on "Third World Acceptance of Arbitration" for the Virginia Journal of International Law.

Wilner presented lectures at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel (V.U.B.) on "International Law and Economic Development and Cooperation," last winter and gave a talk on "Acceptance of Arbitration by the Third World" at the Sixth Sokol Colloquium on Private International Law held at the University of Virginia School of Law in March. He gave a talk on arbitration in accordance with U.N.C.I.T.R.A.L. rules at a meeting of the State Bar and Georgia Foreign Law Association in May. Wilner was the organizer and coordinator of the ABA Colloquium on "Internal Conflicts: Dilemmas in International Law" held at The University of Georgia School of Law, May 7-8, 1982. He directed the Brussels Seminar on the Law and Institutions of the European Community in July and participated in the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law in April.

U.S. and foreign diplomats and leading international legal scholars assembled at the Law School May 7-8 for a colloquium on the role of international law in solving internal disputes in nations.

Among the speakers were Gale McGee, U.S. ambassador to the Organization of American States; Morris Harrell, president-elect of the American Bar Association; Francis Wilcox, director-general of the Atlantic Council; and John Pace, secretary of the United Nations Commission on Human Rights.

The program was sponsored by the School of Law and the American Bar Association's Standing Committee on Law and National Security.

The colloquium was held to honor Professor Dean Rusk.

The discussions focused on how international law can help resolve internal conflicts in nations such as El Salvador, Poland and Afghanistan. Among topics covered were the obligations of other nations in cases of internal conflicts; the applicability of humanitarian law in such disputes; and the roles of international and regional organizations in internal problems.

Other speakers and colloquium participants included Lawrence Pezzullo, former U.S. ambassador-inresidence at The University of Georgia; John N. Moore, director of the Center for Oceans Law and Policy at the Moot Court team members participated in six state, regional and national appellate competitions in the academic year 1981-82. In addition, the program included participation in client counseling and mock trial competitions.

The National Team, which is composed of third year students who have demonstrated outstanding ability in the second year competitions, consisted of Kenneth Gallo, Kristen Gustafson, and Shelley Rucker. The team placed fifth in the nation in the finals in New York after placing second in the regional competition in Atlanta where Shelley Rucker was named best oral advocate for the region.

Georgia's team for the Philip C. Jessup International Competition was composed of Jim Hawkins, Billy Key, Steven Lownds, George Mize and Diane McNamara and was coached by Alvah Smith. The Jessup International team placed fourth in the southeast regionals and won runner-up award for the best brief.

Two Georgia teams were again entered in the Intrastate Moot Court Competition sponsored by the Younger Lawyers Section of the State Bar of Georgia. The team of David Darden, Barry Gold and Pam Perdue placed second in the competition. In addition, Barry Gold was chosen as Best Oralist of the competition. The team of Bill Cowsert, James Durham ang Gail Leverett placed fourth in the competition. The teams were coached by William Ellenberg and Charles Driebe.

Georgia's team for the National Appellate Advocacy Competition, which is sponsored by the American Bar Association, was comprised of Deborah Edwards, Mike Ozburn and Tim Toler and was coached by David Marshall. The team was seeded first after the preliminary rounds of the competition which was hosted by the University of Florida. Georgia placed third overall.

The team of Marc Barre, Roy Hoffman and Bruce Hornbuckle represented Georgia in the Holderness Competition held in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. The Holderness team was undefeated in oral competition but split overall preliminary rounds. The team was coached by Kirk Henson.

Tucker Hobgood, Lawrence McGoldrick and Greg Sowell represented Georgia in the Wagner Labor Law Competition held in New York. The team was coached by Mari Perez and amassed a 2-0 win/loss record.

Georgia was represented by Julia Langley and Robert Middleton at the regional ABA Client Counseling Competition and placed third in the regional competition held in New Orleans.

Two Mock Trial teams were entered in the Intrastate Mock Trial Competition. The team of Michael Bradley, James Evans and Mary Koch placed first in the competition and the team of Michael Quilling, Alan Shor and John Watkins also competed. The teams were coached by Dana Garrett. This year's first place finish makes this the third year in a row that Georgia has won the competition.

The National Trial Competition team composed of Kelley Minter, Michael Quilling and Kathleen Van Blarcum and coached by Dana Garrett compiled a 1-1 win/loss record in Memphis, Tennessee.

The Russell Competition, held during Law Day weekend and open to first year students, was coordinated by Edward Coleman and Ertharin Cousin. The competition was won by Kim Logue and the runner-up was Fred Boding.

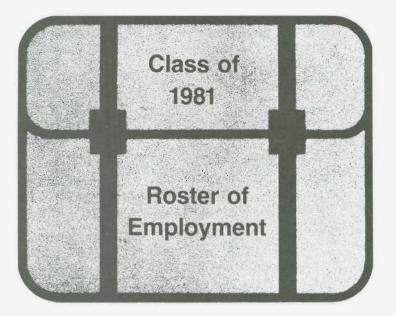

The Talmade Competition, open to all interested second and third year students, was coordinated by Ryan Mock and Michael Quilling. The winners of the competition, Lawrence McGoldrick and Scott Italiaander, defeated the runner-up team of Becky Bedingfield and Tim Toler. McGoldrick was the winner of the Russell Competition last year on Law Day.

The Southeastern Regional Conference of the Black American Law Students Association held its annual meeting at the Law School in February.

The Georgia chapter of BALSA hosted the group, which conducted workshops on land retention, roles of the Black attorney, the Reagan economic plan and its impact on Blacks, and Black women and the law. In addition, teams from the southeastern law schools met for the Frederick Douglass Moot Court Competition held during the regional conference.

Laura Christian, a third-year student, was elected governor of the Fifth Circuit of the American Bar Association's Law Student Division. She is one of 15 governors of the Law Student Division, which has 40,931 members nationwide.

Alumna Feature: Edith Elizabeth House Class of 1925

by Gwen Wood

When Edith House was contacted and told that she was to be featured in an issue of The Advocate as the first woman graduate of the School of Law, this was her reaction:

"Technically speaking, I was not the first woman law graduate. If they handed out degrees alphabetically at graduation, then my friend Gussie Brooks received hers first. I did graduate with honors, and if those degrees were bestowed first, then I beat her by a few minutes. I don't mean to be splitting hairs (a common weakness among us lawyers, you know) but I don't want to claim or be accorded a status to which I am not entitled."

It is typical of Edith House to go about quietly achieving honors and accolades in her career and expressing mild surprise that anyone would make anything of it.

She was, indeed, an honor student. She shared the Valedictorian of the Class of 1925 spot with another classmate, and went on to serve as assistant U.S. Attorney for three-fourths of the State of Florida. Yet she can't recall any particular adversity or obstacle to her educational and career goals because she is a woman.

In fact, opportunities seemed to come her way when the need was the greatest. She had earned her way through the first two years of law school by tutoring blind students, but funds had run out and she needed financial aid the third year. Thomas Reed, the University Registrar, knew of a loan fund which had just been established, and he recommended Edith House because of her excellent academic record.

Thus, Miss House became the first recipient of the first private financial aid endowment grant at the Law School.

Later, when she passed the bar and was ready to seek law practice in some small town in Georgia, she was sought out for three employment openings in Florida. This was the period of the land speculation boom, and family friends from her hometown of Winder urged her to join their law practice in Florida.

After four years of private law practice in Clearwater, she was recruited by the incoming U.S. Attorney under the Hoover Administration to be Assistant U.S. Attorney for the Southern District of Florida. This was a post she held for the next 30 years. In this period of time the workload rapidly expanded as the cities within the jurisdiction—Tampa, Miami, Jacksonville—exploded in population. After years of pleading with the U.S. Justice Department to subdivide the district, the order finally came in 1963 to create a new middle district of Florida. The District Attorney's post for the southern district became vacant, and Miss House was appointed to fill it. She completed the difficult transition task of distributing the caseload of the two new districts, and retired after eight months as U.S. Attorney.

Retired at the youthful age of 60, Miss House was, at last, prepared to enter private law practice in a small town. But a series of family illnesses, deaths and the necessity of handling complex estate matters forced her to postpone her dream. She realized that she knew volumes about federal law, but had limited knowledge of current state law. Today, at the age of 80, she says she handles small legal matters for friends but has never charged a fee.

Somehow, it just isn't in her nature to do so.

The University of Georgia School of Law is fortunate to have among its graduates several multigeneration alumni families. These are lawyers whose ancestors and descendants also chose the Lumpkin Law School for their legal education. This issue of the Advocate will spotlight several families who responded to a notice in the fall edition of the magazine. Additional families will be featured as they are submitted.

Middleton Pope Barrow graduated in the first class of the newly-established Lumpkin Law School. He was the older brother of David Crenshaw Barrow, who became Chancellor of The University of Georgia. Barrow's sonin-law, Francis Percival McIntire, earned his law degree at Georgia in 1903 where he was a member of the football team. He practiced law in Savannah. His son, Pope Barrow McIntire, finished law school in 1947 and was captain of the golf team at the University. He practices in Atlanta with the firm of King and Spalding. McIntire's daughter Sarah Ellen is a 1980 graduate of the Georgia Law School and she is now with Alston, Miller and Gaines of Atlanta. Her graduation comes exactly 120 years after her great grandfather's. Judge James Barrow of Athens, a 1939 graduate, is a member of this family.

An interesting footnote is that descendants of that first graduating class in 1860 were recognized for their dedication to the Law School by receiving the Law School Association's Distinguished Service Scrolls. Pope McIntire and Robert G. Stephens, Jr. received it in the same year, 1970, and James Barrow earned it in 1976.

The Stephens family is another Georgia family with a legal tradition. John A. Stephens, a member of the first graduating class, was a state senator and Adjutant General of Georgia from 1883-1887. His grandson, Robert G. Stephens, Jr., graduated from the Georgia Law School in 1941 and went on to serve the Tenth District of Georgia in the U.S. House of Representatives from 1961 to 1977. His son, Lawton E. Stephens, is a 1981 Georgia graduate who practices with the law firm of Fortson, Bentley and Griffin in Athens.

William Evan Thomas graduated from the Georgia Law School in 1888. He served the Southern Circuit of Georgia as Superior Court judge for 40 years. His grandson, C. Wilburn Warner, Jr., graduated in 1965 and practices with the firm of Warner and Mayoue in Atlanta.

Madison Bell graduated in the second Law School class (1861) and became the first Comptroller General for the State of Georgia. His son, Madison Bell, Jr., graduated in 1900 and served five sessions in the Georgia legislature, where he authored Georgia's child labor statutes. His second cousin, Barnett Bell, graduated in 1948 and is a consultant in insurance law.

Thomas O. Marshall graduated from the Law School in 1911 and practiced law in Americus until his death in 1945. Thomas O. Marshall, Jr. earned his degree in 1948 and is now associate justice of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

John B. Harris, Jr. of Harris, Watkins, Davis and Chamless in Macon graduated from the Georgia Law School in 1948. His grandfather, Nathaniel Edwin Harris, served as Governor of Georgia from 1915 to 1917. Harris had earned his undergraduate degree from the University in 1870 and studied law with a practitioner in preparation for the bar examination. John Harris' uncle, General Walter Harris, was a Georgia law graduate. His sons, John Burke Harris, III and William Harris, earned their degrees from the School in 1978 and 1980, respectively. They are both associated with their father's law firm in Macon.

William Spencer Connerat was an alumnus of 1912, and he formed the Savannah law firm of Connerat, Dunn and Hunter. His son Spencer graduated in 1957 and is now with the firm of Hunter, MacLean, Exley and Dunn, P.C.

Andrew J. Hill, Jr. is a 1950 law graduate who practices in Lavonia. His son, Andrew J. Hill, III, finished in the class of 1977 and he practices in Savannah with the firm of Corish, Beckmann, Smith and Pinson.

Jack T. Griffith earned his law degree in 1953. His son, George W. Griffith, graduated in 1972. He is now with the U.S. Corps of Engineers in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

Howard Pelham Wallace of the Class of 1955 went to Griffin to practice in the firm of Wallace and Moss. His daughter, Elizabeth Wallace O'Conor, is a 1981 graduate who is now with the U.S. Army JAG Corps staff at Fort Ben Harrison, Indianapolis, Indiana.

A $50,000 scholarship fund has been established at the School of Law in memory of the late A. Pratt Adams, Jr. of Savannah.

The fund is a gift from the board of directors of The Citizens and Southern National Banks in Georgia. Adams was a director of The Citizens and Southern National Bank for 20 years and was board chairman in 1978-79.

A 1936 graduate of The University of Georgia, Adams was a native of Savannah where he practiced law with the firm in Adams, Adams, Brennan and Gardner. He was trustee chairman of The University of Georgia Foundation until his death in March, 1981.

The Citizens and Southern gift came from a special fund to which individual directors contribute part of their annual compensation. Grants from the fund support institutions of higher education in Georgia.

Bennett A. Brown, C&S board chairman, presented the gift to Dr. Fred C. Davison, University president. Bennett said the directors' contributions to the special fund were voluntarily doubled this year when it was announced that the gift would be named for Adams.

A substantial contribution was also made to the scholarship fund by a member of the Adams family.

The Law School has received the papers, books and artifacts belonging to J. Alton Hosch which relate to his work as Dean of the School of Law from 1935 to 1964.

When Dean Hosch retired in 1964, his tenure as administrator was longer than any other dean of an ABA-accredited law school in the country. When he died in March, 1980, his law-school related documents were put into storage.

Mrs. Nina Hosch has spent many hours sorting her husband's possessions which were accumulated over the 60 years of his life as a law teacher, dean, wartime administrator as colonel in the Judge Advocate General's staff, Commissioner of Uniform State Laws, and civic leader in Athens. Mrs. Hosch made a gift of materials, which amounted to 28 file boxes, to the Law School in August. Highlights of the Hosch collection include:

- -Administrative files on the School of Law
- —A history of the School of Law
- All of Dean Hosch's class notes and textbooks when he was a student at Harvard Law School Lecture materials and grade books from
- Hosch's years of teaching —A complete set of decisions from the contracts
- division of the Judge Advocate General Corps for the years 1940 - 1944
- Books on military history and travel, books about the far east
- Framed certificates of Hosch's honorary degrees, honors, and citations.

The School of Law has received a gift of two Greek marble busts for the foyer of the Law Library Annex. The busts are of Pericles, a Greek statesman of the 5th century, B.C., and Demosthenes, Greek orator from the 4th century, B.C. They were sculptured in Greece in pentelic marble by the sculptor Irene Chariatis.

The marbles are the gifts of Nickolas Chilivis and Dr. John Skandalakis of Atlanta. Chilivis formerly taught the trial practice course in the Law School as an adjunct professor when he was a trial attorney in Athens. He was formerly Commissioner of Revenue for the State of Georgia and is currently a partner in the Atlanta firm of Powell, Goldstein, Frazer and Murphy. Dr. Skandalakis is a member of the Board of Regents of The University System of Georgia. He holds the anatomical chair in surgery at Emory University School of Medicine. Skandalakis' son Mitch is a June, 1982 graduate of the School of law.

The marble busts were commissioned when Skandalakis and Chilivis and their families were on a tour of Greece three years ago. Skandalakis was born in a small village near Sparta, Greece. He graduated from the Medical School of Athens, Greece, served in the Royal Greek Navy, and moved to Atlanta in 1951.

The pentelic marble from which the busts were sculptured comes from the same mountain from which the marble was extracted to build the Parthenon in Athens. The busts were shipped from Athens, Greece to Athens, Georgia in December and are now on display in the entrance hall of the new annex.

Bequests and Memorial Gifts

John Byrd Martin, a Washington, D.C. lawyer and real estate broker, has willed his estate valued at $1.1 million to the School of Law. The will states that the bequest will be used to endow a law school professorship.

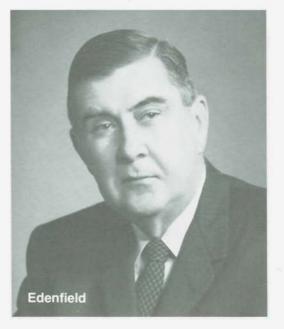

Martin, 68, a 1936 graduate of the Law School, died December 3, 1981 in Washington. A native of Tifton and Bainbridge, he had also earned a degree in journalism from The University of Georgia.

Martin spent 26 years in military service after graduation from law school. He was in weapons testing during World War II, and he was assigned to the atomic weapons test at Bikini Atoll in 1946 (the Crossroads Project). He retired as a colonel in the U.S. Air Force.

He was stationed in the Washington, D.C. area on several tours of duty, and he moved there after retirement to begin a real estate business in 1963. His interest was in renovating older homes around the U.S. Capitol. He also handled second trusts, small claims, and minor legal transactions. He was a member of the Georgia and District of Columbia Bar Associations, the Capitol Hill Club and the Lawyers Club of Washington.

His will stated,

"This trust is established in appreciation of what the School of Law of The University of Georgia has meant to me during my student days and in after years, and what the School will mean to other students in the years to come."

Judge Newell Edenfield of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Georgia died in December, 1981. Shortly before he died, he met with Dean Ralph Beaird and others to make arrangements to make a bequest to the School of Law.

Judge Edenfield's family completed the arrangements and announced that a $10,000 scholarship fund will be established to honor the "average, hardworking student" as Judge Edenfield strongly believed in practical legal education.

He had indicated that the fund should assist those students who, like himself, lacked the financial resources necessary to study law. Edenfield had entered law school in the depth of the Depression and had to earn his way through school by working alternate years as a seaman on ocean-going freighters. He earned his law degree in 1939 after six years of work and study.

Edenfield practiced law in Atlanta for 28 years before his judicial appointment in 1967. During that time he served as president of the Georgia Bar Association (1959-60) and was chairman of the committee which formulated the rules and regulations to effect the transition from the association to a licensing, integrated barthe State Bar of Georgia.

The Law School Association awarded its Distinguished Service Scroll award to Judge Edenfield in 1980.

The University of Georgia School of Law is the recipient of a $10,000 scholarship grant from the Southeastern Bankruptcy Law Institute.

The income from the grant will be used to award scholarships and loans to those students who evidence an interest in bankruptcy, creditors' rights, and corporate reorganization.

The Institute is a non-profit organization which was formed eight years ago to further studies in bankruptcy law. Illustrative of the stature which it has achieved is the recent annual seminar which attracted more than 900 registrants from 18 states.

Six of the 25 officers and directors of the Institute are graduates of The University of Georgia School of Law. They are: C. David Butler, Judge Dudley H. Bowen, Jr., Morton P. Levine, Morris W. Macey, Thomas E. Raines, and Samuel J. Zusmann, Jr.

Advisors to the Institute are Bankruptcy Judges A.D. Kahn, W.H. Drake, Jr. and Hugh Robinson of the Northern District of Georgia.

Associate Dean Walter Ray Phillips teaches the bankruptcy and creditors' rights course at the Law School.

A new academic award has been established for presentation at Law Day ceremonies each year. The award is named the "Donald P. Gilmore, Jr. Memorial Award for Excellence in the Study of Labor Law." It will be a cash prize for the student or students who make the highest grade in the labor law sections taught each year.

Don Gilmore was a Georgia law graduate of the Class of 1974. He earned his BBA at the University in 1971. After serving the University as staff attorney for the Office of Judicial Affairs, he became a lawyer in the U.S. Air Force Judge Advocate General Corps where he specialized in labor law. He went on to earn the LL.M. degree in labor law at Georgetown University.

At the time of his death in January, 1982, Gilmore was on his way to Tampa, Florida to handle legal matters arising from his position as staff attorney, Labor Law Division, Office of the General Counsel for the U.S. Postal Service. He was aboard the DC airliner which was destroyed when it struck a bridge over the Potomac River in a severe ice storm.

As memorial gifts to honor Don Gilmore, 143 family, friends, and professional associates sent contributions to the Law School Fund. Don's widow, Dr. Jann Gilmore, made an additional contribution and a total amount of $5,000 became an endowment for the Gilmore Memorial Labor Law Award. It will be presented for the first time on Law Day, 1983.

Brogan

A memorial scholarship fund has been established in the Law School by classmates of Frank Brogan, a 1980 law alumnus.

Brogan was practicing in Atlanta when he died suddenly of heart failure September 19, 1981. He was a native of Clifton, New Jersey and he came to the Georgia Law School after graduating from Boston University with a degree in finance.

While in Law School, Brogan was research editor of the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law. He was a member of the Environmental Law Society and served on the staff of the Slip Sheet newspaper.

Friends of Frank Brogan organized a committee which made personal contributions to the Brogan Scholarship Fund and assisted the Law School's alumni office in a special solicitation last winter.

Once it is endowed with sufficient funding to produce a yearly tuition stipend, the scholarship will be awarded to a law student who intergrates his or her legal education with a commitment to the arts. This provision was established by the committee in recognition of Frank Brogan's interest in and talent for the performing arts.

As of June 30, the Brogan Fund held $3,305 in contributions from 59 donors. Gifts to the fund can be sent to the Law School Alumni Office. Checks should be made payable to: The University of Georgia Foundation; for: Law School Fund-Brogan Scholarship.

Gilmore

The Law Class of 1942 will hold its 40th reunion on October 16. The group will meet for a cocktail party at the home of Verner Chaffin, "permanent class secretary," after the football game with Vanderbilt, and continue with a dinner at the History Village Inn. The Law School Association wishes to acknowledge the work of these alumni who served knowledge the work of these alumni who served as host chairmen for regional alumni dinners and parties this year: Robert Flournoy, Marietta; Marvin Zion, Decatur; Upshaw Bentley, Athens; and Thomas Dennard, Brunswick.

During the Annual Fund year which ended June 30, 1982, the newly-established "Dean's Club" enlisted 103 charter members. The "Dean's Club" is an honor level of giving

The "Dean's Club" is an honor level of giving which promotes the contribution of $150 or more per year to the Law School Fund of The University of Georgia Foundation.

Dean's Club membership entitles the donor to receive a high quality pen-and-ink drawing of the older portion of the Law School building.

Solicitation for the Dean's Club continues in the 1982-83 Annual Fund year. Gifts can be made by preparing a check payable

TO: The University of Georgia Foundation

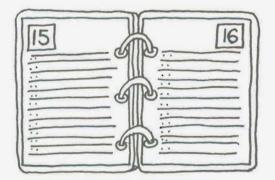

FOR: Law School Fund

Contributions may be mailed to The University of Georgia Alumni Development Office or to the Law School's Alumni Programs Office.

Records of the Athens-Clarke County Charter Commission have been given to the Law Library for use by researchers and students studying local government. Clarke Ivey, right, who was chairman of the commission, presented the documents to Erwin Surrency, Law Librarian. The commission worked for more than a year to develop a proposed charter for consolidation of Athens and Clarke County governments. The proposal was defeated in a February, 1982 referendum.

The Law Library staff welcomes the contributions by alumni of the records and briefs of important litigation, as well as copies of the ordinances and codes of cities and counties in Georgia. The library also continues its acquisition of sketches and photographs of Georgia courthouses. Please contact Erwin Surrency (1-404-542-8480) if you have items you wish to donate to the Law Library.

When F.M. Bird of Atlanta made his 1981 contribution to the Bicentennial Fund campaign of The University of Georgia, he designated $1000 to the School of Law in honor of several faculty members under whom he studied. The Georgia Advocate is glad to recognize these professors whom Mr. Bird, a 1924 law graduate, wishes to honor: Dean Sylvanus Morris, Andrew J. Cobb, Walter G. Cornett, Stephen C. Upson, and Robert L. McWhorter.
