I. SUMMARY

The year 1984-85 was an exceptionally momentous one for The University of Georgia School of Law. First of all, we celebrated 125 years of formal legal education in Georgia, and secondly, we joined with The University in celebrating its 200th anniversary.

The third item of great significance was the sabbatical reinspection of the Law School by the Association of American Law Schools and the American Bar Association. Every seven years a five-member team visits the campus, inspects the Law School's programs and issues a report to the accreditation committees of both national organizations. We hosted the team's visit March 13-15, and the team made its report to the ABA on June 21-23. I am pleased to share some of the findings in the report.

First of all, a bit of background is in order. Following the last inspection in 1978, the team reported the following: "Georgia truly has the opportunity to become one of the jewels in the crown of American legal education, and it is clearly on the verge of it."

This year's team began its summary of findings with this overview:

"The 1978 site evaluation report described Georgia as a law school on the move. In the intervening seven years there is little room for doubt that Georgia has arrived. All of the major aspirational objectives stated in the Law School's 1977 self-study have been substantially achieved and higher goals adopted. The entire law school community exudes the sweet smell of success. Like any complex and vital academic institution, small imperfections continue to surface and minor disagreements mark a generally tranquil scene, but the overall impression is that one of the oldest public law schools in the nation has finally achieved the level of excellence to which its founders committed themselves in 1859."

This evaluation is one in which the faculty and students take great pride. It is gratifying to know that others in the larger setting of legal education take note of the unbounded momentum for achieving excellence at The University of Georgia School of Law.

I am pleased to review several indicators of the quality to which the inspection team alluded:

A. Admissions and Quality of the Student Body

While applications to law schools nationwide have declined 8 per cent this year (continuing a downward trend), applications at Georgia have increased by 27.3 per cent. For the fall semester, 1544 applications had been received as of June 30. These applicants come from 49 states (only New Mexico is missing), three Canadian provinces and seven other nations.

It is anticipated that the entering class will have a medium LSAT score of 38 (660 on the old scale), with a median grade point average of 3.41. We should be able to maintain our ranking of 24th among the 174 ABA-accredited law schools with regard to student body quality as measured by these yardsticks.

Student recruitment today is very competitive. During this year, only 334 Georgians scored in the 34 to 48 range on the LSAT. This limited pool was recruited heavily by a number of law schools. Fortunately, 70 per cent of the 334 applied for admission to this law school. This showing of interest could be due, in part, to the fact that Barron's business magazine named the Georgia Law School as one of the best buys in the nation in legal education.

B. Bar Examination Results

Georgia's graduates continue to do well on the bar exam. During the past year, 194 Georgia graduates sat for the bar with 180 passing the first time. This resulted in a passing rate of 93.2 per cent.

State-wide, the passing rate was 70 per cent, which was the highest it has been in years.

C. Placement

Georgia graduates are still sought after in the job market. This year's class is reporting a 74 per cent placement rate, which is ten per cent higher than the rate at the same time last year. Also, 56 per cent of the first year class (102 students) have summer jobs and 76 per cent of the second year class (152 students) have summer jobs. In fact, a number of the rising third year students are so popular that they are splitting the summer between employers. This explains why summer school enrollment stands at only 56 students this year.

The overwhelming choice of the graduates continues to be private practice. Of the class of 1985, 73 per cent chose private law firms, and 75 per cent of those firms are in Georgia. Fifteen of the graduates from this year are going into judicial clerkships.

The most exciting news from the placement office is that one of the 1984 graduates, Bruce P. Brown, was chosen to clerk for the Chief Justice of the United States beginning in September. Brown was the executive editor of the Georgia Law Review in his third year, and he clerked this year on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia. The Georgia Law School is very proud to have an alumnus chosen by Chief Justice Warren Burger. Brown is the second graduate to serve a Supreme Court clerkship. The first was Benna Solomon, a 1978 graduate, who clerked for Justice Byron White.

Also in the placement area, the summer clerkship program in England is in its second year and four interns have been placed with firms in London and in Brighton. The interview consortium between our third year students and law firms in Washington, D.C. is successful each year, as is the on-campus interview program, with 164 employers scheduling interviews in the building last fall.

D. Student Co-curriculum Programs

The ABA-AALS inspection report praised the Law School's student co-curricular activities such as the Law Review, the Journal, the Moot Court and Mock Trial programs. The Sibley lecture by Solicitor General Rex Lee and a response by Professor Jeff Stone was published in the Law Review, and the issue received a great deal of national media attention. For the fifth time in six years, the team from Georgia represented the region in the finals of the National Moot Court competition. Of special interest this fall will be the visit of the Grey's Inn team from London. They will be our guests for a series of "moots." It will be our opportunity to repay the barristers for our Moot Court team's visit to England in the spring of 1983.

E. Faculty Productivity

The inspection report was highly complementary of the Georgia Law School faculty: "The quantity of production of books and articles places the school's faculty among the highest ranking of American law schools." An example of this productivity is the work of Louis Sohn Woodruff Professor of international law. He was awarded the prestigious Grenville Clarke Prize from Dartmouth for his work in worldwide dispute resolution.

Maxine Thomas was named a Kellogg National Fellow. She is one of a select group of 43 young American professionals chosen for the fellowship, which funds a self-designed program of study, and helps to build a cadre of leadership. She will study the property law aspects of Black-owned farm land.

Julian McDonnell is the co-author of a new book on non-code law in commercial cases. It is Common Law Equity Under the Commercial Code, which was published by Warren, Gorham and Lamont in April.

Eric Holmes published four books during the year 1985. These included the second edition of Cases and Materials on the Law of Insurance with William Young, which was published by Foundation Press. It is the leading textbook on insurance law in the nation. Sarajane Love is the author of a book entitled Louisiana Probate and Successions Procedure.

Thomas Schoenbaum authored Environmental Law Problems with Ronald Rosenberg. It was published by Foundation Press this year. James Smith, visiting assistant professor, authored Federal Real Estate Taxation with Samansky. It was published by Law Journal Seminars Press.

The American Bar Association Section of Taxation published Walter Hellerstein's State and Local Taxation of Natural Resources in the Federal System: Legal, Economic and Political Perspectives, which is a two-volume treatise.

A number of other books were published in new editions by our faculty members.

F. The Public Service and Research Program

In addition to hosting international scholars and establishing exchange programs with foreign universities, the Rusk Center sponsored several programs this year which provided a direct benefit to business investors in Georgia. One was the United States-Japan Trade Study group which met in November. Another was a conference co-sponsored by the Rusk Center and the University of Georgia International Trade Development Center on "Legal and Financial Aspects of Exporting Wood Products." The Center joined forces with the College of Agriculture to co-sponsor a conference on International Trade in agriculture which was held in Athens in March.

The Institute of Continuing Legal Education held a record number of programs and reached a new high in registrants this year. ICLE presented 64 programs attended by 11,210 registrants.

The Institute of Continuing Judicial Education undertook an experimental field activity for judges this year. A group of trial judges visited adult correctional institutions throughout the state. For many, it was their first exposure to Georgia's prison facilities.

G. Private Funds Development

One reason for the success of the Georgia Law School, according to the inspection report, is the extent to which the School has raised private funds to supplement state resources. The state provides sufficient money to support a good law school, and private resources makes the difference between good and excellent. The School utilizes an income of $850,000 per year from an endowment, including pledges and deferred gifts, of $10 million. To reach a new plateau of excellence, an endowment of $16 million is needed. One of the disturbing things this year is the fact that the percentage of alumni giving to the Law School Fund is down even though there was a 16 per cent increase in the total dollar contributions. While 28 per cent of Georgia law alumni give to the annual fund each year only 16 per cent earmark for the Law School. The levels of participation at our competitor schools are:

Wake Forest: 55 per cent

Duke: 46 per cent

Florida: 30 per cent

Yale: 51 per cent

An effort to combat this trend has involved two things: (1) the hiring of Frank Brookins as the Law School's first development representative; and (2) the initiating of a class agent system for encouraging alumni giving.

H. The 125th Anniversary Celebration

This year was filled with a series of events designed to recapture the historical significance of the Law School's founding 125 years ago. The festivities began with a dinner and comedy performance for law alumni coming to campus for a football weekend. The musical comedy, called "The Libel Show," highlighted the teaching careers of several legendary Professors. Also, an audio-visual presentation on the history of the Law School was premiered at the fall meeting. Other events of the year of historical interest were the reopening of the Joseph Henry Lumpkin House and the presentation of English Colonial judicial robes to the School.

CONCLUSION

In the seven year period since the last ABA-AALS accreditation review, the School of Law has compiled a record of accomplishment which would indicate to the 1978 team that their predictions for continuing progress were accurate. Some of these milestones are: the opening of the new law library annex in 1981, the move from the quarter to the semester system in 1983, the installation of computerized research systems (LEXIS, 1978 and WESTLAW , 1983); expansion of the LL.M. program, out-of-state tuition waivers for top applicants; the rapid growth of the Institute of Continuing Judicial Education (established about the same time as the 1978 inspection); and bringing the Rusk Center to a full operational status.

None of the above could have been accomplished without the backing of state and private money and the administrative forbearance to get the job done. The 1985 team referred to "the extraordinarily favorable environment for improvement that now exists" in the report's description of the working relationship between the Dean of the School of Law and the President of the University of Georgia.

It has been an excellent working relationship, and the President of this institution has expressed his support for continued progress. The successes of the past seven years have provided the confidence one needs to go about shaping even larger goals for the future. These goals were expressed in the faculty's Self-Study which was prepared over a twelve-month period last year. The key concerns and objectives are:

a. Demand for Legal Education

The impact of a national decline in enrollment and a lessened demand for the J.D. degree will eventually force the Law School to choose between maintaining class size by admitting a somewhat less qualified student body, or maintaining quality while admitting a smaller class each year. The choice of quality over quantity is undoubtedly best for the school in the long run, for the student body ultimately reflects on the school's reputation and thus influences its selection by bright applicants in future years. In the meantime, however, the University System of Georgia is funded by the Legislature according to a formula that is based upon credit hours produced. As enrollment declines, the Law School will bring less revenue into the University of Georgia. This situation will require negotiation on the future funding levels of the School of Law.

One probable change in the student body is the admission of a greater proportion of nonresident students. Now that a second state-supported, ABA-accredited school of law has been established in the state, competition for the most qualified in-state applicants will probably force either a decline in the admissions criteria or an expansion in the geographic diversity of admitted applicants. The University of Georgia was recently cited among the top five law schools nationally in terms of offering low cost legal education to a highly selected student body. The Law School's high standing and its relatively low cost attract many highly qualified nonresident applicants each year. Some of these are currently denied admission in order to serve in-state demand which appears to be declining. Greater flexibility in the in-state vs. out-of-state admissions ratio would facilitate maintaining high standards during the anticipated decline in the applicant population.

b. Expanding the LL.M. Program

The LL.M. program is connected with the Law School's widely recognized specialty in international and comparative law. Expansion of this program, if done cautiously and by admitting only the most highly qualified applicants, could further enhance the quality of study in this speciality, as well as compensate for some degree of declining enrollment in the J.D. program. Currently the University receives a number of inquiries about the program from foreign law graduates, even though the program is not publicized in a systematic or formal way. If an attempt were made to promote the LL.M. program at foreign law schools, the potential for an increase in applications could be realized. We are seeking additional funds for graduate assistantships this year. Other potential sources of additional financial aid for international students includes seeking the support of foreign corporations who have significant business interests in the United States.

c. Rusk Center Research Program

The Law Library currently has a large collection of international and comparative law materials. To assure continued, extensive use of this outstanding collection, a research program attracting legal scholars from the United States and foreign nations needs to be given formal recognition and support. An exchange program would further enrich the international resources of the school.

The Rusk Center's facilities offer a significant opportunity for the University of Georgia School of Law to attract funded research from outside sources, including U.S. and international businesses and government agencies. Negotiations are underway with private firms to underwrite studies of nuclear licensing here and abroad, export barriers for agricultural products, and other matters of special interest to the state and its residents.

d. Expanded Physical Plant

The Law School currently enjoys an attractive, efficient, and well-maintained physical plant. But room is still short for many desirable activities. Library space is at times insufficient for student demand. Space for LL.M. students is quite limited, interfering with their studies. Room for visiting scholars, and a permanent home for the Rusk Center, are essential to expansion and diversification of the international program. Additional library space will be needed in the near future, not only to house the ever-expanding collection, but also to house the computers which are the new tools of legal research. Finally, a conference center would facilitate the kinds of continuing education programs that the Law School believes will be essential for professional competents. "Law Center South" is a long-term goal of the School of Law.

e. Increased Private Support

Without doubt private support is an important alternative source of funding. Currently private funds support a number of endowed professorships, significantly strengthening the faculty, and a strong scholarship program, strengthening the student body. Especially if enrollment drops sharply in the near future, the Law School's income from the state may drop. In addition to strengthening the scholarship program, we also should seek to increase private funding for co-curricular activities such as the law review, journal and moot court program. Another goal is the establishment of four new faculty positions, to fill gaps in course coverage, further reduce the student/faculty ratio, and provide guidance to an increased number of LL.M. candidates.

There will always be a vigilance to keep in motion the factors which lead to excellence, and these underlying motivators bear mentioning as well: recruit and enroll the top students academically; once they are enrolled, offer a rigorous program of study under instruction from a competent and productive faculty, make available the physical plant and library resources as tools for legal education, and assist their efforts in seeking professional employment.

To perform less than excellent on all fronts is to step backward and forego what is necessary to the School's future as expressed in its Self-Study.

2. Financial Aid

Scholarship assistance provided to students enrolled in the Juris Doctor program of the School of Law during 1984-85 academic year amounted to $307,500. This was composed of $240,000 in Law school funds and $67,500 in funds made available through the Regents' Opportunity Award Program. In addition, 15 JD program and 5 LL.M. program students received Tuition Equalization Scholarships totalling $56,400. The distribution of these scholarship funds is reported below.

First Year	$107,500
Non-Minority		$73,500
Minority		$34,000
Second Year	$ 87,000
Non-Minority		$67,000
Minority		$20,000
Third Year	$113,000

A list of the scholarships administered by the School of Law follows:

a. A. Pratt Adams Memorial Scholarships Fund

This fund was created by the Board of Directors of the Citizen and Southern Banks in Georgia to honor Adams, Savannah lawyer and former C & S Board Chairman.

b. Claude B. Barrett Fund

This fund was established in 1969 to honor Claude B. Barrett of Houston, Texas. Mr. Barrett was a 1918 graduate of the Georgia Law School.

c. B. Hugh Burgess Fund

This fund makes available assistance to a needy DeKalb County resident. This was created by a stipulation in the will of Mr. B. Hugh Burgess in June, 1973.

d. Bryant T. Castellow Memorial Scholarship Fund

This scholarship fund was established in memory of the late U.S. Congressman from Georgia's Third District. He graduated from the School of Law in 1897. The Castellow fund provides scholarships based on demonstrated ability and financial need.

e. Welborn B. Cody Memorial Scholarship

This scholarship fund was established in 1976 in memory of Welborn B. Cody, a member of the firm of Kilpatrick, Cody, Rogers, McClatchey and Regenstein. Cody was a 1921 graduate of the Georgia Law School. Scholarship recipient selections are based on the quality of high motivation as well as financial need.

f. Law School Composite Fund

The Law School fund is a part of and is administered by the University of Georgia Foundation. It is supported by annual alumni giving.

g. Frank A. Constangy Memorial Scholarship

This scholarship was established in 1972 to honor Mr. Frank A. Constangy, a distinguished Atlanta practitioner in the field of labor law who obtained both his bachelor and law degrees from the University of Georgia.

h. American Bar Association -- Council of Legal Education Opportunity Scholarship

This is a federally funded program established in 1969 which seeks to provide economically disadvantaged students an opportunity to attend an accredited law school. CLEO provides an annual living stipend to those program graduates who continue in Law School.

i. Newell Edenfield Scholarship Fund

Judge Newell Edenfield, Chief Judge of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Georgia, provided a scholarship fund before his death in December, 1981.

j. John and Mary Franklin Foundation Law Scholarship Fund

This scholarship fund was established in 1979 with the pledge of $100,000 endowment to enable the school to recruit outstanding Georgia residents.

k. Edward J. Grassman Scholarship Fund

This fund was created in 1980 by a gift from the estate of Edward J. Grassman, a New Jersey businessman with Kaolin properties in Georgia.

l. Roy V. Harris Scholarship Fund

This fund honors an alumnus of the Georgia Law School who graduated in 1919. Mr. Harris served in the Georgia General Assembly and on the Board of Regents.

m. Milton M. Ratner Scholarship and Loan Fund

This fund was established in 1973 by the Milton M. Ratner Foundation of Detroit, Michigan. Ratner, a Detroit residential builder, lived near Calhoun, Georgia upon retirement. This fund provides scholarships and loans to law students based on demonstrated academic ability and financial need.

n. Dean and Virginia Rusk Fund

This fund provides fellowships for LL.M. candidates accepted for study in the area of international law.

o. Marion Smith Scholarship Fund

This fund was bequeathed to the School of Law by Lucian Smith Wilson, daughter of Marion Smith, Atlanta lawyer and former chairman of the Board of Regents.

p. The Southeastern Bankruptcy Law Institute Scholarship Fund

This fund provides scholarships for students who evidence an interest in bankruptcy, creditors' rights and corporate reorganization. The Institute is a non-profit organization formed for the purpose of providing further studies in bankruptcy law.

q. Hughes Spalding Scholarships

These scholarships honor the late Hughes Spalding, Law class of 1910. Spalding practiced law in Atlanta until his death in 1969. He was a dedicated supporter of education in Georgia as chairman of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia and as president of the University Alumni Society.

r. Talmadge Law Scholarship Fund

This fund was created in 1979 to provide aid to worthy students. It was the scholarship funds component of the $3,000,000 capital gifts campaign conducted by the Law School from 1977-1980.

s. Robert Troutman Scholarship

This fund is in honor of Robert B. Troutman, Sr. who was a senior partner in the law firm of King and Spalding, Atlanta. It was established to grant aid to the Editor-in-chief of the Georgia Law Review.

t. Woodruff Scholarships

The purpose of the Woodruff Scholarships is to attract qualified Georgians to the study of law at the University of Georgia. The School of Law was assisted in this purpose in 1973 by a gift of over one-half million dollars from the Woodruff Fund of Atlanta. The Foundation in turn established a law school scholarship fund with this grant to finance a number of awards each year to be known as Woodruff Scholarships.

u. Vasser Woolley Scholarships

These scholarships honor Vasser Woolley, Jr. who was born in Atlanta in 1896 and was killed in the Paris air crash of 1962 which took the lives of 122 Atlantans. This active Georgia businessman distinguished himself in the field of textiles and real estate.

C. Academic Evaluation

1. Academic Performance

Class of 1985

In September of 1982, 261 students registered as members of the Class of 1985. In August 1983, 243 (241 + 2 transfer) registered and in August 1984, 246 (244 + 2 transfer).

Including transfer students, 245 received their degrees in May 1985 or July 1985. This includes a retention rate of 94% of the original first year class.

Class of 1986

In August 1983, 216 students registered as members of the class of 1986. In August 1984, 200 (197 + 3 transfer) registered and in the spring 200 took final examinations -- a retention rate of 92.5% of the original class members.

Class of 1987

In August 1984, 192 students registered as members of the Class of 1987, and in May, 183 sat for examinations. Until all examinations are graded and cumulative averages computed, it is not known how many first year students have maintained the necessary academic standing to continue law studies. The retention rate for the first year class can be determined at the time of fall semester registration.

2. Bar Exam Results

Under the provisions of an act passed by Georgia General Assembly in January 1974, third year law students are eligible to take the Georgia Bar Examination if they have completed at least five semesters of law studies leading to the J.D. degree.

The Class of 1985, therefore, is comprised of December and May graduates who could have passed the examination in either July 1984, February 1985, or July 1985, and still be considered as having become a member of the State Bar of Georgia during the year of his or her graduation.

Of the 244 seniors who graduated in December 1984, May 1985, or July 1985, 189 took the July 1985 Georgia Bar Examination. The July 1985 Bar Exam has not yet been administered. The results are as follows:

a.	Number of Georgia law graduates who sat for Georgia Bar Examination in July, 1984:	18
b.	Number of Georgia law graduates who sat for Georgia Bar Examination in February, 1985:	189
	Total:	207
c.	Number of seniors who passed July 1984 Bar Exam:	17
d.	Number of seniors who passed February 1985 Bar Exam:	163
	Total	180
e.	Number of seniors who failed July 1984 Bar Exam but passed February 1985 Bar Exam:	1
	Total	181
f.	Number of seniors who failed July 1984 Bar Exam:	1
g.	Number of seniors who failed February 1985 Bar Exam:	13
	Total	14
h.	Percentage of graduates who took the Georgia Bar Examination in July 1984 or February 1985 and passed it:	93.3%

D. Clinical Experience

1. Legal Aid and Defender Society

The Legal Aid and Defender Society continued to provide practical skills training for students through their participation in the representation of clients of the clinic. The case work of the clinic has continued to increase. Over 1650 criminal defendants were represented in Clarke County Courts and sixty-five clients were represented in Oconee County Courts. The clinic also represented approximately 250 indigent persons in civil cases in the two counties. The work of the Prisoner Legal Counseling Project also increased. Over 8000 inmates were interviewed by students and staff attorneys of the Project.

Several changes made during the past two years have greatly increased the educational opportunities for students enrolled in the Legal Aid course. First, all students in the course now meet weekly with the Assistant Director in a classroom at the Law School for lecture and discussion on topics concerning the work of the clinic. These class meetings are intended to integrate the student's experiences in representing clients of the clinic with the more traditional curriculum of the Law School. In addition, a new coursebook was developed for all students enrolled in the course.

During the 1984-85 academic year, a program was begun in which a group of selected third year students represented indigent clients in administrative hearings. Representation of clients in Social Security Hearings, unemployment hearings, and Housing Authority hearings requires students to gather facts, conduct research, and present the case persuasively to a hearing officer. Previously, the opportunity to develop these advocacy skills had been limited to those students certified to practice in court under the Third Year Practice Act.

Another new program implemented this year is an appellate clinic. Under the joint supervision of the Director of Legal Research and Writing and the Assistant Director of Legal Aid, selected third year students worked exclusively on appeals. These students read transcripts, conducted research, framed the issues on appeal and drafted the appellate brief. These students built upon the skills developed in the first year legal writing course by working for the first time with an actual record and transcript.

The full impact of the conversion to the semester system was felt in the past year. The extra four weeks students spend in the course under the semester system has afforded the opportunity for longer orientation periods and for increased instruction in such subjects as interviewing, counseling, and local court organization and procedures. Another benefit is that students now get increased supervision and instruction from the staff attorneys. The ratio of supervising attorneys to students is now 1:6, a figure which is a vast improvement over earlier years.

2. The Prosecutorial Clinic

The thirteenth year of operation of the prosecutorial clinic program was marked by continued participation in local prosecutorial activity and special attention to fundamental trial skills. Forty-three second and third year law students were enrolled during 1984-85. Approximately 35 second year students wrote tryout memos during the spring as a means of application for one of the 21 entering positions. For the past ten years, demand has exceeded the slots available by a 2:1 margin.

The Clinic continues to operate based on the premise that legal education cannot be complete without attention to the practical aspect of trial practice. Prosecution has remained a successful vehicle for offering clinical experiences for law students. The experience provides an exercise in carrying the burden of proof, a responsibility which requires preparation and investigation. It is excellent training for understanding the principles of evidence, criminal law, criminal procedure and trial practice.

For the first time, an intensive program of instruction and practical exercises was used to accelerate third year students' readiness for court. All students met for seven evenings at the School of Law during the first two weeks of the fall semester. Second year students played roles for third year students to work extensively on interviewing, examining, cross-examining and impeaching witnesses. The results of these exercises were confirmed by the participation of one student in a jury trial after just six weeks of Magistrate Court hearings. One byproduct of the intensive program was the success of Clinic students in trial competition later in the fall. For the coming fall, the Law School's newly arrived video equipment and newly converted seminar room/courtroom will be used extensively.

Second year students investigated 679 felony cases in 1984-85. Instead of contrived or simulated exercises, clinic students took cases as they were made, developed interviewing skills with police, victims and witnesses as they found them, evaluated and summarized the case for prosecutorial merit, and applied those facts to the laws of Georgia.

Though they wrote eight appellate briefs to the Court of Appeals of Georgia and one brief to the Supreme Court of Georgia, third year students concentrated on courtroom experiences. In addition to preparing the 679 cases for courts of inquiry in the Magistrate's Court of Athens-Clarke County (an average of 12 actual hearings per student), four students tried felony trials before juries during the fall semester. Their participation involved helping with voir dire, making the opening statement and examining most of the State's witnesses. This was the lowest number of trials in seven years, but it represented participation in almost 14 percent of the cases actually tried before juries in Clarke County. Additionally, several formal probation revocation and motion to suppress hearings were prosecuted by clinic students under the Director's supervision.

In addition to the extensive courtroom work and preparation, the Clinic had a weekly one-hour period of formalized instruction. This year's topics were the rules of evidence, pretrial criminal practice, plea bargaining, and sentencing alternatives.

3. Legal Research and Writing Program

The required Legal Research and Writing course for first-year students remains the core of the law School's Legal Research and Writing Program. The course contributes to the first-year student's development of legal analysis, research, and writing skills through both classroom instruction and practical experience. During the 1984-85 academic year, three full-time instructors taught the students the fundamentals of legal writing in sections of approximately 70 students. Students were required to complete a systematic library research project, to write two law office memoranda of varying complexity, to prepare an appellate brief, and to participate in at least two rounds of appellate oral argument. Additionally, instruction in the use of LEXIS and WESTLAW, computerized legal research data bases, was made available during the spring semester by the library staff.

The Legal Research and Writing course has undergone some changes in the past several years that have greatly increased its effectiveness in teaching important skills. Classroom instruction in the course has increased, new texts and other teaching materials have been developed and used, and ungraded practice problems have been added to the graded assignments to increase feedback to students. Conversion to the semester system has allowed the instructors to spend more time on legal bibliography and research techniques. Finally, the instructors have written an extensive Computer-Assisted Instruction Program for citation form. That program will be integrated in the course during fall semester 1985 and should be quite helpful to students.

The Legal Research and Writing Program began an expansion beyond the first-year course that will be continued during the 1985-86 academic year. An Appellate Clinic was begun under the joint supervision of the Law School's Legal Aid and Defender Society and the Director of Legal Research and Writing. This clinic allows second- and third-year students to expand the legal research and writing skills acquired during the first-year course by applying these skills to actual appellate cases rather than hypothetical ones. Students are responsible for reading the trial transcripts of the case, formulating the issues on appeal, researching the applicable law, and writing the brief.

The Legal Research and Writing Program will be expanded in a number of other ways during the 1985-86 academic year. During the spring semester, an elective seminar in drafting pre-trial litigation documents will be offered for second- and third-year students. The course should fill a long-recognized need to incorporate the teaching of drafting skills into the Law School's writing curriculum.

Planning is also underway for programs for students who came to law school with poor basic writing skills and for foreign LL.M. students who have particular writing needs arising from English language problems.

E. Graduate Studies Program

During the 1984-85 academic year, fourteen students were enrolled in the LL.M. degree program. Five Europeans, graduates of universities in Germany, Austria, the Netherlands and Belgium, are doing comparative research on various governance and monetary issues. Two graduates of American law schools are working on international legal issues, as are students from Thailand, the United Arab Emirates, Taiwan, and the People's Republic of China. Two lawyers from Nicaragua and India are examining law of the sea and humanitarian issues and a Korean lawyer is pursuing a two-year study program relating to economic regulation.

The Graduate Studies Committee has expanded the program this year, as recommended in the Law School's Self-Study. All applicants must submit a proposed program of coursework and research before admission. Because admission review is stringent to insure serious, goal-oriented graduate study at the Law School, the LL.M. students now in residence have done well and are qualified to pursue unique job opportunities. This year also marked the start of a special graduate seminar designed to provide an overview of American law, in which 18 faculty members participated.

The admission process for 1985-86 is nearing completion. Eighteen students with superior education and diverse backgrounds from Holland, Belgium, Germany, Greece, India, Italy, Korea, Taiwan, South Africa and the U.S. have been admitted. Many will come to the Law School with several years of legal experience in government, business, law school teaching or law firm practice. Several will receive funds from national governments, law firms, universities or foundations. The students will undertake comparative research on contemporary problems associated with international relations, trade and investment at the national and international levels, national governance and private rights. The program will be under the direction of Professor Gabriel Wilner, our first Director of Graduate Studies, who will assume his new position in the fall.

Although we have not made any attempt to promote it, our LL.M. program has acquired international stature. The fact that most of the program's participants are funded by foreign governments, law firms, universities abroad and private foundations, illustrates the high value others place on LL.M. degree work in the Law School.

Professional Service

Educational Director, Joint Editorial Board for the Uniform Probate Code, a continuing effort devoted to development, promotion and enactment of laws designed to improve and simplify laws relating to control of and disposition of individual and family savings. The responsibilities include: (a) serving as national coordinator of a 12 person group of representatives of The American Bar Association's Section on Real Property, Probate & Trust Law, The American College of Probate Counsel, and the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (NCCUSL) who constitute the Joint Editorial Board for the Uniform Probate Code (JEB-UPC); (b) serving as a national information center regarding the Uniform Probate Code as presently enacted in 14 states and under consideration in several others; (c) serving as the principal liaison between the activities and interests of JEB-UPC and the officers and committee chairmen of NCCUSL.

In 1984-85, the principal projects emanating from these roles included: (a) organized two meetings of Joint Editorial Board, one held in Denver, the second in Chicago; (b) consulted with several authors of forthcoming books and articles concerning probate and related matters; (c) consulted with Counsel, Southeastern Bell Telephone Co., St. Louis, Missouri, concerning probate avoidance via "transfer-on-death" stock registrations; (d) heavy activity with much correspondence and telephone conferences with various Wisconsin officials and proponents of Wisconsin's recently enacted marital Property Act; and (e) consultant to U.S. State Department, regarding U.S. ratification and implementation of International Will Convention.

Vice-President and Member, Executive Committee, National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

Committee Member, Marital Property Act project, NCCUSL. The project was approved by NCCUSL in August, 1983. It is a uniform or model statute designed for enactment by all states, including the forty-two jurisdictions that follow a common law (rather than community property) system of organizing ownership of property by married individuals.

Together with the Reporter and two other members of the UMPA drafting committee, I appeared before a legislative committee of the Wisconsin General Assembly in December, 1984 to assist the effort to prepare amendments to Wisconsin's recently enacted Marital Property Act. Earlier in the year I made a like appearance before a committee of the Colorado House of Representatives.

Committee Member, Personal Custodian Trust Act project, NCCUAL. This is a new drafting project of the Uniform Law Conference which contemplates extension of asset registration in the form of "A custodian for B" to adults. The custodian form, now widely recognized by Gifts to Minors legislation, would enable adults to set up custodial stand-by trusts to protect against the contingency of future incompetence.

IV. LAW LIBRARY

The following is an incorporation of a report to Dean J. Ralph Beaird:

A. Introduction

The Law Library, as did the Law School, underwent its inspection by the American Bar Association during this academic year. The Report of the Visitation Committee was favorable. It stated that "the facilities are in excellent condition," and "the staff gets high marks from both students and faculty for their commitment to service and for their ability to help in the research process." However, this report did touch upon several minor problems including the lack of space and the budget. Otherwise, the report was positive. It was obvious that the Self-Study prepared by the law library staff during the academic year 1983-1984 was useful and that the efforts of the Law Library to integrate itself into the research and educational programs of the Law School has been successful.

B. Collection

On April 30, 1985, the Law Library's collection consisted of 304,759 bound volumes; 4,187 reels of microfilm, or 12,561 equivalent volumes; and 206,889 microfiche or 51,722 equivalent volumes. This constitutes a total collection of 371,367 physical and equivalent volumes. The Law Library continues to rank among the top twenty-two law libraries in the country. This has been the result of the strong support given it by the administration of the University as well as the efforts of Dean J. Ralph Beaird. Dean Beaird has stated that he realizes the Law Library must have an endowment to enhance the book budget and efforts are underway to raise a sum for this purpose. During this year, a special account was established where small gifts could be deposited and used by the Law Library. This is not an endowment but rather an account in which all small gifts can be deposited and later used. This is an improvement over previous administrative practice of placing these sums in the equipment (book) budget. The Library continues to trim its expenditures resulting in some savings to make up for the increasing inflation rate. As each serial invoice is paid, the Acquisitions Librarian, Mr. Jose Pages, continues to question whether the item is necessary for the programs supported by the Library. If the expenditures can not be justified, the subscription is cancelled after full consultation with those who have a potential interest in that publication.

C. Budget

At the beginning of this academic year (July, 1984), the equipment (book) budget was increased by the sum of $37,500. A part of this increase was used to purchase a word processor and to cover some of the deficits in the operating budget. Savings from the salary account and some funds originally credited to the operating budget were put back into the equipment (book) budget. An additional sum of $25,000 was given to the Law Library to purchase the necessary copiers which will be discussed in another part of this report. The attached chart will show the total expenditures by the Law Library for books as of April 30th with an indication of the sources from which the funds were derived. When the final figures are prepared at the end of this academic year, all expenditures will be for subscriptions.

D. Public Service

No longer is public service staff limited to physically finding a book for a patron, determining its existence, or looking up some data. Public service is responsible for a wide range of new duties unknown a decade ago, which requires a change in job descriptions and more staff.

As other assignments are demanded of the Library, there is a perception that any problems in staffing can be solved by hiring work study students or law students disregarding; a. their availability, b. the time involved in supervising students, c. the time involved in their training, d. the time involved in determining whether they will be available when needed. Increasingly, it is becoming more difficult to obtain students willing to work in the Library, especially at the circulation desk. The Library has a policy of not hiring first year law students to serve at the Circulation Desk because during the hours when the Library is open and no staff present, a rudimentary knowledge of the Library is essential plus the ability to communicate. In the positions at the desk, the average tenure is less than a semester. Out of the forty or more students hired in any one academic year, no more than two will be working in the Library the following year to qualify for an increase in pay based upon longevity. Neither has it been possible to recruit work study students. In September, 1984, the Law Library requested nine work study students and were assigned six and of this number, five came to work.

The reason for this situation is more complex than the simple rationalization that students do not want to work. Students attend law school to get an education in preparation for a career at the bar. When an opportunity arises to work with a local lawyer or do research for a professor, such experience is considered more of an advancement in their careers than working in the Law Library. Undergraduates are hired to shelve books and to do other essential Library work but it is a strong feeling of the library staff that they do not fill our needs at the Circulation Desk. This is an issue to which the Library staff will devote some consideration during the upcoming academic year.

Experience has demonstrated that training on the legal data bases of LEXIS and WESTLAW is taking an increasing amount of staff time. In order to accommodate the largest number of students, the library staff scheduled computer training sessions throughout the academic year. A total of approximately 314 students were trained on either LEXIS or WESTLAW in a total of 24 training sessions in the Fall and 36 training sessions in the Spring Semester of approximately one hour duration. Special sessions were scheduled in August prior to the opening of the Fall Semester for the members of the GEORGIA LAW REVIEW and the GEORGIA JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL

AND COMPARATIVE LAW. Approximately 42 students were trained in these sessions. Another special training program was presented in the Fall for 10 graduate students enrolled in the Master of Laws program. All students do not take advantage of these training sessions when announced which is unfortunate. When the time approaches that they find clerkships and find that they are expected to know how to use the computer research services, then the students desire a crash program which is more time consuming than the regular programs. The staff attempts to accommodate all students. Certainly the method of instruction given in this Law Library is second to none.

Another reason the computerized legal information systems is absorbing more of the professional staff time lies in the fact the patron requires more aid in formulating his searches than formally was required with the book search. It is time that another professional librarian be added to the Library Staff to provide more search capability.

The Law Library administers the computer assisted instruction programs. This collection began with programs purchased from the University of Minnesota Center for Computer Assisted Instruction, which are revised periodically. Several new programs were acquired through the Center this academic year. Several were developed by the Harvard Computer Aided Legal Instruction Project, an active student group at Harvard University Law School. Another program acquired during the year was a game, THE DEBTOR CREDITOR GAME, which can be played by ten to thirty players. This program was designed to develop skills in the area of debtor creditor law. The most heavily used programs are those in the areas of evidence and professional responsibility.

The Law Library purchased for the use by the students a copy of the word processing program WORDSTAR, for use on the IBM PC computers which are dedicated to the use by law students. The level of use of this program is high. The first year law students used this program extensively in the preparation of their briefs.

The Public Service Division has begun the publication of a monthly NEWSLETTER to communicate procedures and announcements to the students. This Newsletter has been well received. A HANDBOOK is prepared at the beginning of each academic year describing the service of the Library and the location of the different parts of the collection in the Library.

The library staff frequently demonstrates the use of LEXIS and WESTLAW to groups sponsored by the Law School and the University. The staff receives favorable comments on these demonstrations. This demonstration has been shown to the candidates for admission to this law school and other visitors.

A new service which the public service division provides is the copying services.

E. Copiers

During the academic year of 1984-1985, the general university library became dissatisfied with the service provided by Garden State Copy Systems, Inc. who furnished copying machines and serviced them seven days a week. The experience of the Law Library was quite different from that claimed by the University librarians. The Law Library had only two copiers but found that on weekends at frequent intervals, the machines would run out of paper before the service personnel arrived, especially on Sundays. It was apparent that a third machine was needed but then there was the problem of providing the location and the necessary electrical wiring. This was under consideration and hopefully a solution would have been reached when it became painfully apparent that no improvement would meet the high demands set by the university library. Without the revenues generated in the libraries on the campus, it was assumed by everyone concerned that Garden State Copy Systems, Inc. would not be interested in continuing to provide this service when their contract expires in September, 1985. At that point, Mr. Rodriguez, head of Public Services, with his assistant, Miss Margaret Durkin, began to consider possible machines.

The first step was to consider the characteristics required in the machines in the Library. One of the essential requirements was that the copier use bond paper rather than roll paper and that the cost be no more than five cents in view of the fact that the main university library was planning to subsidize their program in order for copying to be kept at five cents. For this reason, the law library staff found that it could not operate a copying service by lease purchase machines and offer the service at that price.

After a great deal of study as indicated by the requirements set out in a memorandum to Dean Beaird, the staff considered the pros and cons of each machine thoroughly and selected the A.B. Dick model 7100.

The operation of these machines will add an additional burden to the library staff and at present, it is anticipated that these matters will be handled efficiently. Each member of the library staff will be trained to put paper into the machines and all copying machines will be loaded each afternoon and on Friday afternoons. Mr. Troy Carithers will be in charge of this procedure and will collect the coins from the coin boxes. Several of the machines will operate on cards only and these cards may be purchased from one of the three librarians in the public services area. This will mean that the sales of these cards will be limited to certain working hours of the day. This is necessitated by the fact that money is being handled and it was felt that the number of people handling it should be limited. An automatic change machine has been installed for convenience of users. We shall see whether the system works as it goes into effect September, 1985.

F. Library Hours

The hours the Law Library was open during the academic year were as follows:

Monday - Thursday	7:30 A.M. - 12 midnight
Friday	7:30 A.M. - 10 P.M.
Saturday	9:00 A.M. - 9 P.M.
Sunday	1:00 P.M. - 12 midnight

During the summer session:

Monday - Thursday	8:00 A.M. - 10 P.M.
Friday	8:00 A.M. - 5 P.M.
Saturday	9:00 A.M. - 5 P.M.
Sunday	1:00 P.M. - 6 P.M.

This academic year the Law Library was opened at 7:30 A.M. since the first day of classes on August 23, 1984, and continued doing so until the end of the Spring Semester in May, 1985. The Library was fortunate that a highly responsible student, David Blevins, was engaged during the entire year to be in charge of opening the Circulation Desk and the Reserve Collection at 7:30 A.M., and did not fail to open the Library but once during this entire period, which is a record in our experience. Also during the year, particularly close to and during exam periods, procedures were established to permit regular students to remain in the Library after locking the two buildings. We plan to continue working in collaboration with the Student Bar Association in the future to provide this additional service. During vacation periods access to the Library was also permitted to students working for the Law School journals and LLM students.

G. Archival Materials

The archival material held by the Law Library consisting of manuscripts and other items of historical significance has been reorganized and a new system for its preservation and use has been instituted. A collection of special significance to the Law School is approximately 250 letters written by members of the Lumpkin faculty between 1821 and 1862. Papers of Professor Sigmund Cohn and Dean J. Alton Hosch have been organized and filed in archival boxes. These collections are organized by types of materials and a short description of their general contents is prepared on a form and perhaps a full calendar is prepared where such treatment is warranted. A sample of the file sheet is attached to this report.

H. Computer

The major thesis of the self-study made by the law library staff centered on the effective use of the computer in Library operations. It became apparent that a program such as that developed and in use in the main university library did not necessarily meet the needs of the Law Library. An automated circulation system must be geared to handle reserve circulation for approximately 90% of all transactions in the Law Library are the loan of a book for a limited number of hours, not days or weeks! An elaborate ordering system for single titles is not justifiable where no more than twenty-five to thirty-five such orders are placed in a month. The majority of titles in the Law Library are received on a subscription basis and to improve the work of the library staff, any computerized library program should handle serials check-in. It is the ambition of the administration as well as the library staff to operate one of the leading law libraries in the country. For this reason, the need of the Law Library must be given consideration in deciding on a computerized library automation program. What works effectively for one type of institution does not work for another.

The library staff has spent a considerable amount of time appraising the Marvel system and before committing itself to this system, an opportunity should be afforded for a thorough evaluation of other programs designed specifically for law libraries.

I. Acquisitions

The biggest single event in this aspect of the Law Library's operation was the installment of the GAUNTLOS, a computerized acquisition service sponsored by the William W. Gaunt & Co. of Holmes Beach, Florida. This program is still in the experimental stages. The participation of the Law Library is to test the program and to give advice on its feasibility and development. The overall concept is to place orders with the Gaunt Company electronically rather than by mail. The feasibility of such a program, the resulting benefits, and similar questions will be evaluated. This Law Library is very fortunate to be participating in such a development.

The Law Library was able to spend approximately $20,000 during the year on new titles which limits the acquisitions of monographic titles and the expansion of the coverage of the collection. Texts are carefully chosen and it is with the hope that the titles selected will be among those most called for in the Library. Among the most notable items purchased were some state reports not found in the National Reporter System including Hazard's Pennsylvania Register containing some of the earliest decisions from that jurisdiction, and the Hawaii Federal Reports. The acquisitions of periodicals published by the Law Schools is a top priority and some eight or nine new titles were begun this year.

J. Cataloging

When books are received in the Law Library, they must be cataloged. During this academic year, 2,327 titles have been cataloged compared with 3,356 titles cataloged during the academic year 1983-1984. Of this number, 428 titles were added to the OCLC data base, which is approximately 18%. The decision was made to catalog the documents of international agencies by agency in the JK scheme using numbers in the notation assigned by this Library. These documents are placed in that scheme to assure their location in the international law collection which is now housed on the third floor of the Annex where the offices of the GEORGIA JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW are located. It is apparent that this Law Library will acquire a great number of the documents of international agencies in the future.

K. Staff

Rendering Library service to the public is a demanding art requiring patience and tact, void of any expectation of an acknowledgement of the time or effort required to produce the desired information. The library staff has always demonstrated a high degree of dedication and pleasantness in performing this function. Unfortunately, the public does not come into contact with the staff in acquisitions or cataloging, all of whom make a substantial contribution to the functioning of the Law Library. The Law Library has a dedicated team.

Several changes took place among the staff during the current academic year. Mrs. Jane Golden, Library Assistant III, who had been on the staff since September 10, 1981 resigned in March, 1985 for family reasons. Mrs. Golden was highly regarded by the staff and was extremely capable and efficient in the performance of her duties. Mr. Bradford Kay who supervised the stacks resigned in February, 1985 and was replaced by the person he succeeded, Mr. Troy C. Carithers. Other resignations included Mrs. Nancy Power, who received a better job within the University and Miss Elizabeth Ross who went back to graduate school.

These individuals were replaced by five individuals who give promise of becoming effective Library workers including Mrs. Carol Askren, Mrs. Christine Bolsius, Miss Rae Anne Cook, Mrs. Lesa J. Cranford and Mr. Troy C. Carithers. We look forward to a long association with these newly appointed members of the law library staff.

On May 13, 1985, Mrs. Linda S. Jackson received her library degree from Emory University and it is expected that we will change her classificaiton to a professional librarian.

Mrs. Marny Perry attended a conference on library binding and has brought back a number of suggestions to improve our operations in this area.

In closing this section, I would like to commend to the attention of the Administration a dedicated library staff who have unstintingly performed their duties. The Library is expected to function when other parts of the University are closed and this work is performed uncomplainingly. In the opinion of the Law Librarian, these individuals deserve the recognition of the law school for this outstanding performance.

In conclusion, the Law Librarian takes great satisfaction in the performance of the staff. The year has brought some changes, but with the support of the administration, it shall become the outstanding law library of the Southeast.

V. RESEARCH AND SERVICE PROGRAMS

A. Continuing Legal Education

The University of Georgia School of Law continues its extensive financial and professional support of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education in Georgia, which was organized in 1965 by the Law Schools of the University of Georgia, Emory, and Mercer, and the State Bar of Georgia. Barney L. Brannen, a member of the Law School administrative faculty, is Director of the Institute, supported by Lawrence Jones, who serves as the Assistant Director, and six full-time and several part-time employees. Approximately 300 lawyers each year serve as writers, planners, and speakers in the continuing legal education program.

From July 1, 1984, to June 30, 1985, the Institute presented 64 programs in 50 areas of the law attended by 11,210 registrants. Two programs were held at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education and one at the University of Georgia School of Law in Athens. The other seminars were conducted in cities throughout Georgia in order to make these programs available to every lawyer with a minimum of travel. During the year 20 courses were telephone conferenced to 20 locations around the state. A number of courses were video-taped and replays were attended by 1,306 registrants. An extensive course was conducted to train and develop trial lawyers; for eight days lawyers were trained in trial tactics. During this rigorous period, the lawyer-students were on their feet, arguing, questioning, and developing skills in actual trial work. From opening to closing statements, from direct to cross-examination, from expert witness to eye witnesses, lawyers improved their skills under scrutiny and criticism from experienced trial lawyers and faculty members. Performances of students were video-taped in order to help them to learn not only from the critiques and demonstrations by faculty members but also by reviewing their own performances visually.

The faculty of the University of Georgia School of Law continues to play a role in continuing legal education. As consultants, speakers, and writers, their contributions were indispensable in making this program a success.

Dean J. Ralph Beaird, University Professor of Law, is a member of the Institute's Board of Trustees and actively participates in Board meetings, serves on various committees, and contributes substantially to the decision-making process. He spoke at the Labor Law Institute held in Atlanta on "The Role of Labor-Management Consultants Under the Landrum-Griffin Act."

Professor R. Perry Sentell, Jr, Professor of Law, spoke at the 31st Institute for City and County Attorneys held in Athens on "Recent Judicial Developments Affecting Local Government."

Professor Albert M. Pearson, III, served as Team Leader at the Georgia Institute of Trial Advocacy presented by the Institute of Continuing Legal Education in Georgia. Mr. Ronald F. Carlson and Mr. B. Thomas Cook served as Assistant Team Leaders of the Institute and Mr. Robert D. Peckham also served on the faculty.

Professor John C. O'Byrne, Professor of Law, spoke at the Fiduciary Law Seminar at Hilton Head Island on "Tax Considerations Upon the Death of a Partner."

Professor Walter Ray Phillips, Professor of Law, spoke at the Family Law Seminar for the General Practitioner at Savannah and Atlanta on "Report on the New ABA Model Rules of Professional Conduct Being Considered for Adoption in Georgia; Conflicts of Interest; Attorney-Client Privilege."

Professor Robert N. Leavell, Professor of Law, presided at the seminar on "Trends and Developments in Securities Law" held in Atlanta.

Dr. Verner F. Chaffin, Callaway Professor of Law, spoke at the seminar on "Malpractice Avoidance in Estate Planning and Administration" held in Atlanta.

Professor Gabriel Wilner, Professor of International Law, spoke at the Third International Business Law Institute held in Atlanta on "Settlement of Disputes in International Transactions: International Arbitration."

During the fiscal year, the Institute in its own printing shop prepared 45 publications totaling 20,785 copies and reprinted 16 other publications totaling 2,638 copies that were in demand by Georgia lawyers. The following is a list of the programs presented during the year as well as the publications and reprints.

B. Institute of Continuing Judicial Education

NARRATIVE REPORT OF THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHTS

The 1984-85 program year proved the busiest in ICJE's history, with the Institute conducting 23 activities that served 1,575 constituents. The annual calendar of training events traditionally offered by ICJE was solidified by its reexecution, and enhanced by the addition of a fall seminar for state court judges and the first yearly offering for clerks of juvenile court.

Two new experimental ventures undertaken during FY'85 sufficiently succeeded to warrant their continuation. The first, a "judging and humanities" experience, introduced judicial officers to the exploration of great literature with a program of readings and discussion of Greek classical writings on judging, which was moderated by a pair of non-legal scholars, one from the field of philosophy and the other from the study of classics. The second activity enabled a small group of judges to visit a variety of state adult correctional institutions and programs. Both incarceration and probation activities were featured in this two day tour, which gave most of the participants their initial exposure to Georgia's corrections facilities and offender services.

Law faculty involvement as instructional resources in training sessions was at an all-time high in 1984-85, but more importantly the judicial practitioners' reception to these academics was impressive. Mercer, Emory and UGA law faculty members all provided public service instructional time to the Institute, once again demonstrating the wisdom and strength of the consortium approach to formal legal education's support of Georgia CJE.

Superior Court Judges, for the first time, assumed a significant instructional role in the regimen of statutorily mandated training for magistrates. At each regional seminar location a local superior court judge conducted the two hour instructional block devoted to an aspect of evidence law, this year targeting use and admissibility of documentary evidence.

Significant effort was given during the last program year to development of a CJE specialty course focusing upon interpretation and application of Georgia Constitutional provisions, particularly where an analogous provision exists in the Bill of Rights to the U.S. Constitution. Progress made has enabled scheduling of this activity for execution September 18-20, 1985, at Unicoi State Park.

ADMINISTRATIVE HIGHLIGHTS

ICJE's FY'85 state appropriations totaling $273,924, were augmented during the winter of 1985 by receipt of two grant awards. The first, a sum of $9,590 from the Department of Community Affairs, consisting of federal monies granted to the state from the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, enabled the execution of an initial seminar for clerks of juvenile court. It also enabled ICJE to provide training materials and underwrite the costs of instructional cadre for programs covering the new uniform rules of juvenile court targeted specifically at: prosecuting attorneys, criminal defense attorneys, and DHR juvenile court service workers (trained in cooperation with the Department's Juvenile Justice Training Project), as well as support personnel of the independent juvenile courts.

The second grant of $38,600 permitted ICJE to construct a basic training program for traffic court judges and clerks with an eye toward conducting this program, after an initial test run, on a regional basis in six to eight locations throughout the state during the last six months of 1985. Funds for this experimental effort at local/regional programming are the result of National Highway Traffic Safety Administration monies being granted to ICJE through the Governor's Office of Highway Safety.

FY'85 was the first full year in which the Institute operated with its own bookkeeper/accounting assistant on staff, which enabled expenditure or encumbrance of all program and operating funds at year's end, except for $2.96. This was the second year in which no attendee mileage expenses were reimbursed to program participants due to insufficient legislative funding to cover this expense of program attendance. Again, no serious impact on participation levels seemed to result from this policy.

The mandatory training sessions for magistrates, both the 40 hour basic course and the 20 hour recertification course, in 1984-85 for the first time, were conducted to audiences limited to not more than 60. While this necessitated a greater number of course offerings, it facilitated a more sound, thorough, and practical or relevant learning environment for attendees. It was more pleasant for instructors, as well; and also promoted regionalized execution of the curriculum, saving time and travel expense for all involved.

A major new move in administration occurred late in the year when the Judicial Council, at the Institute's recommendation, voted to grant ICJE

Trustee status to the Dean of the new and recently ABA accredited law school at Georgia State University, together with a trustee representative for magistrates and one for superior court clerks.

STATE-BASED TRAINING

Exhibit A lists the Institute's state-based instructional activities conducted during 1984-85, identifying the constituent group served, date, number of attendees and course site. It is followed by Exhibit B, a chronological presentation of individual program schedules, evaluation summaries, and financial closeout statements pertaining to each of ICJE's state-based activities. Readers are urged to examine these items carefully to gain an insight into the unique nature of these Institute endeavors, because they comprise ICJE's foremost educational responsibility.

NATIONALLY-BASED TRAINING

Of 58 applications received in 1984-85 for financial aid to attend nationally-based training, 45 were granted some level of funding (usually 80% of costs) and 38 individuals actually took advantage of this assistance. Exhibit C details ICJE's support of participation in nationally-based training, as well as illustrates through use of charts and bar graphs attendance enabled over the past five years.

FUTURE NEEDS, TASKS AND GOALS

Continuation and technical improvement each year of the established and presently successful program of basic and continuing judicial education afforded by the Institute is ICJE's immediate goal. However, accurate assessment of training needs, together with articulate formulation of instructional objectives, resulting in long-range, cyclical, comprehensive curriculum plans for each constituent group served by ICJE still has not been completed. Program planning committees, harried with designing the next upcoming seminar, must still be encouraged and helped to adopt a long-range view.

ICJE needs an additional full-time staff person, initially to improve existing administrative operations. Furthermore, expansion of programmatic workload cannot be contemplated without this individual. The position should probably be devoted 3/4 time to bookkeeping and financial management and 1/4 time to general clerical or conference coordinating work. Since the spring of 1983, the Institute has been operating without this position, relying on part-time college student help to fill the slack. These students have worked out commendably. We've been fortunate to get good help; but that may not always be the case with only part-time positions to offer. The Institute's constituency merits more professional service.

ICJE has yet to receive any response to its proposals for instituting a mandatory training program for Georgia's trial and appellate judges, paralleling the mandatory training requirements adopted for lawyers by the State Bar of Georgia, which currently exempt full-time judges. More adequate state funding for the Institute would seem to hinge upon the enactment of such a mandatory training program. Assessing the viability and impact of these proposals is an immediate task the Institute must complete.

Orientation of new judges through provision of self-study aids is a proposal to be earnestly tested beginning in 1985-86. This activity will have to be carefully structured, promoted and evaluated. ICJE has sought financial aid from the State Bar Foundation to conduct a three year pilot test of this concept. The annual turnover in trial judgeships is often too little to warrant a separate training program for new judges, and presently no orientation regimen of activity exists at all for new judges of limited and specialty jurisdiction courts. This programmatic void must be filled. Self-study seems a reasonable option to pursue.

Mandatory training programs have been in existence for approximately four years now for magistrates, probate court judges, juvenile court judges, and superior court clerks. These programs may have finally attained a maturity level that warrants their evaluation to determine if they have accomplished or are accomplishing their reasons for existing. ICJE should initiate this effort and, where warranted, recommend changes or improvements in these programs for consideration by appropriate authorities. Input from the constituent groups affected, together with the pertinent certification authorities, would be an essential element of this evaluation effort.

Full state funding of ICJE's programs and operations continues as a major goal of the Institute's Trustees. For FY'86, such funding would require an appropriation of about $525,000, while approximately $300,00 have been provided. A $2.00 tack-on to civil filing fees in all courts may provide the solution to CJE funding in Georgia. Even though such a plan would require adoption of a constitutional amendment, it cannot be too lightly dismissed.

Training of judge-faculty in adult educational instructional techniques, and thereby improving the quality of state-based course offerings, is a growing element of state judicial educational efforts in other parts of the country. ICJE is not sufficiently funded at present to enable this form of refinement in CJE. Nevertheless, financing for this undertaking should be part of future ICJE funding plans.

C. The Dean Rusk Center for International and Comparative Law

This has been a busy year for the Dean Rusk Center. The principal activities include:

1. The Rusk Center continued publication of the Newsletter begun in 1983-84. The Newsletter consists of an essay followed by a resume of international developments affecting Georgia and a booklist of recent library acquisitions in the international area. The Newsletter comes out two times per year. This year the essays were written by Mr. Orville L. Freeman, former Secretary of the United States Department of Agriculture, and Professor Hermann Soell of Regensburg University Law School, Regensburg, Germany. These two issues of the Newsletter were circulated to about 3000 persons in Georgia, the United States, and around the world.

2. The Rusk Center sponsored international visitors for the purpose of teaching and research:

Mr. George B. O'Haver, Vice President and General Counsel of Coca-Cola Japan, was a Scholar-in-Residence from October 7-October 14, 1984. Mr. O'Haver spoke on "The Role of a Multinational Company in Japan."

Professor Yoshinobu Eizumi of Aoyama Gakuin University is a 1984-85 Scholar-in-Residence conducting research in the areas of international private law and comparative civil procedure.

Professor Roger Blanpain of the University of Leuven, Belgium, gave a minicourse on comparative labor law for one credit hour for Georgia law students.

Professor Charles Debattista of the University of Southampton, England conducted a minicourse in international commercial law for one credit hour to Georgia law students.

3. The Rusk Center hosted international visitors during the 1984-85 school year. Mr. William P. Bundy visited on February 25, 26, and 27, 1985 to give a talk and to discuss Arms Limitations Negotiations in the '80s. On April 8, 1985, Professor Kenneth R. Simmonds, the Dean of Queen Mary College, London, England, lectured on "Prospects of International Arbitration." Professor Mitsuo Matsushita of Tokyo University visited to meet with students.

4. The Center and the Law School sponsored a seminar program of study of the law of the European Economic Community in Brussels, from July 5-23, 1984. Professor Gabriel Wilner directed this project.

5. The director of the Center gave a speech entitled, "Liability and Damages for Discharges of Oil and Hazardous Waste from Vessels," at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association, August 7, 1984.

6. Dorinda G. Dallmeyer, Rusk Center Research Director, represented the University at the conference, Southern Strategies in a Global Economy, Twelfth Annual Meeting of the Southern Growth Policies Board, Tulsa, Oklahoma, August 16-17, 1984.

7. On November 5-6, 1984, the United States-Japan Trade Study Group met for two days of conference. The speakers and their subjects were as follows:

"An Introduction to the Framework of Japanese Trade Law," Professor Mitsuo Matsushita, Professor of Law, Tokyo University, with a comment by Professor Gabriel Wilner, University of Georgia School of Law.

"Direct Investment in Japan," Yoshiteru Endoh, Associate Professor of Law, Chiba University, Japan.

"Comment," Allan D. Smith, Attorney at Law, Kilpatrick & Cody; Atlanta, Georgia.

"Liberalization of Service Trade in Japan," Yutaka Hori, Attorney at Law; Ohsuga Iwasaki, Homma, and Hori; Tokyo, Japan.

"Comment," Miriam Hollar, Student, University of Georgia School of Law.

"Trade Policy of the Liberal-Democratic Party," Masahiro Fukushima, Lecturer, Teikyo University, Japan.

"Comment," Carol Fekete, Student, University of Georgia School of Law.

"The Relationship between Cabinet and Diet in Trade Problems," Norio Okumiya, Lecturer, Fukuoka University, Japan.

"Comment," Eileen Golden, Student, University of Georgia School of Law.

"Import Restrictions in the Japanese Distribution System," Sachio Sugimoto, Research Student, Sophia University Graduate School, Japan.

"Comment," John H. Steed, Attorney at Law; Powell, Goldstein, Frazer, and Murphy; Atlanta, Georgia.

"Mitsubishi Motors Corporation v. Soler Chrysler Plymouth, Inc.," Dorinda G. Dallmeyer, Research Director, Dean Rusk Center, University of Georgia School of Law.

"Discussion and Remarks," by Workshop Cochairmen, Thomas J. Schoenbaum, Dean Rusk Professor of Law and Executive Director, Dean Rusk Center, University of Georgia School of Law; Mitsuo Matsushita, Professor of Law, Tokyo University, Japan; and Seiichi Mitani, Mitsubishi Bank Foundation, Tokyo, Japan.

8. The Rusk Center and the University of Georgia International Trade Development Center cosponsored a program on "Legal and Financial Aspects of Exporting Wood Products," in Brunswick, Georgia, on November 2, 1984.

9. The Center has organized a Canadian Interest Group consisting of about 40 members of the University of Georgia faculty who have a substantial research interest pertaining to Canada. Through the efforts of the group, undergraduate and graduate students can now pursue a certificate in Canadian studies from the Global Policy Studies Program.

10. The director has signed a contract with Callahan and Company to produce a treatise on environmental law relating to the duties and liabilities of municipal governments.

11. Environmental Policy Law, 1985 Edition by the director of the Center has become the largest selling casebook on this subject in the United States, used by approximately 80 colleges and universities.

12. The Center cosponsored a conference on Energy Development in Asia, hosted by the Government of Thailand, in Bangkok, December 1984.

13. The Rusk Center and College of Agriculture cosponsored a Conference on International Trade in Agriculture in Athens on March 19, 1985. This conference featured discussions among various authorities in agriculture and international trade. Many of the discussions were conducted as a live video telecast over satellite with telephone talk-back. The system connected numerous conference participants at separate national sites.

14. The Center is establishing a Dean Rusk Papers Collection and Oral History in cooperation with the University of Georgia Library.

15. Dorinda G. Dallmeyer, Rusk Center Research Director, chaired the diplomatic and legal dimensions panel at the International Space Policy: Options for the Twentieth Century and Beyond conference, Georgia Institute of Technology, Atlanta, Georgia, May 16-17, 1985.

16. The Center is coordinating the newly established UGA Arms Control Group composed of faculty, staff, and students who meet monthly to discuss arms control issues. As part of its contribution to the group's activities, on April 18, 1985, the Rusk Center sponsored a live satellite telecast featuring noted astronomer Carl Sagan who discussed the nuclear winter theory.

The Center also is the home department for the Larry Marcus Memorial Peace Essay Contest. Additionally, the Rusk Center and the Georgia Center for Continuing Education cosponsored "Remembering War," an interactive television simulcast linking the United States and the Soviet Union in connection with the 40th anniversary of VE Day.

VI. STUDENT AFFAIRS

A. PLACEMENT

1. Office Activity

The 1984-85 academic year of The University of Georgia School of Law's Placement Office was yet another one of continued development and success in the areas of office services and employment of our students in the legal job market. The fall 1984 on-campus interview program was the largest ever sponsored by the Placement Office. There has been a 141% increase in the number of employers conducting fall on-campus interviews since the inception of the office in 1977. This past year there was a record high number of first and second year students reporting summer employment (56% and 76% respectively). Also, the third year class again exceeded the national average of 60% reporting permanent employment at the time of graduation.

While it is gratifying to view the Placement Office's record of success in servicing both students and employers with their employment needs, it is vital that the office continues in its efforts to improve and increase the quality and scope of services offered. In the current climate of increased competition among job applicants for positions and employer efforts to curb recruitment costs, it will be necessary for the successful placement office to provide innovative yet economical programs to ensure high visibility of students among potential employers.

With that in mind, the Placement Office will continue to direct its energies towards expanding and strengthening its on-going placement program so as to maintain a competitive edge in the marketplace. The on-going program's three primary objectives are:

1. Increased employer representation
2. Expanded in-house services
3. Provision of office-sponsored programs.

The primary objective, increased employer representation by way of on-campus interviews, recruiting conferences and job postings for students to pursue, continues to be one that this office expends a tremendous amount of time and energy towards achieving. This past fall the office had 164 employers conduct interviews at the law school, which is a 141% increase over those conducted when the office was created in 1977. The office also had 157 employers this past fall who requested packets of student resumes to be mailed to them; there were also 268 job notices posted for students to contact employers directly.

During the past fall, the office continued to participate in the Southeast Law Placement Consortium (SELPC) of which Georgia is a founding boardmember. There was a total of 110 nationwide legal employers participating in the 1984 Ninth Annual SELPC Recruiting Conference. A total of 50 Georgia law students attended the October recruiting conference, which provides exposure for our students to employers from outside the southeast region and also complements our on-campus interview program which is at least 70% Georgia employers. Of the 48 students responding to the SELPC follow-up survey, 33% received job offers and 19% accepted their SELPC job offer.

Although the fall season is by far the most hectic time for the placement office, it is important to note that historically only 30% of both second and third year students will have obtained employment by the start of spring semester. This 30% is generally in the top academic portion of their class. Through the years, the placement office has been making conscious efforts to increase employer representation during the spring semester for those students who are still seeking either summer or permanent employment. The employer market sought consists of small law firms, federal/state/local government agencies, businesses and judicial clerkships that do not have stringent academic hiring criteria and tend to interview applicants closer to the actual time of hiring. It is frustrating, however, that this is the very same employer market which is reluctant to identify itself for fear of being deluged by applicants or having to spend money (or lose billing hour time) by having a lawyer come to campus to conduct interviews and seems to prefer hiring through what is commonly called "the good ole boy" network.

At the start of spring semester, the office mailed out approximately 2,500 letters of invitation to this "hidden" employer market. Accompanying the letter was a profile sheet about our student body, faculty and school facilities. We were quite pleased with the results of our mailing as we had a total of 37 on-campus interviews, 99 employer requests for student resume packets and 443 job postings for students to contact employers directly during spring semester.

It is ironic that while we concentrate our efforts during spring semester to assist those students who are generally in the lower academic ranks and still seeking employment, we must also begin preparations for the upcoming fall interview season (which is still a good six months away). This February we mailed out approximately 3,500 invitations to legal employers who do the majority of their recruiting in the fall of each year. To date, we have already scheduled approximately 145 employers to conduct interviews at the law school this fall.

Our office continues to produce a placement directory of second and third year law students and to mail it to approximately 3,000 legal employers. The directory contains photos and/or resume synopses of the students and is mailed to employers during the month of July. The placement directory continues to be the most effective marketing tool of the Placement Office in terms of educating prospective employers about student body quality, faculty, facilities, and services provided by the Georgia Placement Office.

Two programs developed last year in an effort to increase student placement opportunities were the England Summer Clerkship Program (restricted to first year students) and the UGA Law School Off-Campus Washington, D.C. Interview Program.

The England Summer Clerkship Program continued to do very well in its second year with three first year students obtaining summer clerkships with British firms. One student is working in London and the other two are in Brighton, England. Regrettably, we lost the participation of one London employer because the student selected as its law clerk withdrew from school; however, this employer has given written assurance that it will participate in the summer 1986 program.

The Washington, D.C. Off-Campus Interview Program went fairly well with a total of twelve D.C. area employers participating; however, only three Georgia law students participated this year, down from twelve the previous year. Students participating in this program are responsible for their own travel and lodging expenses to D.C. It is expected that the level of student participation will fluctuate from year to year as a reflection of the geographic flexibility of each class. As this program incurs minimal expense for the school's sponsorship, we will sponsor it again during the fall of 1985. Depending on the level of participation from the students, the program may or may not be continued after 1985.

The second objective of expanded in-house services is one that this office continues putting forth a great deal of time and effort to achieve. We are very fortunate to have a large, centrally located placement resource center, which houses bulletin boards for job postings, bookshelves for employer data sheet notebooks, a variety of directories and career-related materials, four filing cabinets of employers' resumes, and two typewriters for student use in their job hunt. We have office subscriptions to three national legal periodicals, have two nationally acclaimed directory sets of selected law firms in America, and a directory of corporate counsel. Both sets provide a wealth of information that can only be found in these particular directories.

We continue to publish a bi-monthly Alumni Newsletter, under the capable editorship of the office's administrative secretary, and have approximately 100 subscribers to the Newsletter. The Newsletter contains job postings from employers seeking to hire a lawyer with one to six years experience and is mailed to Georgia law school alumni on the first and fifteenth of each month.

The location of individual student message boxes in the area directly outside of the Placement Office has greatly facilitated the delivery of employment-related messages to students and has provided a better survey method which our office may use when collecting employment status information from students for our record keeping duties.

This past year the Placement Office had an additional staff member on a half-time basis. The staff member was a graduate student who worked twenty hours a week as an administrative assistant to the Placement Director. The woman is proficient in the area of personal computers. The office was equipped with an IBM Personal Computer XT this past fall. She developed and implemented a computer program to keep track of and produce monthly employment reports for all three classes. The assistant also coordinated the D.C. Off-Campus Interview Program this year as well as assisted the Director at the SELPC Recruiting Conference. She also ran our practice videotape interview program.

The final objective of the provision of office-sponsored programs is one that is ever-changing to suit the needs of the currently enrolled student body. Our office surveys each class at the beginning of fall and identifies from the student body response the type of programs to be scheduled during the year.

Our standard offerings are seminars on resume preparation, cover letter writing, interview dress, interview techniques, self-directed job searches, and judicial clerkship opportunities. The office makes available videotaped practice interviews. Our office also relies on special interest student groups to sponsor career-related forums as well as the Younger Lawyers Section of the Georgia State Bar to sponsor forums. This past year there was a total of fourteen seminars sponsored by the Placement Office.

Our office has a good working relationship with the central UGA Placement Office and coordinates programs with it when appropriate for law students.

While the above described placement office activities may reflect a basic program of any law school, the results must be seen as more than simply helping a student to acquire employment. Through contacts with law school alumni, state bar members and professional colleagues, student employment possibilities were increased, but service to the state and region were enhanced as well. Through involvement in the National Association for Law Placement (NALP), of which the Placement Director is a past member of the National Advisory Board and is currently chairing the Programs Committee, through the Southeastern Law Placement Consortium, of which the Director serves as Secretary, through committee work for the State Bar of Georgia and through personal visitation trips to cities where legal employers demonstrate an interest in our graduates, the school's representation and reputation is furthered and strengthened.

2. Recruitment and Placement Activity

During the academic year 1984-85, the Law Placement Office scheduled 201 on-campus interview sessions for prospective employers of Georgia law graduates. In addition, the Law Placement Office provided assistance to 122 employers who recruited off-campus, to 256 employers who requested student resume packets, to 711 employers who posted job notices for students to contact them directly, and to 1234 employers who posted a job notice in the Alumni Newsletter. The total number of employer contacts for the 1984-85 academic year was 2524.

B. Student Activities and Publications

1. Georgia Law Review

By graduation on May 12, the Managing Board for Volume 19 of the Review had published the fourth issue of Volume 18 and two issues of Volume 19.

The Review this year continued its tradition of building issues around lectures given at the school. The jurisprudence symposium, which was planned by last year's editor-in-chief, was developed around the Sibley lecture on the duty to obey the law that Professor Kent Greenawalt gave. A lecture by Professor Richard Stewart and visit by Professor Mark Tushnet to a jurisprudence class enabled the Review to personally solicit articles which form the basis for a symposium on "Federalism: Allocating Responsibility Between Federal and State Courts," to be published as the Summer 1985 issue. Using those two contributors as a way to interest others in the symposium, the Review has received commitments from several other distinguished professors. The most interesting lecture to be published this year probably was Solicitor General Rex Lee's evaluation of critics of the 1983 Term of the Supreme Court. Professor Geoffrey Stone wrote a response that has already been written about in Richard Reaves' nationally-syndicated column and in the Chicago Tribune.

Besides taking advantage of speakers who have given lectures at the school, the Review has made a more concerted effort to solicit professional pieces. Three professional articles being published were sent to the Review as a result of Review solicitation efforts. In addition, the Review plans to publish at least six book reviews in volume 19, all of which were solicited, including reviews on law and literature, a biography of Justice Murphy, a collection of essays on voting rights, and a history of the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

In addition, the Review has attempted to promote itself within its own pages and through other publications. First, all writers and cite-checkers are instructed to look for and cite previous articles published in the Review that deal with issues related to those discussed in the article. Second, the Review is trying to publicize pieces which may be of interest to specific audiences. A student note on Jewish divorce, for example, will be sent to Jewish organizations and publications, along with a request that they notify their readers about the piece.

The Review has approximately 1,850 subscribers. The managing editor this year updated the mailing list to eliminate deceased persons and to correct addresses. The Review also added county libraries in the state to the list of institutions receiving copies of the Review.

The Review will publish at least three articles from faculty members--Milner Ball, Walter Hellerstein, and Michael Wells. In planning the symposium on federalism, the Review staff consulted with Professor Wells, John Rees, and Albert Pearson for advice on possible topics and contributors.

The editor-in-chief sought advice from faculty adviser Milner Ball and past adviser Richard Wellman on problems in dealing with professional writers and in managing a fifty-person board of unpaid students. The faculty adviser accepts the editor-in-chief's certification that students have fulfilled their writing requirement through work on the Review. The articles editors have requested that faculty members read manuscripts submitted for publication to see if they recommend publication; the executive editor has sought the advice of faculty members concerning student pieces that are being published; and several second year students have written their notes under the supervision of faculty.

2. Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law

The Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law

publishes three issues per year containing the writings of scholars, practitioners, and students on topics of both private and public international law. The Journal is designed to be of value not only to specialists in international and comparative law, but also to practitioners who are confronted with the increasing frequency of international issues in local practice.

Student membership on the Journal is determined during a workshop which is held during August and early September. This year eighty law students participated in the workshop, from which thirty-six were selected solely on the basis of their research and writing skills to staff the Journal Editorial Board. The Journal Managing Board is made up of fourteen students who have the responsibility of editing and publishing each issue.

During Fall Semester the Journal's primary accomplishment was the publication of Volume 14, Issue 1. In Volume 14:1, a 250-page issue, the Journal initiated an emphasis on international trade law with the publication of an annual survey of recent developments in trade. In addition to our normal subscription list which includes subscribers from 64 foreign countries and the United States, we mailed one hundred complimentary issues as a marketing effort to boost our subscription list. An additional one hundred extra copies were printed and supplied to Giles Kennedy who will distribute the Journal to prospective students as a part of the school's admissions process.

Volume 14:2 will include a special section on the law of foreign sovereign immunity in the United States. The third issue of Volume 14 will be devoted entirely to trade law and will include selected papers presented at the Exporting in the 80's Conference which the Rusk Center co-hosted last spring.

The Journal has also made a great deal of progress already toward the publication of Volume 15. All student writing for issues 15:1 and 2 was completed during Fall Semester, and we have procured a sufficient number of scholarly articles to fill both issues. The Managing Board is currently editing the material for Volume 15.

In addition to our work in publication, the Journal has attempted to include a greater variety of social events in this year's schedule. Both of our Fall Semester events were limited to Journal members: a cookout at Professor Wilner's home in September, and a pre-exam party at our Executive Editor's home in November. Our Spring Semester events, however, included other students and faculty members in addition to the Journal staff. On January 28, 1985 the Journal hosted a tea in the Dunlap Room in honor of the International LL.M. students. Seventy students and faculty members attended. On April 12, 1985 we held our Annual Banquet which included the Journal members, the International Law Society, and the international faculty.

Faculty involvement in the Journal process occurs in three ways. Professor Wilner and Professor Dean Rusk serve as our advisors. Both professors serve as a confidant and an adviser to the Managing Board when problems arise. In addition, Professor Wilner reads and approves the Journal members' writings to satisfy the school's supervised research requirement for graduation. Second, faculty members have helped this year with the publication process. Professor J. C. O'Byrne and Professor Tom Eaton have both contributed writings to Volume 14. Also, Professor Schoenbaum worked closely with the student writers on the Trade Law Survey, and Professor Louis Sohn frequently helps students who are working in the areas of human rights and law of the sea. We utilize both Professor Sohn's private library of United Nations documents and the Rusk Center's library in our research. Finally, the international faculty has supported our social events this year. Two faculty members attended our Fall cookout, and several more were present at the tea in March.

We hope during the 1985-86 school year to increase faculty involvement in our international program by helping to organize a faculty advisor program through which students interested in pursuing careers in international law could receive advice on class selection and job placement. While such advice is already given on an informal basis, we would like to organize the process so that it could work to the advantage of a larger number of students.

3. Moot Court

The Moot Court Program, which involves approximately 200 students annually, began the year on a winning note when Drew Beal and Frank Hanna defeated the University of Florida in the Hulsey-Kimbrell Competition. The Competition is held each year at the U.S. Courthouse in Jacksonville on the Friday before the Georgia-Florida football game.

For the fifth time in six years, the University of Georgia School of Law represented this region in the New York City finals of the National Moot Court Competition. Our team of Bob Hunter, Bill Rogers, and Nancy Vorpe defeated Emory in the final round to win the regional competition in Atlanta in November. The team also received the award for Best Brief among the ten briefs submitted.

In the four preliminary rounds on Thursday and Friday, Georgia defeated Florida State, South Carolina, Nova, and Miami. In the semifinal round, Georgia defeated Georgia State.

The bench for the final round was composed of Judges Tuttle and Clark of the United States Court of Appeals for the 11th Circuit, and Justice Weltner of the Supreme Court of Georgia.

Some thirty teams from around the country competed in New York in January for the national moot court title. Georgia lost two close preliminary rounds this year to Nebraska and Boston College. Over the past six years, Georgia has reached the semifinals once and the quarter-finals three times in New York.

The University of Georgia Jessup Team, participating in the Southern Regional of the Philip Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition at Winston-Salem, completed a clean sweep of the competition by bringing home the trophies for Best Team, Best Brief, and Best Oralist in the Region. The members of the Georgia team were Eddie Fleming, Jeff Helms, Reta Jordan, Daryl Morton, and Gail Singleton.

In the team competition, Georgia was the only team to go undefeated in the preliminary rounds, defeating Vanderbilt, Florida, Mercer, and Georgia State. In the final round, Georgia was again paired against Vanderbilt, which had finished second with a 3-1 record. Georgia won the final round by unanimous agreement of the judges on both the brief and the oral arguments. The team of Jeff Helms and Daryl Morton argued in the finals and received 230 out of a possible 240 points on the oral argument. Vanderbilt finished second in the competition with a 3-2 record and Wake Forest finished third. Georgia's cumulative record for the last three Jessup Regionals is 13-1.

Georgia won the Best Brief award based on briefs submitted for both applicant and respondent. In each round of the competition, Georgia received all the points possible for the brief score, which allowed the team to win three of its five rounds, including the final round, by perfect scores. This is a tribute to the hard work of all the team members, especially Gail Singleton, who served as briefwriter for the team and coordinated the writing of the briefs.

Eddie Fleming received the award for Best Oralist on the basis of his arguments against Florida and Georgia State. He and Reta Jordan, arguing for respondent, won both of their rounds with a perfect sweep of the judges despite having what was conceded to be the harder side of the case. This included an impressive last round against Georgia State, which was undefeated through its first three rounds.

The Georgia team competed in the Finals in New York City the week of April 21 and performed well, but did not reach the Final Round.

For the first time this year, the Law School's Frederick Douglass Team was incorporated into the formal moot court structure. The team of Alice Brown and Carla Young finished second in the nation in the competition. The team won a spot in the national finals in San Francisco by defeating teams from Loyola, Tennessee and the University of North Carolina at the regional meet in Louisville, Kentucky. Our team faced UNC again in the final round and lost by a mere .3. In addition to making the final round, we captured the award for Best Brief. Team coach is Robin Barney-Blount.

For the fourth year in a row, the University of Georgia put a team into the final round of the Intrastate Moot Court Competition. In the final round, held at Mercer, Georgia lost to Georgia State. The unofficial results show that Georgia defeated Georgia State in the oral argument, but lost the round because of a two-point deficit on the brief. The team of Drew Beal, LeeAnn Jones, and Russell Phillips reached the final round by defeating Emory in the semifinals.

Georgia's other Intrastate Team -- Linda Bradley, Shawn Stafford, and Marlan Wilbanks -- compiled a perfect 4-0 record in the preliminary rounds of the competition before losing to Georgia State in the semifinals.

An Emory team received the award for the Best Brief in the competition, and a member of the winning Georgia State team was named Best Oralist.

As usual, the Intrastate Competition proved this year to be Georgia's toughest. Although our teams were very well prepared by coaches Dan Mohan and Chris Welton, our opponents, particularly from Georgia State, were talented and dedicated advocates.

Our ABA teams performed well this year in the regional rounds at Gainesville, Florida, but neither team advanced to the national finals.

4. Women Law Students Association

Again this year, the highlight of the year was the Edith House Lecture, named for the Law School's first female graduate. The third Edith House Lecturer was Justice Shirley Abrahamson of the Wisconsin Supreme Court.

WLSA began the fall semester with a cookout for new students. In the fall, WLSA continued its tradition of brown bag lunches featuring special speakers. In October, Placement Director Jill Coveny spoke on special problems women face in interviewing for clerkships and associate positions and in November, we sponsored a panel discussion on battered women featuring people in the Athens community who have experience working with battered women. Spring brown bags included a panel discussion on starting a law practice.

5. Black Law Students Association

BLSA's activities began in the summer of 1984. With the assistance of the Law School, we held a luncheon for current first year Black students. Students were able to combine their search for housing with receiving a general orientation to Athens and the Law School. During the fall semester, BLSA held a seminar entitled: "Sports and Entertainment Law." Mr. David Ware, a Law School alumnus who practices law in Atlanta, provided an audience of 40-50 students with valuable information on sports and entertainment law. In addition, BLSA and the Student Bar Association jointly held a reception for Mr. Michael Lomax, Chairman of the Fulton County Commission. BLSA was also represented at a Southern Regional Leadership Conference held in Durham, N.C. Two officers were able to attend. BLSA has provided small social functions for its membership. BLSA held a reception for two of the graduating members. We continuously maintain a small library containing hornbooks, textbooks, and other academic materials a student may need.

In commemorating Black History Month, BLSA arranged several programs for the month of February. These included videotapes entitled: "1984 In Review . . .," "King--The Dream Lives." Professors Blount and Thomas were among the individuals asked to lead a group discussion after each videotape, "A Dream Deferred--King II," and "The Life of Malcolm X." In addition, BLSA invited Rep. Sanford Bishop of Columbus, Georgia and Chairman of the Legislative Black Caucus to speak.

Judge Robert Benham, a UGA law graduate and the first black elected to any statewide office in Georgia, was the speaker at the spring BLSA banquet.

6. Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law

The Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law enjoyed another active academic year. Several scholars and practicing attorneys spoke to the Society, including Dr. A. O. Adede, the Legal Adviser of the International Atomic Energy Agency, George O'Haver of Coca-Cola Japan, and Professor Richard Wellman.

The Society actively participated in the U.S.-Japan Trade Study Group Workshop that was held at the University of Georgia on November 5-6, 1984, sponsored by the Mitsubishi Bank Foundation and the Rusk Center.

Thirty student members of the Society attended the Eleventh Annual International Law Weekend sponsored by the Washington Regional Council of International Law Societies on October 12-13, 1984, in Washington, D.C. The Society sponsored additional speakers this spring including William P. Bundy and Dean Rusk. The Society administered the Georgia Dean Rusk Award for research and writing in the International Law field. Also, the Society co-sponsored the annual banquet of the Society and the Journal.

Throughout the year, members of the Society had the opportunity to have personal interaction with visiting scholars and practicing attorneys through receptions, escorting duties, furnishing transportation, and proof reading for foreign speaking lectures.

7. Environmental Law Association

During Fall Semester, ELA directed much of its energy to organizing the Fourth Annual Clean Air Biathlon. This event is a combination foot and bicycle race which contestants can enter either singly or as a team. ELA members organized the entire affair from the initial meetings with local officials through the advertising and logistics, to the management of the event on race day.

Our hard work paid off, as 215 people took part in the Biathlon. ELA was able to make substantial contributions from the race proceeds to two public interest environmental organizations (the Legal Environmental Assistance Foundation and the Clean Air Coalition), and to Superfund (a program which provides public interest summer internships to UGA law students).

ELA was also privileged to bring two speakers to the Law School in the fall. Jack Alcock, Regional Forester for the Southeastern United States, talked to the club about current issues in forest management, particularly the problem of acid rain. Dennis Hoffarth, Vice-President of the Georgia Solar Coalition, presented us with a slide show and talked about solar power in Georgia.

Our first speaker for Spring Semester was Linda DiSantis, a legislative monitor for the Georgia Conservancy. She spoke about environmental legislation which is being considered by the Georgia General Assembly. Later in the spring ELA sponsored the second Environmental Moot Court. This competition provides an opportunity for all law students to participate in a moot court experience, and to learn something about environmental law. This year's topic involved an interstate conflict arising from air pollution, an issue that appealed to many law students.

Finally, five ELA members received scholarships to attend the annual Environmental Law Conference sponsored by ALI-ABA in Washington, D.C. during February.

8. Law Student Division/American Bar Association

The Partners-in-Law Program for Fall, 1984, commenced during the summer months when we matched the first year students with experienced second and third year students in an attempt to make the adjustment to Law School a little easier for incoming students. Also, a membership drive was held during the month of September. It was followed by a membership party on October 2nd at which time prizes were presented to the Best Oralist of the National ABA Moot Court Competition.

9. Federalist Society

On the morning of October 12, 1984, 6 members of our organization had breakfast with U.S. Solicitor General Rex Lee at the Holiday Inn here in Athens. It was an honor and privilege to discuss current issues of constitutional law with one so involved with shaping and influencing the law and public policy of our national government.

On Tuesday, October 30, 1984, we held a mock election. The next day we posted the results of the presidential race. The polls were open from 10:00 a.m. to 2:00 p.m. A total of 280 students submitted ballots.

Later in November, Harry MacDonald and Spencer Eig debated the pros and cons of a balanced budget amendment.

In April, we held a symposium on the exlusionary rule and the recent Supreme Court decisions affecting it. The panel discussing the ramifications of these decisions included Larry Thompson, U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of Georgia, Professor Ron Carlson, distinguished professor and nationally recognized expert on evidence, Tom Cook, local assistant D.A. and law professor, and Ed Tolley, local criminal defense attorney and recently elected president of the Georgia Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers.

And on Law Day this year, we held a reception for the speaker Senator Mack Mattingly.

10. Phi Alpha Delta

This is a service fraternity dedicated to the betterment of the law student, the law school, and the community. To this end, we successfully conducted the Juvenile Justice Program last fall and produced the Law School Directory, which was out by Thanksgiving this year. The parties we gave were enjoyed by all.

11. Phi Delta Phi

The local inn of Phi Delta Phi enjoyed a very active 1984-85 academic year. In August, Phi Delta Phi welcomed the first year class with a number of rush functions. In addition to sponsoring several school-wide social events, Phi Delta Phi provided block seating at UGA home football games for its members. During fall semester, Phi Delta Phi sponsored Jerome Braun's visit to the Law School campus to discuss the Georgia bar exam. Mr. Braun is the current Director of Bar Admissions. Phi Delta Phi also provided manpower to ready the historic Lumpkin House for its grand opening. The Lumpkin House is the site of Georgia's first law school, established in 1859. Fall semester also saw the continuation of the Joseph Henry Lumpkin Golf Classic, another Phi Delta Phi-sponsored event.

On February 1, 1985, the local chapter initiated thirty new members into the national fraternity. Phi Delta Phi hosted a faculty-student cocktail party at the Lumpkin House just before the Barrister's Ball.

Spring events included a golf classic, oyster roast, and Atlanta Braves game trip.

Phi Delta Phi seeks to serve the law school community by providing occasional social opportunities for students and faculty. More importantly, the fraternity stresses the importance of scholarship and integrity.

VII. SPECIAL EVENTS

A. The John A. Sibley Lecture Series

1. United States Solicitor General Rex E. Lee was the Sibley Lecturer for the fall semester at the School of Law. His lecture, presented October 12, was entitled "The Supreme Court and Individual Freedom: An Evaluation of the Evaluators of the 1983 Term." In his remarks he reviewed what journalists and legal scholars were saying about the term which had just ended. He took issue with the characterization of the Court's decisions as being repressive to individual freedom.

Solicitor General Lee has a background of twenty years of legal experience including a Supreme Court clerkship, private practice in Phoenix, Justice Department work as assistant Attorney General and serving as the founding dean of Brigham Young Law School. He is also the author of two books and a number of scholarly articles.

2. The former Governor-General of Australia, Sir Zelman Cowen, delivered the spring semester Sibley Lecture on March 27. Sir Zelman now serves as Provost of Oriel College, Oxford. He is the chairman of the British Press Council, and his lecture focused on issues of press freedom and responsibility.

Before entering government service as Governor-General, Sir Zelman was a law professor and educational administrator. He was dean of the faculty of law at the University of Melbourne, and then vice chancellor of the University of Queensland.

Sir Zelman was introduced by Philip Alston, former U.S. ambassador to Australia and former member of the Loridans Foundation Board of Trustees.

B. Edith House Lecture

Wisconsin Supreme Court Justice Shirley S. Abrahamson presented the third annual Edith House Lecture at the Law School on March 7. Her topic was "Justice and the Juror." She spoke on her perspective as a judge who recently served as member of a federal jury.

Justice Abrahamson was appointed to the Wisconsin Supreme Court in 1976 and was elected to a full ten-year term in 1979. She practiced law in Madison, Wisconsin and taught at the University of Wisconsin Law School before serving on the bench.

C. Law Day

Mack Mattingly, junior United States Senator from Georgia, was the keynote speaker for Law Day, 1985. His topic was the proposed line item presidential veto which he introduced in the last session of Congress.

Mattingly's address was made at an 11:00 a.m. outdoor ceremony on April 20. Earlier in the day, an Open House was held at the Joseph Henry Lumpkin House. The upstairs of the house, named in honor of Richard Y. Bradley and the State Bar of Georgia, was opened to the public for the first time.

At the Law School Association luncheon following the outdoor ceremonies, Distinguished Service Scrolls were presented to two graduates of the Law School: Georgia Supreme Court Justice Harold

G. Clarke and Georgia House of Representatives Speaker Thomas B. Murphy. It was announced that a scholarship fund has been established in honor of Speaker Murphy.

Also at the luncheon, which was held at the Athens Country Club, a ceremony was conducted to unveil a painting which commemorates the Law School's 125th anniversary and the Bicentennial of the University of Georgia. The watercolor collage was presented to Dean Beaird for the Law School by John Noell, chairman of the committee which raised the funds to commission the painting.

The Law Day Banquet was held Friday, April 19, at Flinchum's Phoenix. The Georgia Law Review staff, the Moot Court Board, and the student chapter of the American Trial Lawyers Association sponsored the event and invited Judge Patrick Higginbotham to be the banquet speaker. Higginbotham serves on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit in Dallas, Texas. He is an adjunct faculty member of Southern Methodist University Law School.

The Law School's chapter of the Black Law Students Association held its banquet on the evening of Law Day. The speaker was Georgia Court of Appeals Judge Robert Benham. Benham, a Georgia law graduate, was elected to the court in November. He is the first Black judge to serve on a state appellate court in Georgia.

Also as a part of Law Day, the Moot Court Board held the final round of the Talmadge and Russell Competitions on Friday, April 19.

D. Commencement Activities

The School of Law awarded degrees to 236 graduates in commencement ceremonies May 11. Morris Abram, New York attorney and vice-chairman of the United States Commission on Civil Rights, spoke at the 11:00 a.m. ceremony on the lawn of the north campus quadrangle.

The occasion marked the first presentation of the University's Bicentennial diplomas, which are printed in Latin on parchment. Also, a custom-designed satin banner with the scales of justice was carried in the procession. This was another prototype of the University's 200th celebration commencement. The rest of the University conducted commencement exercises on June 8.

Jule Felton, president of the Law School Association, welcomed the graduates into the school's alumni organization. McCracken Poston, president of the law school senior class, was master of ceremonies. Honorary marshalls, chosen by the seniors from among the faculty, were Julian McDonnell and John Rees.

Of special note was the graduation of Linda Sharpe Cowen. Her diploma was presented by her father-in-law, former Georgia Law School Dean Lindsey Cowen. Linda Cowen's husband, Martin, earned his degree from the Georgia Law School in 1975. Dean Cowen's daughter Velma and her husband Stan Tilley are both graduates of the Georgia law class of 1978.

The seniors and their parents were honored at a reception May 10 at the Lumpkin House which was sponsored by the Law School Association.

E. Joint Meeting Weekend

The annual fall weekend for alumni leaders was converted this year into a special celebration of the Law School's 125th anniversary. The highlight of the October 12-13 weekend of events was a dinner theater production on Friday night. The entertainment, patterned after the annual student comedy production called "The Libel Show," featured alumni, students, and faculty members acting out a humorous look at the founding of the school and its beloved and legendary professors. The dinner and musical skit were held at the Classic City Convention Center and it drew an attendance of more than 260 alumni and friends of the School. The show was produced by alumni director Gwen Wood and directed by Tom Pender, a Ph.D. candidate in the University of Georgia Department of Drama.

On the following morning, an audio-visual presentation on the School's history was shown in the law auditorium. The 13-minute presentation included old photographs, memorabilia, and music which re-created the colorful events and personalities of the past. It was professionally narrated and produced by WGTV's film production unit.

Alumni director Gwen Wood did the research for and edited the script as well as furnished the photos and publications for the slides.

Other events of the 125th anniversary celebration weekend included the Sibley lecture by Solicitor General Rex Lee on Friday afternoon, and a box lunch served before the Saturday afternoon football game with Ole Miss.

F. Lumpkin House Re-Opening and Colonial Robe Presentation

1. The Joseph Henry Lumpkin House was formally re-opened in ceremonies November 4. The house, located on Prince Avenue in Athens, had undergone extensive interior restoration in the past nine months.

The School of Law conducted a funds development drive to finance the restoration of the 140-year-old structure. It is presently owned and managed by the Joseph Henry Lumpkin Foundation, a citizens group, which is comprised of numerous trustees who have ties to the law School or who are interested in historical preservation.

The charter of the Lumpkin Foundation calls for the house to be used for purposes which further the educational mission of the Law School. It was the home of Georgia's first chief justice, who was also a co-founder of the Georgia Law School.

Dean Ralph Beaird served as master of ceremonies for the re-opening ceremonies. The highlight of the occasion was the official designation of the three large downstairs rooms of the house in honor of the first justices of the Georgia Supreme Court: Lumpkin, Eugenius A. Nisbet and Hiram Warner. Descendants of the three men had joined together to fund a portion of the restoration costs, and their gifts were acknowledged at the ceremony.

During the ceremony, Lumpkin Foundation President Carroll Leavell acknowledged special groups and individuals, in addition to the restoration donors, who made the re-opening possible. A framed certificate of appreciation was given to the Athens Woman's Club for its care and management of the house during the years the club owned the property, and for its gift of the house to the Foundation. Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Sams received the applause of the audience for their work in furnishing the home.

Also speaking at the ceremony was former Congressman Robert C. Stephens, a member of the Lumpkin Foundation Board of Trustees. He gave biographical sketches of the three justices who were honored by the room designations.

The assistance of the Georgia Department of National Resources was acknowledged by Carroll Leavell, who introduced Dr. Elizabeth Lyon, head of the Historic Preservation Section.

Following the ceremony, an afternoon tea, English-style, was served in the Lumpkin House dining room. Serving as hostesses were members of the Law Spouses Association, a group which has had an ongoing project to help with the Lumpkin House restoration during the past few years.

2. Three judicial robes, made of royal purple wool and trimmed in lambs wool, were presented to the Law School in ceremonies held November 4. The robes are replicas of those worn by judges of the Colony of Georgia when it was governed by English trustees.

The robes were the result of a year-long funding project by the Georgia State Society of the Daughters of the American Colonists (DAC).

Dean Ralph Beaird served as master of ceremonies for the presentation, which was an occasion to formally receive the robes and to express appreciation to the DAC. Assistant Dean Robert Brussack gave a brief history of the judicial system in the Colony of Georgia and described the function of the colonial judges.

Erwin Surrency, Law Librarian and Professor of Law, described the research effort which went to ascertaining the type of robes which would have been worn by the judges. The research and fabrication of the garments was done by Patti Hunt, instructor in the Clothing and Textiles Department of The University of Georgia College of Home Economics.

The coordinator of fund-raising for the gift of the robes was Mrs. George S. Connell, Sr. of Atlanta. Mrs. Connell was State Regent of the Daughters of the American Colonists last year, and she designated the robes campaign as her official state project.

The robes were "unveiled" by having them modeled by Justices Charles Weltner, George Smith, and Thomas Marshall of the Supreme Court of Georgia. Marshall and Smith are graduates of the Georgia Law School, and Weltner is a direct descendant of Chief Justice Joseph Henry Lumpkin of Georgia's first Supreme Court.

The ceremony concluded with a selection of Baroque music from the colonial period performed by flutists Beth Blackburn and Katherine Ingraham.

G. Visitors to the Law School

1. Persons who visited the Law School as lecturers in international or comparative law included:

--George B. O'Haver, Jr., General Counsel and Vice President of Coca-Cola Japan. October 7-14, 1985.

--Marc Dassel, European Economic Community tax attorney and lecturer at the Brussels Seminar, and Mrs. Dassel, who is a judge in the Belgian Commercial Courts. November 2, 1984.

--William P. Bundy, official in the Kennedy and Johnson presidential administrations, who spoke on "Arms Limitations Negotiations in the 1980's." February 26, 1985.

--Kenneth R. Simmons, professor of international law in the University of London and Dean of the Faculty of Laws at Queen Mary College, who spoke on "The Prospects of International Arbitration."

--Charles Debattista, professor at the University of Southampton, England and a member of Southampton's Marine Law Institute. He conducted a month-long mini-course in April entitled, "Law Relating to International Sales: Shipping and Documentary Problems in CIF and FOB Sales."

--Roger Blanpain, professor of law at the Vrije Universiteit de Brusselle visited the last two weeks in April. His area of expertise is labor law and industrial relations. He gave a series of lectures featuring a comparative perspective on labor law.

--Clau Dieter Ehlermann, The Director of Legal Services of the European Communities Commission, visited the Law School April 10.

2. Guests who lectured on other topics included:

--Louis Loss, professor emeritus at the Harvard Law School, was scholar-in-residence during the week of March 25-29. He is the author of the foremost treatise on securities regulation in legal scholarship.

--George Hairston, associate legal counsel of the NAACP in New York, and Earl Shinhoster, regional director of the NAACP in Atlanta, presented a panel discussion on the criminal legal defense system as a part of the observance of Black History Month in February.

VIII. ALUMNI RELATIONS

A. The Law School Association

1. The Law School Association Council held its annual fall meeting Saturday, October 13. President Jule W. Felton, Jr. was chairman for the meeting.

2. The Law School Association's Law Day luncheon was held April 20 at the Athens Country Club. A brief meeting of the council was held on the morning of the Law Day exercises. The 1985-86 budget for the Law School fund was approved for recommendation to the entire Association.

3. The Law School Association scheduled its two annual breakfasts in conjunction with the State Bar of Georgia meetings. One was held January 10 at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in Atlanta. Judge Marion Pope, president-elect for 1984-85 was installed as president and took office at the annual meeting held June 14 in Savannah. Other officers elected were: Ed Killorin, president-elect; Verner Chaffin, secretary and Gary Blasingame, treasurer.

4. The Washington, D. C. chapter of the Law School Association held a dinner meeting May 21 which featured a panel discussion on relationships with the Soviet Union. Guest speakers were Professor Dean Rusk, former Secretary of State; Ambassador Max Kampelman, and Senator Sam Nunn.

In February, the Law School Association hosted a luncheon for members of the General Assembly who are Georgia law graduates. Invited were alumni who serve in all three branches of state government.

5. The Law School Alumni Office assisted planning groups in the arrangements for class reunions during the fall football season. The Class of 1969 held its reunion November 3 at the Athens Country Club. Joe Bruckner and Nat Slaughter were the coordinators for the reunion. The Class of 1939 met October 13 at Charlie Williams Pinecrest Lodge. Dean Covington was the reunion coordinator.

B. Board of Visitors

The Law School Board of Visitors held its fall meeting on October 12, 1984. The winter meeting was held just before the luncheon with Georgia legislators in February. The group met again in March in Athens in a joint meeting with the re-accreditation inspection team. Barry Phillips of Atlanta was elected to the chairmanship of the Board for 1985. New members joining the Board of Visitors at its winter meeting were Ben Weinberg of Atlanta, Bruce Kirbo of Bainbridge and Michael Bowers of Atlanta.

IX. PRIVATE FUNDS DEVELOPMENT

A. Law School Fund Campaign

The Law School Fund Campaign for 1984-85 was initiated in November with the mailing of a printed flyer to all law graduates which urged law graduates to earmark their gifts for law school use rather than give them unrestricted to the University of Georgia Foundation.

A concerted effort was made to interest law alumni in becoming members of the Presidents Club. Frank Brookins, director of Planned Giving in the UGA Development Office, became the part-time fund raiser for major gifts from law graduates and friends of the Law School.

B. Law Library Fund Campaign (lithograph sales)

The acquisitions program of the Law Library is the beneficiary of funds raised through the distribution of lithographs, which were printed from the original watercolor painting given to the School to commemorate its 125th anniversary. The lithographs were given to alumni and friends for a pre-printing gift of $50 and a post-printing contribution of $60. As of June 30, 1985, the amount raised by the lithographs totalled $4,500.00.

C. Capital Gifts Campaign

From July 1, 1984 through June 30, 1985, approximately, $1,587,662 was pledged or given to the Law School endowment through capital gifts. This was in addition to the $144,032 in annual giving. Descriptions of some of these gifts follows:

1. The Thomas M. Kirbo Professorship in Law

In December, the trustees of the Thomas M. and Irene B. Kirbo charitable trust announced plans to establish a professorship in law named in honor and memory of Kirbo. Two of his nephews, Charles and Bruce, are graduates of the Georgia Law School. The amount of the corpus in the professorship is expected to reach $500,000. The first $50,000 was received in March 1985.

Thomas Kirbo was a self-made millionaire whose business was primarily real estate in Florida. He grew up in South Georgia, but spent his adult life in Jacksonville, Florida.

2. Union Camp Corporation Gift

Union Camp Corporation of Savannah has announced a major gift to the University of Georgia Bicentennial Campaign, of which $50,000 will come to the School of Law. It will be given in $10,000 increments over a five-year period. Thomas J. Dillon, a 1953 law graduate from Savannah, is associate general counsel of Union Camp. The first $10,00 was received in May 1985.

3. The Thomas B. Murphy Scholarship Fund

A group of corporation executives, led by Earl Leonard of Atlanta, mounted a campaign in the spring of 1985 to raise funds for the Murphy Scholarship Fund. Gifts were added to the $6,370 which remained in the Murphy portrait fund from last year. The campaign successfully reached its goal of $30,000, and the fund creation was announced on Law Day, April 20. Gifts were made by 34 corporations and individuals. Most were in the amount of $500 each.

4. The Roy V. Harris Scholarship Fund

Roy V. Harris died January 15, 1985 at the age of 89. Harris was a legislative leader and dominant figure in the state's public life for many years. He was speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives, and he served three seven-year terms on the Board of Regents. A sale of stock in December, 1984 boosted the endowment of the Roy V. Harris Scholarship Fund by $5,125. The gift was made by Clay Adamson of Augusta in honor of Harris, a 1919 graduate of the Georgia Law School.

At the time of Mr. Harris' death, family members designated the School of Law as the recipient of memorial gifts. From January 15 to June 1, 1985, the Roy V. Harris Scholarship Fund received $1,940 from 53 donors.

5. The Patricia C. Downing Memorial Scholarship Fund

A scholarship fund has been established in memory of Patricia Carter Downing, Class of 1974.

Pat Downing died in an automobile accident caused by deep snow and severe weather conditions near her home in Delanson, New York, on January 31, 1984.

She held the position of Public Service Commission Administrative Law Judge for the State of New York, to which she was appointed at the age of 32. She had previously served as an attorney with the Commission for four years.

While in law school, she served as executive editor of the Georgia Law Review.

Patricia A. Cain, a close friend of Pat Downing's and a co-graduate of the Class of 1974, has made a Presidents Club-level pledge to the University of Georgia Foundation for the purpose of establishing the endowed scholarship. The fund will also consist of memorial gifts made at the time of her death and the contributions of classmates in the Classes of 1973, 1974 and 1975 who were contacted by a mailing in January.

The amount of the scholarship fund, including the $10,000 President Club pledge, stood at $11,960 on June 30.

6. Gift of Wyck a Knox, Jr.

Wyck Knox of Augusta, a member of the Georgia law class of 1964, made a gift of stock in December, 1984. The sale of the stock produced a substantial boost of $17,195 to the Georgia Law Review Endowment Fund. Knox is a former chairman of the Law School's Board of Visitors.

7. Ann Cox Foundation Gift to Rusk Center

The Rusk Center's Dean Rusk Archives project received a grant in January from the Ann Cox Foundation of Atlanta in the amount of $15,000. The grant is being used to catalog and consolidate the papers of Professor Dean Rusk, who served eight years as U. S. Secretary of State.

The Foundation was created by Ann Cox Chambers of Atlanta. The grant, which was made through the Law School Association, will be followed by a second grant next year.

8. Joseph Henry Lumpkin House Restoration

During the 1984-85 year, the funds campaign to restore the interior of the Lumpkin House reached a high peak of activity. The downstairs of the House was re-opened in formal ceremonies in November. Renovation on the upstairs portion was virtually completed four months later. As of December 31, 1984, $119,385.93 had been raised through private gifts for the Lumpkin House interior renovation. Gifts received after that date were applied to the initial costs of setting up housekeeping and preparing the House for rental to various groups for business and social functions.

X. PHYSICAL PLANT

A. Current Structures

In addition to the main law building complex, the School of Law utilized several other structures in 1984-85:

1. Law Library Annex, north campus quadrangle.
2. Waddel Hall, north campus quadrangle - home of the Dean Rusk Center for International and Comparative Law.
3. Athens Legal Aid and Defender Society - office in Saye Building on North Lumpkin Street.
4. Prosecutorial Clinic - housed in the Office of the District Attorney on Hancock Street.

B. Repairs and Renovations

During 1984-85, the smoking room in the law Library's third floor was converted into a faculty lounge with a kitchenette. An alcove in the Annex was converted into a smoking room for library patrons.

The student lounge area on the first floor received new furniture. The new furnishings--sofas, chairs, end tables and lamps--are comfortable and sturdy for student use.

The Dean's Office and reception areas were re-carpeted, and area rugs were added to the lounge outside the Placement Resources Center.

Classroom D was furnished with furniture and equipment which simulates a courtroom setting. The bench, jury box, and counsel tables were built for the Trial Practice course.
