I. SUMMARY

The highlight of the 1980-81 academic year at the University of Georgia School of Law was the opening of the new Law Library Annex. The building was dedicated May 2, 1981 in ceremonies marking the Law Day observance. U.S. Supreme Court Justice Harry Blackmun was the dedication speaker.

The new annex contains 25,000 square feet divided among three floors of library, office and instructional space. With this addition the law school physical plant now totals 138,000 square feet. The annex includes 20 offices for the editorial staffs of the Georgia Law Review and the Journal of International and Comparative Law, five faculty offices, five library staff offices, the headquarters of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education, two conference rooms and an audio-visual room.

The construction project, undertaken by Barge and Company, Inc. of Atlanta, took 18 months and $1.5 million to complete. Architects for the project were members of the Atlanta firm of Jova, Daniels and Busby.

The completion of the annex makes it possible for the library staff to shelve the current total collection of 320,000 volumes. It creates access to all of the resources as well as provides adequate study and conference space--important ingredients to a successful law program.

The opening of the new annex represents the passing of a milestone in the development of a true law center at the University of Georgia School of Law.

In his dedication address, Justice Blackmun reminded us that "new buildings may not be essential for the development of good lawyers," but that buildings of this kind "help to provide incentive and an appropriate atmosphere for the flowering of those talents that are peculiar to the legal profession."

It is important that the faculty and administration periodically review how those "talents peculiar to the legal profession" can be nurtured and enhanced in the institutional setting of this Law School. This was done this year in the context of the Cramton Committee Report's emphasis on skills training.

Curriculum

One talent is trial advocacy. This year the traditional trial practice course was changed to a National Institute of Trial Advocacy (NITA)-type program with the able assistance of visiting practitioners from the Atlanta firm of Powell, Goldstein, Frazer & Murphy. Teams of experienced litigators demonstrated effective trial techniques and critiqued student performance.

Another legal talent, or measurement of one's competency, is research and writing capability. The American Bar Association's Task Force on Lawyer Competency recommended that law students be provided with thorough and vigorous research and writing instruction. This year, under the supervision of two full-time instructors, first year law students completed complex library research exercises, analyzed and wrote memoranda of law, prepared appellate briefs and presented oral arguments.

Faculty Performance

The law faculty, encouraged by the ABA Task Force Report, has produced a number of significant sets of instructional materials for use in the classroom. Faculty members have taken a particular interest this year in preparing problem materials which emphasize a practical approach in law teaching. Several professors were asked to share their instructional methods at national clinics on the teaching of contracts and evidence courses.

While not neglecting the traditional emphasis, the thirty-four members of the law faculty have generated eighteen law review articles, two books, fourteen book supplements, and fifteen monographs and conference papers this year.

Joining this research and teaching program this year is a new faculty member who is no newcomer to scholarly publications. Dr. Louis B. Sohn, who left Harvard to become the Ernest and Emily Woodruff chairholder, is the author of 23 books and 175 articles in international law. Sohn, who arrived in June, is the originator of the concept of "Peace through World Law" and now serves as one of the U.S. delegates to the Law of the Sea Conference.

The Woodruff Chair was one of the two professorships resulting from the private funds campaign which the School of Law undertook in 1978. The other was the Talmadge Chair in Public Law. That professorship will be filled on a visiting basis next January by William Young of Columbia, who is the American Law Institute Reporter on Restitution and the author of a leading casebook on contracts.

Capital Gifts Development

The capital gifts campaign which made these professorships possible is continuing to gain momentum. Since July of 1980, five major gifts and pledges totalling more than $600,000 have been added to the endowment of the School. These include a gift of $141,000 for international law fellowships by the Belton Bagging Company of South Carolina, a pledge of $250,000 to the law library by Joseph E. Cheeley, Jr. of Buford, an endowment for the Moot Court program of approximately $50,000 by William Ponsoldt, a Milwaukee industrialist, a scholarship fund of $70,000 in honor of the late Marion Smith, and the beginning of a corpus for the Harmon Caldwell Chair in Constitutional Law. Also, contributions and pledges for the Martin E. Kilpatrick Chair in Corporate and Securities Law are nearing the $200,000 mark.

Public Service Programs

A Law Center, by definition, performs a variety of functions that are outwardly as well as inwardly focused. The Institute of Continuing Legal Education is a prime example of our outreach program. This year the ICLE made its programs even more accessible by means of a broadcast system covering a seventeen-city network. Through the means of long distance telephone lines and two-way conference phone units, the seminar participants not physically present are able to listen to lectures and ask questions. The telephone conferencing system helps to make continuing legal education available on a convenient and economically feasible basis.

The Institute of Continuing Judicial Education is now firmly rooted and is in great demand as the education and training unit for Georgia judges as well as court personnel. Several court administrative personnel groups have come to ICJE this year asking it to set up their recertification training seminars. It is truly the umbrella operation for the orientation and continuing education of those who administer the court system of this state.

Another vital service to the State and to the legal profession is the development of special collections in the law library. Librarian Surrency is calling for and assembling the municipal codes, bar association periodicals, public commissioners' decisions, and other specialized references which the library staff has indexed and made available for research. These collections form a unique set of archives which are proving to be valuable to scholars and practitioners alike.

Administrative Personnel Changes

The law school's administrative staff is essential to the progress of the school and the 125 people associated with it. This year was an exceptional one in that three new key people came on board within a two week period. Dr. Giles Kennedy is now Director of Personnel and the Budget, replacing Dr. William Detwiler who has become Director of Personnel at Southern Methodist University. Jill Coveny, Placement Director, left in May to become personnel coordinator for a law firm in Jacksonville, Florida. The new placement director is Claudia C. Lambright, who was formerly administrative coordinator in the Department of Banking and Finance of the College of Business. A new position created this year is that of admissions recruitment specialist. Douglas Hayes, of Birmingham, Alabama has now assumed the duties which will put the School into more direct contact with applicants and pre-law advisors.

Future Trends

The appointment of a placement director and an admissions recruiter point to the value which this Law School places upon the quality level of the student body and the opportunities they should have as law alumni. It is also indicative of a nationwide trend--limited job openings for the number of lawyers entering the market each year, and a decline in the demand for a legal education.

Placement statistics for the Class of 1981 were not as encouraging as those of last year. As of the date of graduation last year, the Class of 1980 was 65 percent placed. At the comparable time this year, 52 percent of the seniors had accepted job offers.

The numerical level of applications received each year for the entering class has stabilized. A report by the Joint Committee on Demand for Legal Education (AALS-LSA) indicates that the demand for legal education in the 1980's will decline substantially. The number of 22 year olds in Georgia will decline by 12% between 1979 and 1985. The number of Georgia residents who have had the testing service process complete LSDAS reports has decreased 16% from 1975 through 1979.

Statewide, the bar examination passing percentages have dipped below the 50 percent mark on several occasions during the past few years although the passing rates of Georgia Law School test takers have consistently fallen within the 95 to 98 percent range.

Fortunately, here at Georgia we have not witnessed the frightening prospects of severe budgetary distress which results from almost complete reliance on student tuition fees. There is not the desperate struggle to keep the enrollment numbers up, no matter what the quality, in order to stay afloat financially. However, the warning signal of less demand for legal education nationwide should be brought home to this state and studied by those officials who are urging the funding of a law school at Georgia State University.

Numerous factors weigh against the creation of a new law school at Georgia State, even though it has been offered the gift of Woodrow Wilson College of Law. They include:

1. Demographics portend a greatly reduced applicant pool during the 1980's. The rate of decline in interest among candidates in Georgia is more than 50 percent higher than the national average.

2. Record numbers of lawyers will be seeking employment in a job market in which demand for legal positions cannot keep pace with the limited supply of jobs.

3. Renewed calls for lawyer competency will cause major shifts in legal education programs such as a move toward clinically intensive instruction. Clinical education is expensive.

4. Inflation takes its toll not only in the costs of legal education but also in the volume of materials needed to keep abreast of developing law.

Those arguing for a new law school need to subject their proposal to a cost-benefit analysis. A conservative calculation of operating and personnel costs for a startup fiscal year, based on statistics compiled from ABA-accredited law schools of comparable size to the one proposed, produces a total budget at $2,285,678. Georgia State officials predict a total of $1,025,700 for the first full year of operation. This underestimation of $1.3 million is something which the study committee of the Board of Regents should bear in mind when evaluating the relative benefits of a new program.

Conclusion

I conclude this summary of the 1980-81 academic year with an expression of the high regard we feel toward the excellent working relationship between the School of Law and the President of the University of Georgia.

A group of our students recently illustrated this sentiment when they presented Dr. Fred Davison with an engraved plaque. The Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law and the Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law gave President Davison that token of appreciation for his continuing support of the international law programs at the University of Georgia.

The extent of Dr. Davison's support encompasses not only international law but the entire range of programs with the law center. For this reason, we can end fiscal year 1980-81 on an optimistic note because we know that we have the support necessary to make the years to come successful ones.

2. Financial Aid

The financial assistance available at the University of Georgia School of Law was approximately $236,000 for the 1980-81 academic year.

An activity which proved to be very fruitful was the Vasser Woolley, Woodruff, and Spalding Scholarship Selection Process. Of eleven candidates chosen to compete as finalists for these major awards, ten students made their commitment to come to Georgia. The selection process was reevaluated and it was decided that interviews should be held in Athens rather than in Atlanta where prospective scholars could see the Law School's facilities first hand. This year the selection process also included a round table discussion with the prospective scholars to expose them to the school's resources, a film about the School and dinner at the Athens Country Club.

A list with a description of the various sources of financial assistance follows:

a. Vasser Woolley Scholarships

These scholarships honor Vasser Woolley, Jr. who was born in Atlanta in 1896 and was killed in the Paris air crash in 1962 which took the lives of 122 Atlantans. Although he never studied law, Mr. Woolley had a high regard for attorneys as wise counselors and able advocates. This active Georgia businessman distinguished himself in the field of textiles and real estate. A graduate of Georgia Tech in 1917 with a B.S. in chemical engineering, Mr. Woolley was president of the Seydel-Woolley and Company.

b. Hughes Spalding Scholarships

These scholarships honor the late Hughes Spalding, Law class of 1910. Admitted to the Georgia Bar in 1910, Hughes Spalding practiced law in Atlanta until his death in 1969. He was a dedicated supporter of education in Georgia as chairman of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia and as president of the University Alumni Society.

c. Woodruff Scholarships

The purpose of the Woodruff Scholarships is to attract highly qualified Georgians to the study of law at the University of Georgia. The School of Law was assisted in this purpose in 1973 by a gift of over one-half million dollars from an anonymous donor to the University of Georgia Foundation. The Foundation in turn established a law school scholarship fund with this grant to finance a number of awards each year to be known as Woodruff Scholarships.

d. Bryant T. Castellow Memorial Scholarship Fund

This scholarship fund was established in memory of the late U.S. Congressman from Georgia's Third District. Representative Castellow served in Congress during the New Deal Era, where he introduced measures which greatly improved the agricultural economy of his region. He graduated from the School of Law in 1897. The Castellow fund provides scholarships based on demonstrated ability and financial need.

e. Frank A. Constangy Memorial Scholarship

This scholarship was established in 1972 to honor Mr. Frank A. Constangy, a distinguished Atlanta practitioner in the field of labor law who obtained both his bachelor and law degrees from the University of Georgia.

f. W. R. McDonald Portrait Fund

This fund was created for the benefit of handicapped students enrolled in the School of Law. Mrs. W. R. McDonald was primarily interested in aiding those law students who were blind or visually handicapped.

g. Roy V. Harris Scholarship Fund

This fund honors an alumnus of the Georgia Law School who graduated in 1919. Mr. Harris, who served in the Georgia General Assembly, resides in Augusta.

h. Milton M. Ratner Scholarship and Loan Fund

This fund was established in 1973 by the Milton M. Ratner Foundation of Detroit, Michigan. Ratner, a Detroit residential builder, lived near Calhoun, Georgia, upon retirement. This fund provides scholarships and loans to law students, based on demonstrated academic ability and financial need.

i. Claude B. Barrett Fund

This fund was established in 1969 to honor M. Claude B. Barrett of Houston, Texas. Mr. Barrett is a 1918 graduate of the Georgia Law School.

j. B. Hugh Burgess Fund

This fund makes available financial assistance to a needy DeKalb County resident. This was created by a stipulation in the will of Mr. B. Hugh Burgess in June, 1973.

k. Robert Troutman Scholarship

This fund is in honor of Robert B. Troutman, Sr. It was established to grant aid to the Editor-in-Chief of the Georgia Law Review.

l. Law School Composite Fund

The Law School fund is a part of and is administered by the University of Georgia Foundation. It is supported by annual alumni giving.

m. Welborn B. Cody Memorial Scholarship

This scholarship fund was established in 1976 in memory of Welborn B. Cody, a member of the firm of Kilpatrick, Cody Rogers, McClatchey and Regenstein. Cody was a 1921 graduate of the Georgia Law School. Scholarship recipient selections are based on the quality of high motivation as well as financial need.

n. American Bar Association--Council on Legal Education Opportunity Scholarship

This is a federally funded program established in 1969 which seeks to provide economically disadvantaged students an opportunity to attend an accredited law school. CLEO provides an annual living stipend to those program graduates who continue in Law School.

o. John and Mary Franklin Foundation Law Scholarship Fund

This scholarship fund was established in 1979 with a $100,000 endowment to enable the school to recruit outstanding Georgia residents.

p. Dean and Virginia Rusk Fund

This fund provides fellowships for LL.M. candidates accepted for study in the area of international law.

q. Talmadge Law Scholarship Fund

This fund was created in 1979 to provide aid to worthy students.

r. Edward J. Grassman Scholarship Fund

This fund was created in 1980 to provide aid to worthy students.

C. Academic Evaluation

1. Academic Performance

Class of 1981

In September of 1978, 212 students registered as members of the Class of 1981. In September 1979, 203 (197 + 6 transfer) registered and in September 1980, 203 (197 + 6 transfer).

Including transfer students, 197 received their degrees in June 1981 or August 1981. This includes a retention rate of 93% of the original first year class. Three of the original first year class members will complete their degrees in 1981-82. The final retention rate for the Class of 1981 will therefore be 94.3%.

Class of 1982

In September of 1979, 233 students registered as members of the Class of 1982. In September 1980, 225 (217 + 8 transfer) registered and in the spring 223 took final examinations--a retention rate of 93% of the original class members.

Class of 1983

In September 1980, 229 students registered as members of the Class of 1983, and in June, 216 sat for examinations. Until all examinations are graded and cumulative averages computed, it is not known how many first year students have maintained the necessary academic standing to continue law studies. The retention rate for the first year class can be determined at the time of fall quarter registration.

2. Bar Exam Results

Under the provisions of an act passed by the Georgia General Assembly in January 1974, third year law students are eligible to take the Georgia Bar Examination if they have completed at least seven quarters of law studies leading to the J.D. degree.

The Class of 1981 therefore, is comprised of December, March and June graduates who could have passed the examination in either July 1980, February 1981, or July 1981, and still be considered as having become a member of the State Bar of Georgia during the year of his or her graduation.

Of the 197 seniors who graduated in December 1980, March 1981, June 1981 or August 1981, 148 took the July 1980 or the February 1981, Georgia Bar Examination. The July 1981 Bar Exam has not yet been administered. The results are as follows:

1. Number of Georgia law graduates who sat for Georgia Bar Examination in July, 1980: 7
2. Number of Georgia law students who sat for Georgia Bar Examination in February, 1981: 141
- Total: 148
3. Number of seniors who passed July 1980 Bar Exam: 7
4. Number of seniors who passed February 1981 Bar Exam: 132
- Total: 139
5. Number of seniors who failed July 1980 Bar Exam: 0
6. Number of seniors who failed February 1981 Bar Exam: 9
- Total: 9
7. Percentage of graduates who took the Georgia
Bar Examination in July 1980 or February 1981
and passed it: 94%

D. Clinical Experience

1. Legal Aid and Defender Society

As with preceding years, the case load of the defender portion of the Society continues to grow throughout the Western Judicial Circuit. For the current year, the case load will once more exceed 1000 cases. Student involvement in the criminal cases commences once the Society is appointed to represent indigent defendants in the Circuit. Initial interviewing of clients in the office or in the county jail by students is followed by a discussion of the case with trial attorneys and preparation for preliminary hearings. Third-year students who have been certified under the Third Year Practice Act handle these initial hearings under the supervision of staff lawyers.

Student work on cases beyond the committal stage includes research, preparation of legal memoranda, and the location and interviewing of witnesses. During the actual trial of cases, students work as assistants to the trial attorneys. Post-conviction involvement includes preparation of appellate briefs and petitions for sentence review. Cases are drawn from the complete range of criminal offenses. The students are therefore afforded a wide and varied experience in criminal defense work.

The civil case load for the current year approximates the load for last year (400 cases). The outlook for the next year, however, is for a dramatic increase as Federal funding for legal services organizations is cut. This creates a shortage of available legal aid services in the area. With the projected increase in the civil case load, students will be afforded the opportunity of handling a broader spectrum of cases.

Although no contingent fee cases nor plaintiff's cases in divorces will be handled, landlord/tenant, civil commitment, social security and adoption cases will require more student work.

The resolution of disputes through negotiation and extra-judicial settlement is encouraged and emphasized in client counseling by the Society.

The Prisoner Legal Counseling Project continues with a full staff of seven attorneys and approximately forty students who provide research and back-up support. As the number of prisoners within state institutions grows, the case load continues to swell, and project personnel find themselves in courts at all levels of both the state and federal systems. One of the project cases was argued by the chief of litigation of the Project before the Supreme Court of the United States. The decision of that court is still unknown at the time of this writing.

The project continues to maintain close liaison and harmonious relations with the Georgia Department of Law, the Department of Offender Rehabilitation, the State Board of Pardons and Paroles, and the office of the Governor in providing legal services for prisoners.

The credibility and value of the work of the Project during the year has been the subject of commendatory letters from the senior federal district judges for both the Middle District and the Southern District of Georgia.

2. The Prosecutorial Clinic

The ten years of operation of a prosecutorial clinic at the University of Georgia School of Law has been marked by a continuous refinement and enlargement of student activities. There has been an increase in the number of student appearances in court, and students have participated in a greater number of writing exercises. Their seminar meetings contain new and more varied topics.

The Clinic continues to operate based on the premise that legal education cannot be complete without attention to the practical aspect of trial practice. Prosecution has remained a successful vehicle for offering clinical experiences for law students. The experience provides an exercise in carrying the burden of proof, a responsibility which requires preparation and investigation. It is excellent training for understanding the principles of evidence, criminal law, criminal procedure and trial practice.

In 1980-81, 44 second and third year students were enrolled in the Prosecutorial Clinic. Approximately 55 students wrote tryout memos in seeking one of the 21 entering positions, maintaining the usual 2:5:1 demand-to-supply ratio.

Second year students investigated 623 cases in 1980-81. These investigations emphasize fact-finding, witness evaluation, communication, and legal research. All second year students wrote appellate briefs to the Georgia Court of Appeals, and most participants wrote additional internal memos of law.

Third year students concentrated on courtroom experiences. Twenty-one Superior Court cases involved clinic members appearing in one degree or another as the State's prosecutor. Not every student tried a felony, but many tried more than one, and one student tried five cases. Based on the student's individual experience, some examined witnesses while others were able to try the entire case from opening statement to final argument.

Almost every case tried by the clinic director involved student assistance, and the capacity to increase student trial participation was dramatically increased by the willingness of assistant attorneys Robert Elkins and Kenneth Mauldin to incorporate student assistance in their work.

Supplementing court appearances for third-year students were several other activities. Third year students wrote petitions for certiorari and briefs in opposition to petition to the Supreme Court of Georgia. Other third year students drafted opinions and briefs for local Superior Court judges. Some third year students appeared before the grand jury to present cases for possible indictment, and several students prosecuted probation revocation and pretrial motion hearings.

All Prosecutorial Clinic students met weekly with the Director for a period of formalized instruction.

Seminar topics during the year included studies of recent decisions, new statutes, criminal procedure, investigative techniques, practical evidence problems, trial preparation, and trial conduct and ethics. Printed materials and checklists and examples were the teaching tools.

3. Legal Research and Writing

The mission of the legal research and writing course is to implement the applicable recommendations of the American Bar Association's Task Force on Lawyer Competency chaired by Dean Roger Cramton of Cornell Law School. The Task Force recommended that law students be provided with thorough and rigorous research and writing training. The Research and Writing Program fulfilled its mission this year in the following ways:

- a. Two full-time instructors taught 218 first year students.
- b. First year law students were taught the fundamentals of legal research, legal writing, use of the law library, and proper legal citation form.
- c. First year law students were required to complete a complex library research exercise, to write a closed (no research involved) memorandum, to analyze, research, and write an open memorandum, to prepare an appellate brief, and to participate in two mandatory rounds of oral argument.

Unlike 1979-1980, all written work in 1980-1981 related to the appellate brief problem which also formed the basis for the Russell Competition on Law Day to choose Best Briefs and Best Oralist. Next year all written work and the library research exercise will relate to the brief problem. Furthermore, due to popular student demand, a short practice brief will be prepared next year by each student, critiqued by the instructor, and returned to the student before the graded appellate brief is prepared. This practice brief will utilize materials from the closed memo and will afford an additional opportunity for legal writing instruction and feedback with only a modest increase in work load.

E. Graduate Studies Program

During the 1980-81 academic year, five students were enrolled in the LL.M. program. Two are recent graduates of universities in Sweden and Germany who are doing in-depth, comparative research on the utility of product recall and the impact of national fiscal and monetary policies on various aspects of corporate law. Two other LL.M. candidates are graduates of the University of Georgia and University of Oklahoma who have practiced law for more than three years and have undertaken graduate study to develop skills for specialized practice and law teaching. One of these lawyers is examining the legal and political problems associated with the regulation of alien ownership of land in the United States. The other has analyzed the legal and economic aspects of multi-nation cooperation in the Pacific Basin since World War II. The fifth student is a recent law school graduate who is identifying the changes in U.S. and structures which must be made to accommodate the expanded use of barter in world trade. All these lawyer-researchers have received $5,000 study fellowships from the law school or from an international organization.

The Graduate Studies Committee is now operating with guidelines that limit admission to approximately five students per year who qualify for graduate fellowships from the law school, national or international organizations or foreign countries. All applicants must submit a detailed statement of career goals and intentions as well as a proposed program of coursework and research before admission. Like all five students this year, they must complete their work with above a 3.0 grade average. Because admission review is stringent so as to insure serious, goal-oriented graduate study at the law school, the LL.M. students now in residence have far exceeded these quality standards and are in a position to qualify for unique job opportunities.

The admission process for 1981-82 is nearly complete. Again several students from Europe will undertake comparative research on the ability of national legal systems to deal with contemporary problems. Several are returning to graduate study with over five years experience to develop specialized skills in the legal aspects of industrial organization and resource management. One will take advantage of special expertise of the law faculty to study evolving problems of state taxation of multinational companies. Their previous records indicate the quality of their course work and research will far exceed the 3.0 minimum standard for LL.M. graduates, and their career goals evidence a determination to directly apply the benefits of their year at the law school to pursue unique legal opportunities.

IV. LAW LIBRARY

A. Summary

The academic year of 1980-81 is significant to the Law Library because of the completion of the new Annex. The building was dedicated on May 2, 1981 at the time of the celebration of Law Day. The shelves were installed shortly after the dedication and the Library staff began to move books into the building almost immediately. However, it was soon apparent that the term "free standing shelves" was a misnomer, for the shelves had to be reinforced with tie rods before the building could be occupied. The Annex was operational by the opening of summer school session 1981 for use of students for study. However, much will need to be done during the summer in organizing and moving books into the new facilities.

The additional shelves in the Annex have made possible the integration of the entire collection. Previously, parts of the collection which were not housed in the present Library facilities were stored in the Main Library building in several different locations. The move has been complicated by the need to integrate these books into a well-organized collection.

In anticipation of this move, the staff began to sort the books which were in box storage. Those which were in such bad shape that they could not stand use in a library or had no retail value were discarded. This Library was able to give to a relatively new Hall County Law Library a set of AMERICAN LAW REPORTS and AMERICAN JURISPRUDENCE, 2d series. Other volumes were cataloged, processed, and incorporated into the collection.

Jose Rodriguez, in consultation with the Law Librarian, was directly responsible for making the necessary plans for the arrangement of the collection. He was assisted by Alan Anderson, a graduate of the class of 1980 who joined the staff for one year. Anderson, with student help, was responsible for sorting out the books, and supervising their arrangement on the shelves. The work that was accomplished during the year would not have been possible without the dedication and willingness of Anderson to work under less than ideal conditions in the top mechanical room of the Main Library.

B. Special Collections

Another accomplishment during this academic year has been the expansion of the special collections. The development of such a collection requires thought and planning. Plans must be carefully made to determine what the Library would really like to obtain and determining the proper officials to whom inquiries should be addressed. Nonspecific letters receive nonspecific or even nonexistent answers. It definitely hurts the image of the Law Library to send a letter to a city whose code we already own or have already ordered.

Numerous Georgia cities have been contacted in order to obtain municipal codes, both new and old. This collection has grown significantly. As a result of personal letters to 131 Georgia cities and towns, the Library has received current codes from 66 cities, 97% of which have been gifts from the cities. Many requests are still pending and it is anticipated that the Library will receive several additional codes in as a result of this ongoing project.

A request was directed to the presiding judge in each of the 42 judicial circuits in Georgia for copies of any local rules adopted for that particular circuit. The collection of local court rules now consists of the rules of 29 circuits along with information that several others have no official rules of court.

The periodicals published by the leading state bar associations are generally found in most Law Library collections but publications of the local bar associations of the counties and cities in this country are generally omitted. During the year, 138 bar associations throughout the United States were contacted and the Library has begun to receive a total of 55 new titles of newsletters or periodicals. Efforts have been made to obtain all publications of the State Bar of Georgia as well as the local bar associations of this state.

Solicitation was made through the GEORGIA ADVOCATE for group photographs of the senior classes of the Law School and several additional photographs were obtained.

After negotiating with the Public Service Commission of Georgia, the Law Library now receives copies of all their orders and decisions and is the only place outside of the offices of the commission where these materials are located.

These special collections have proven and will prove to be extremely valuable for research in the future. Their existence in a group open up wide fields for a local judicial research not previously feasible. In fact, our collection of circuit rules is currently being consulted by a Committee of Younger Lawyers Section of the State Bar of Georgia. This collection of court rules has received praise from an attorney in Cuthbert,

Georgia who writes, "I think that your idea in maintaining a collection of these rules for each circuit is an excellent idea." Our goal in implementing these projects is to expand and enhance our existing collections, for it is this type of special collections which gives the Library an acknowledged uniqueness.

The indexing performed by the Public Services Department of the Library is continuing to expand. During the coming academic year, indexing of the ATLANTA LAWYER and the newsletters of the various sections of the State Bar of Georgia will begin. At the present time, the following periodicals are being indexed completely:

GEORGIA LAW REVIEW
GEORGIA JOURNAL OF INTERNATIONAL AND COMPARATIVE LAW
GOERGIA ADVOCATE
GEORGIA COURTS JOURNAL
GEORGIA DEFENSE LAWYERS JOURNAL
GEORGIA STATE BAR NEWS
NEXUS (GATE CITY BAR ASSOCIATION)
THE VERDICT (GEORGIA TRIAL LAWYERS ASSOCIATION)

This indexing is done on 3" x 5" cards and is the only index available for some of these journals. All these special projects have been under the direction of Hazel Johnson with aid and advice from the Law Librarian.

C. Lexis

LEXIS, a form of computerized research, was installed in June of 1979 and since that date, its use has increased to a monthly average of 24.4% use of the available time. The monthly average during the current academic year was 63 hours per month out of a possible use of 293 hours available each month. During the academic year 1979-80 the percentage use was 17.3%. The Library staff has consulted other schools where LEXIS is located to determine if they had programs to increase usage. Some of these programs have been implemented here. Unfortunately, few users are fully aware of all the capabilities of this equipment. Slip opinions of the Federal Courts are available on LEXIS before they are received in the Library in printed form. Because of this, subscription to the slip opinions for the United States Courts of Appeals for all of the circuits have been discontinued, except for the Fifth Circuit. A large number of students fail to take full advantage of the opportunity of learning the use of LEXIS. It is the hope of the Library staff that the law school faculty will impress upon the student the fact that in the future, more and more research will be done on the computer rather than through books, and those students who have not mastered the art of doing computerized research will be placed at a handicap in future law practice.

D. Service to the Bar

The Law Library has attempted during the current academic year to extend its services to the attorneys of the State of Georgia. The most common uses made of a law library by attorneys are requests for photocopies of cases and other legal materials. A typical method by which this operates is that the attorney calls in and requests certain materials which are photocopied and a bill is sent with the materials. Usually, a request is filled and in the mail within 24 hours. During the academic year 1980-81, 180 separate requests, ranging in length from a single case of three pages to law review articles averaging 20 pages in length, were processed. During the coming academic year, attempts will be made to inform the local county law libraries of the availability of the photocopying services of this Law Library and the availability of interlibrary loans.

E. Collection

On May 31, 1981 the Law Library consisted of 270,808 bound volumes, 11,253 reels of microfilm or 11,253 equivalent volumes and 321,463 microfiche for a total of 80,383 equivalent volumes. This constitutes a total collection of physical as well as equivalent volumes of 321,463. Based upon the American Bar Association's statistics for the academic year 1979-80, the Law Library continues to rank as eighteenth largest law school library in this country. The above statistics do not include any equivalent for the government documents which the Library currently receives as a Government Depository.

During the current academic year of 1980-81, the collection has continued to grow at a modest rate. The expenditures for books during the current year were:

Budget	$291,670.00
Gift Funds	10,818.00
Credit with Dealers	8,174.90
Dump Money	8,000.00
	$318,662.90

Since administrators are well aware of the need for additional funds (as is true for all other departments of the University) no attempt will be made here to present the arguments for more funds to offset inflation both in the prices of books and the number of volumes. The Dean of the Law School has been very supportive of the library by making funds available for purchase of books and by soliciting private gifts for the Law Library.

All continuations were reviewed and evaluated to determine whether the items were needed and utilized. The Library staff examined very carefully the titles for which we receive several copies and tried to determine whether or not one copy would suffice. In this way, we help to offset the inflation and the cost of continuations which is a problem plaguing all libraries. These cancellations have not weakened the collection. The cost of the continuations cancelled during the current year is $6,257.00. However, these funds were absorbed by the inflation of other continuations.

Another factor which must be considered in expanding continuations is the availability of support staff for filing. The typical loose-leaf service, such as those published by Commerce Clearing House or Prentice Hall requires approximately 75 hours of filing time for each service during the year. Thus, the Library's ability to add any loose-leaf services is not only limited by budget but by the budget for student help. In expanding continuations such as loose-leaf services, a balance must be kept between the service and the available manpower to perform the chores of filing.

The Library has obtained a microfilm copy of the Attorney General's Reports and Opinions and the annual reports of the state bar associations. Subscriptions for the opinions of the attorney generals have been placed but these are still difficult to obtain and in many states, only sufficient copies are printed for distribution to the various state officials. The proceedings of the bar associations are an invaluable source for the history of the legal profession and this form of publication has now been replaced by periodicals.

Under the headlines in COLUMNS for March 9, 1981 "Sharp eye yields Supreme Court book, Rebel manual," the public was informed about two important volumes obtained by the Library. The first of these was

DECISIONS OF THE SUPREME COURT OF GEORGIA REPORTED EXPRESSLY FOR THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION. The existence of this publication was previously unknown because it does not appear in any bibliography and was apparently a reprinting of decisions and headnotes which were originally published in the ATLANTA CONSTITUTION prior to the publication of the GEORGIA REPORTS. It was quite common in the latter part of the last century for newspapers to publish text of decisions and thus in some measure, serve as an advance sheet for the courts and the profession.

The other item was entitled A JUDGE ADVOCATE'S VADE MEDUM: EMBRACING A GENERAL VIEW OF MILITARY LAW IN THE PRACTICE BEFORE COURT MARTIALS by C.H. Lee, published in Richmond in 1863 by West and Johnston. This volume is obviously a manual for the holding of court martials in the Confederate Army. Both of these items are unique and add to the collection of historic materials.

F. Cataloging

The emphasis of the cataloging department has been on the backlog of J22 books which were in boxes and have never been fully processed. The J22 collection was purchased from a special appropriation given the Law Library several years ago. Hopefully, this project will be completed during the academic year of 1981-82.

Steps were taken to get the Law Library on line with OCLC by the purchase of terminals and a printer and the instigation of the procedure to go on line in this system. These steps were taken with the cooperation of David Bishop, the Director of University Libraries. It is anticipated that the Law Library will be on line with OCLC by January 1, 1982.

G. Automation of Acquisitions

Steps have been taken to study the Main Library's program of automation of acquisitions procedures by the use of MARVEL. The records of the Law Library would be separate and would enable the staff to generate orders and encumbered funds without manual bookkeeping. This operation will print out the necessary orders which will be a saving in clerical time. It is anticipated that by the end of the Academic Year 1981-82, this program will be operational.

H. Staff

There have been no changes among the professional staff and the only resignation in the clerical staff was that of Janet Westbrook, Library Assistant III, from the staff of the Acquisitions Department. She has been replaced by Mrs. Delores Mohr of the Staff who was promoted to this position.

The clerical staff does need expanding in view of the increased size of the physical plant of the Library. The opening of the new Annex did not bring any additional help either in full time staff or student help. The budget for part-time help during the coming academic year was slightly increased but this has been more than offset by the increase in the minimum wage. There is a critical need for immediate expansion of the part-time budget to move and arrange the collection in the new facility.

I. Microforms

A feature of the new Annex is a separate room to house the microform collection. Heretofore, the reading machines for this collection have been housed in the stairwell of the Library which is certainly not the most inviting environment for their use. Cabinets containing microfilm and microfiche were located wherever space could be found in the Library. All of this, plus microfilm that was not housed in cabinets, will now be housed in the new Annex along with the new reading machines which have been purchased.

One factor which will encourage more use of this resource is the fact that the Library will have portable machines which can be loaned to users and can be carried away from the Library premises. Also, the Government Printing Office has adopted a policy which will discontinue sending to Depository Libraries paper copies of many items including congressional committee reports. This will generate greater use of microforms in the future.

Because a position was vacant on the staff, a new person will be employed July 1st to assist in working with this equipment. The Library staff believes that by maintaining the equipment in better order and having a staff member who has some interest in machines, one will encourage greater use of microforms in which so much money has been invested.

J. Conclusion

As is evident from the foregoing report, things have happened in the Law Library during the current academic year which have not necessarily stirred the public's imagination or any controversy. The Library Staff is proud of its accomplishments and the fact that it is called upon to accomplish more with the same manpower during the coming year. The opening of the Annex will place additional burdens on the Public Services Department as the Annex becomes operational. The new Annex has made possible the expansion of the microform collection and the arrangement of this collection in one unit, something that has not been true in this Law Library for a number of years. The new building is truly an impressive, as well as a pleasant, area to work. The Library staff is excited about moving and settling in. The staff looks forward to greater accomplishments during the new academic year.

V. RESEARCH AND SERVICE PROGRAMS

A. Continuing Legal Education

The University of Georgia School of Law continues its extensive financial and professional support of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education in Georgia, which was organized in 1965 by the Law Schools of the University of Georgia, Emory, and Mercer, and the State Bar of Georgia. James W. Curtis, a member of the Law School administrative faculty, continues as Director of the Institute, supported by Barney L. Brannen, Jr. who serves as the Assistant Director, five full-time and several part-time employees. Approximately 250 lawyers each year serve as writers, planners, and speakers in the continuing legal education program.

From July 1, 1980, to June 30, 1981, the Institute presented 29 programs in 18 areas of the law attended by 4,202 registrants. Two programs were held at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education in Athens, and the other seminars in cities throughout Georgia which make these programs available to every lawyer with a minimum of travel. During the year the Institute instituted the operation of a telephone conferencing system whereby programs may be sent to locations around the state. For the nine seminars made available to the bar by telephone conferencing there was a total registration of 401 attendees.

The faculty of the University of Georgia School of Law continues to play a leading role in continuing legal education. As consultants, speakers, and writers, their contributions were indispensable in making this program a success. The following faculty members' participation should be mentioned:

Dean J. Ralph Beaird, University Professor of Law, is a member of the Institute's Board of Trustees and has actively participated in Board meetings, served on various committees, and contributes substantially to the decision making process. Dean Beaird was a member of the Planning Committee which recommended the Institute's program agenda for the forthcoming year July 1, 1981 - June 30, 1982. He is a frequent speaker on Continuing Legal Education programs and spoke at the Twelfth Southeastern Labor Relations Institute, December 11-12, 1980 in Atlanta on "Recent Supreme Court Decisions." Dean Beaird gives the welcome to those registrants attending CLE programs held on the University campus. At the Annual Meeting of the State Bar of Georgia in Savannah on June 12, 1981 Dean Beaird spoke to the assembled members of the bar on "Lawyer Competency and the Law School." During the Annual Meeting President Bob Reinhardt on behalf of the State Bar of Georgia recognized with grateful appreciation the outstanding contributions Dean Beaird has made to Continuing Legal Education and for the financial support of the University of Georgia to the Institute. A handsome engrossed framed scroll was presented to Dean Beaird.

Associate Dean Walter Ray Phillips is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education. He has been an active speaker at seminar programs and spoke at the Bankruptcy Reform Act of 1978 program presented October 9-10, 1980 in Savannah, October 16-17, 1980 in Atlanta, and was telephoned conferenced around the state.

Professor Verner F. Chaffin, Fuller Callaway Professor of Law, spoke at the Fiduciary Law Seminar held July 17-19, 1980 at Hilton Head, South Carolina on "Overview of Fiduciary Study Committee Revision of Title 113; Recent Developments in Georgia Fiduciary Law."

Professor Julian B. McDonnell spoke at the Banking and Commercial Law program presented in Atlanta, November 20-21, 1980 on "Recent Developments Under the Uniform Commercial Code and Related Areas."

Professor John C. O'Byrne, Francis Shackelford Professor of Taxation, spoke at the Fiduciary Law Seminar, July 17-19, 1980 at Hilton Head, South Carolina on "Estate Planning for the Georgia Farmer and Owner of Large Land Holdings."

Professor R. Perry Sentell, Jr., Regents Professor of Law, spoke at the Twenty-Seventh Institute for City and County Attorneys held at the Georgia Center for Continuing Education in Athens, September 19-20, 1980 on "Recent Judicial Developments Affecting City and County Attorneys." Professor Sentell serves as the editor for the Georgia Lawyers Basic Practice Handbook published by the Institute which was made available to members of the Georgia Bar during 1980 and to date over 2,000 copies have been sold.

For the fiscal year July 1, 1980 ending June 30, 1981, the following programs were presented:

B. Continuing Judicial Education

The Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia has the responsibility for the development and implementation of a comprehensive program of continuing professional development and training for members of the judiciary, both judges and support personnel. In fulfillment of this responsibility, the Institute conducted 23 programs which were attended by approximately 2,200 persons. This was a 29 percent increase over the number of programs produced during 1979-80, and they reached about 800 people more than the preceding year.

In addition, the Institute provided financial support for 69 judges and support personnel to attend training programs conducted out of the state. This is a reduction of 48 persons from the preceding year and is in accordance with the Institute's policy of reducing emphasis on out-of-state training because of the costs involved.

The programs conducted and their attendance totals were:

Certification and recertification programs for Georgia justices of the peace are conducted by the Institute under a contract with the Georgia Justice Courts Training Council. The Council is charged by statute with the responsibility of carrying out the mandatory training required of all non-lawyer justices of the peace. As the Council has only limited funds and no staff, it has contracted with the Institute to conduct the training. The seminar for traffic court judges was an addition to the schedule. It was funded by a grant from the Governor's Office of Highway Safety and is expected to become an annual event.

The orientation for newly elected probate court judges was also an addition to the program schedule. It is expected that a similar orientation will be conducted after each general election rather than on an annual basis.

In developing and presenting its programs, the Institute cooperates with the Administrative Office of the Courts, the Council of Superior Court Judges, the State Trial Judges and Solicitors Association, the Council of Juvenile Court Judges, the Probate Judges Association, the Clerks of Court Section of the Georgia County Officer's Association, the Certified Court Reporters Association of Georgia, the Georgia Association of Independent Juvenile Courts, and the Georgia Justice Courts Training Council.

During FY 1981, funding for Institute activities came from three major sources. The University of Georgia Law School provided facilities and a portion of the personnel costs incurred by the Institute; a state appropriation provides for operation costs, including supplies and travel and for some education expenses; and the federal Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, through a grant to the Judicial Council of Georgia for the benefit of the Institute, provided funds to defray most education costs, including reimbursement of travel, lodging and meal expenses of attendees. Beginning with FY 1982, the LEAA funds will be exhausted. However, they will be replaced by state appropriated funds so that the Institute can continue its work.

The Institute of Continuing Judicial Education of Georgia is committed to:

1. Providing quality in-state training for judges and support personnel of all courts of Georgia including judges of traffic courts and court administrators, professional staffs of independent adult and juvenile probation systems, clerks of court, court reporters and other support personnel.

2. Providing limited financial support for personnel of the judicial system to attend selected out-of-state training programs.
3. Continuing development, implementation and evaluation of the comprehensive judicial training curriculum.

C. The Dean Rusk Center

The Rusk Center during the past year continued to provide advice to federal agencies, the U.S. Congress and state governments on various aspects of international trade. This advice has been in the form of memorandums, consultations with government officials and the presentation of material in written and verbal testimony. It is anticipated that this advice will continue on a selected basis to the extent the Center can make unique contributions and the activities provide clear benefits to the University Law School and associated faculty and students.

Apart from providing policy advice, the Center has focused considerable attention on the development of a unique electronic data base concerning the relationships between international trade and local and specialized interests. Using this base and the student and electronic resources associated with its development, the Center will soon publicly disseminate on a weekly basis a news report dealing with fiscal and monetary policy, government-to-government agreements and domestic events. In addition it will operate a clearinghouse of information concerning in-depth research going on in Canada, Mexico and the United States, relating to political, social and economic cooperation among these countries. A final aspect of the data base will be the systematic polling of business and government entities at national, state and county levels concerning the impacts of various government actions. It is assumed that this information will provide the University and Law School with unique opportunities to advise the state of Georgia and other government entities on the most efficient and effective way for discharging public responsibility.

In the discharge of research responsibilities, the Center has recently completed manuscripts on various critical aspects of cooperation and integration within North America. The Center's "Comparative Facts on Canada, Mexico and the United States: A Foundation for Selective Integration and Trilateral Cooperation" has become an indispensable reference document for governmental and private interests concerned with North American cooperation. In addition, the Center staff has been invited to speak and participate in a wide range of activities by governmental and private interests designed to develop specific policies concerning North American trade, integration, and technology transfer. During the coming year the Center will continue its research emphasis on North American issues at the policy level as well as develop written materials and computer programs which can be used for educational purposes from the primary grades on up.

During the past year the Center has also been doing a feasibility study on the requisites for rapid expansion of Georgia agricultural products in international trade. This work, done under the sponsorship of the Georgia legislature, seeks to bring to bear the Center's research, service and education resources on the problem of improving the economic conditions of rural Georgia through international trade. Three presentations have been given to business and government leaders throughout the state concerning initial Center work.

VI. STUDENT AFFAIRS

A. Placement

1. Office Activities

During the academic year 1980-81, the Placement Office has continued to further expand and strengthen its placement program. The program that has developed during the past few years is sensitive to the hiring needs of employers who utilize the office services and to the employment needs of Georgia law students. The activities of the office are designed to broaden and strengthen the law school's representation and reputation not only in the state, but in the southeast region and nation, as well. It is through these efforts that the opportunities to successfully place our graduates in the legal profession are significantly increased. The three basic objectives that this office channels its efforts towards are: increased employer representation, expanded in-house services, and provision of a variety of office-sponsored programs.

The primary objective of increased employer representation, in campus interviews, recruiting conferences and in direct contacts for the students to pursue, continues to be one that this office expends a large amount of time and energy towards. This past fall the office had 109 employers interview on campus, which was a 60% increase over those scheduled when the office was created in the fall of 1977. The office also had 146 employers this past fall who requested packets of resumes to be sent as well as 108 job notices posted for direct contact for the students to pursue.

The effort that the office expends for its fall recruitment season is clearly beginning to pay off in terms of more employer representation.

An area for attention and development is the winter and spring recruitment, as typically the number of employers that utilize the office services during those times only amounts to approximately 65% of the fall season.

The Georgia Law School continues to participate in the Southeastern Law Placement Consortium, an annual recruiting conference in Atlanta during October. The Consortium involves ten southeastern law schools and is directed at the national market of legal employers. This past October, 66 legal employers participated and the Georgia Law School had thirty-one students attend. Approximately 20% of the students attending the Consortium received employment offers.

This past December the Placement Director of the Georgia Law School was appointed by the State Bar of Georgia to coordinate a Recruiting Conference in conjunction with the Mid-Year Bar meeting in Atlanta. The Three-in-One Recruiting Conference involved the Georgia, Emory and Mercer law schools and was the first of its kind for the State Bar of Georgia. Due to its success, the State Bar has decided to make the recruiting conference an annual event, which will only insure that our students will have yet another avenue to pursue employment opportunities.

The Placement Office continues to do outreach to prospective employers through invitational mailouts. This past January the office mailed out approximately 1,000 letters to legal employers who generally do their hiring in late winter or early spring. The letters are designed to inform the employers of the services available through the Placement Office and to encourage their consideration of Georgia law students for their hiring needs.

In March the office mailed out approximately 3,591 invitational letters to employers encouraging them to sign-up for the Fall 1981 interview season. To date, the office has had 308 employers request placement office services for the Fall 1981 season.

The Placement Office also continues to print and distribute among employers an employment directory of the third year students. This directory also includes sections addressing the law school's faculty, curriculum, student body quality, physical facilities as well as an explanation of the Placement Office services, policies and procedures. The employment directory continues to be an invaluable tool in notifying employers of our curriculum excellence, national faculty stature and student preparation through academic grade requirements and extra-curricular activities. A possibility worth exploring would be to include second year students in the directory to increase their visibility among employers as candidates for summer clerkship positions.

The second objective this office continues to work towards is the expansion of in-house services. The office compiles each fall a directory of home and work addresses of the recent graduating class, making the directory available to the graduates themselves, to the faculty and to currently enrolled students as a source for alumni contacts. The office also mails a bi-monthly alumni job newsletter for those graduates who are seeking to change employment.

In an effort to keep the students informed of the employment success of their classmates, the office compiles monthly employment reports and makes them available to the student body.

Last year, a Placement Office Resource Center was established. The establishment of the Resource Center was in response to the need for more space to allow students to utilize the various available resource materials in their job search. The Center is equipped with bulletin boards for job notices, pamphlet boxes with occupational descriptions, notebooks of employer contacts, various directories and two typewriters. The Center is designed to be a "self-help" resource and is accessible for student use twenty-four hours a day.

The third objective, providing a variety of office sponsored programs, is one that demands continual activity in the student affairs area. A survey is done by this office among the student body during fall quarter to ascertain their interest areas and types of programs they wish to have presented during the year.

The office sponsors seminars addressing resume preparation, cover letter writing, interview dress, judicial clerkship opportunities, self-directed job hunts and, with the accessibility of video-tape equipment, students are offered practice interview sessions with critiques by the Placement Office staff. The Placement Office also provides Orientation programs to the students in the fall and spring quarters.

In cooperation with the Younger Lawyers' Section of the Georgia State Bar the Placement Office also sponsored and conducted forums in which guest attorneys addressed students on:

- 1) Employment Opportunities and Interview Skills
- 2) On-Campus Interviews and Office Interviews
- 3) Alternative Careers for J. D. Graduates
- 4) Conducting Your Own Job Search
- 5) Establishing a Solo Law Practice

A special forum for first year students was offered again this spring and addressed "How to Search a Title." The Placement Committee also sponsored a forum this spring that had a panel of lawyers addressing "In-House Corporate Counsel Employment Opportunities."

The activities of this office in the area of student affairs included distribution of student activities monies to registered student organizations, maintaining records of student group expenditures, and availability of office staff for general counseling and advisements to student groups and individual students.

While the above mentioned placement attempts and student affairs activities reflect a basic program of any law school, the results must be seen as more than simply helping a student to acquire employment. Through personal contact with law school alumni, friends and state bar members, student employment chances were increased, but service to the state and region were also greatly enhanced. Through participation in organizations such as the National Association for Law Placement, in which the Placement Director chaired a national committee, through the Southeastern Law Placement Consortium and through committee work of the State Bar of Georgia, the school's representation and reputation is furthered and strengthened as well.

2. Recruitment

During the academic year (September 17, 1980 through June 13, 1981), the Law Placement Office scheduled 117 on-campus interview sessions for prospective employers of Georgia law graduates. In addition the Law Placement Office offered recruiting assistance to 125 employers who interviewed off-campus.

B. Student Activities and Publications

1. The Moot Court Program

The Moot Court Program at the University of Georgia School of Law participated in six various state, regional, and national appellate moot court competitions in 1980-81. In addition, the program includes participation in client counseling and Mock Trial competitions. The program is supervised by a fifteen-member executive board, composed of third year students. The chairman of the Moot Court Board, Ruth Isaac, was assisted by faculty advisors, Paul Kurtz and Robert Brussack, in administering a highly successful competitive season. Other faculty members were extensively involved in the program through assisting the teams during practice arguments.

The purpose of Moot Court at Georgia is to provide nationwide exposure to second and third year students through participation in competitions, to sponsor and coordinate two intraschool competitions open to all law students, and to assist the instruction of a first year writing program and a second year appellate advocacy program. Additionally, the Moot Court Program brings continued state and national recognition to the University and Law School. Over the past twelve years, Georgia has evolved into a major competitive force.

The National Team, which is composed of third year students who have demonstrated outstanding ability in the second year competitions, consisted of Alex Booth, Lee Thompson, and Robert Hancock. The team, coached by Pat O'Connor, vice chairman of the Moot Court Executive Board, took first place in the Regional Competition, held in Tallahassee. Alex Booth was selected Best Oralist of the Competition. The team proceeded to the finals in New York and placed fifth in the country.

Georgia's team for the Philip C. Jessup International Competition was composed of Kris Gustafson, Michael Quilling, Ted Pound, Al Smith and was coached by Trina Modling. At the Southeastern Regionals, hosted by the Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law, in Athens, the team placed second in the Best Team competition and captured the Best Brief Award. At the National Finals in Washington, D. C. the team was recognized for having written the best brief in the country and was awarded Best Memorial.

Two Georgia teams were again entered in the Intrastate Moot Court Competition sponsored by the Younger Lawyers Section of the State Bar of Georgia. The team of Charles Driebe, Shelley Rucker, and Steve White placed third in the competition. The team of William Ellenberg, Lee Meadows, and Dwight Feemster Placed fourth in the competition. The teams were coached by David Dantzler.

Georgia sent two teams to the regionals of the National Appellate Advocacy Competition sponsored by the American Bar Association. The teams, comprised of Ertharin Cousin, Susie Edwards, and Ryan Mock coached by James Deal and the team of Allen Evans, David Marshall, and Mark Tempest coached by Amy Watson, were both quarter finalists in the competition.

The team of Glenn Doolittle, Kirk Henson, and Nora Tocups represented Georgia in the Kaufman Competition held in New York City. David Jensen coached the team.

Whit Joyner, Roy Paul, and Mari Perez coached by Jenny Wheatley represented Georgia in the Wagner Labor Law Competition held in New York. The team did quite well, remaining undefeated in oral rounds and reaching the quarter Finals among a field of fifty-six teams.

The University of Georgia was represented by the team of Woody Dahmer and Schaune Griffin at the Regional ABA Client Counseling Competition and placed second in the region.

Two Mock Trial Teams were entered in the Intrastate Mock Trial Competition competing against Mercer and Emory. The team of Matt Martin, Roy Paul and Jenny Wheatley placed first and the team of Fred Bright, Kay Jackson and Lawton Stevens placed third. Matt Martin was selected as the Most Valuable Team Member from Georgia.

In addition to fielding competitive teams, the Moot Court Board also supervises the Russell and Talmadge Competitions which culminate on Law Day and involve the entire student body. The Russell Competition for first year students was coordinated by Peggy Wells and Ezra Jones. The finals were judged by Georgia Supreme Court Justices Harold G. Clarke, Robert H. Jordan, George T. Smith and Thomas O. Marshall and George N. Carley, Judge, Court of Appeals of Georgia. The competition was won by Lawrence McGoldrick and the runner-up was James Durham.

The Talmadge Competition, open to all interested second and third year students, was coordinated by Daniel Haygood and James Moore. The judges for the finals for this competition were Lewis R. Morgan, Judge (Senior Status) United States Court of Appeals, Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals Judges John C. Godbold and Phyllis Kravitch and District Court judges Anthony A. Alaimo and Charles A. Moye, Jr. The winners of the competition, Ken Gallo and Jesse Burbage received a cash prize of $100 by defeating the runner-up team of Roy Paul and Jeff Slagle.

In recognition of their dedication, service and demonstrated ability, the Order of Barristers designation was bestowed upon Alex Booth, David Dantzler, Robert Hancock, Ruth Isaac, Trina Modling, Pat O'Connor and Jenny Wheatley.

The Newly selected members of the 1981-82 National Team are Ken Gallo, Shelley Rucker and Kris Gustafson. The 1981-82 Moot Court Executive Board consists of:

2. Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law

Volume 11 of the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law has maintained its reputation for timely commentary on current developments in international and comparative law.

Issue One includes articles on Parliamentary Diplomacy and the North-South Dialogue, Internal Colonialism and Humanitarian Intervention, and Customs Valuation in the European Economic Community. Issue Two features a collection of short commentaries by several scholars, including Professors Rusk, Sohn, and Wilner, on a recent case with potential implications for the future of public international law. Also included in Issue Two is an exhaustive study of the evolving legal status of Puerto Rico, which should stimulate discussion as the debate over statehood intensifies, as well as a paper on recent change in China's trade policy. Articles in Issue Three include a comparison of selected aspects of European Community and United States Bankruptcy law and a paper on the transfer of knowhow to Latin America.

The Journal has also continued to fulfill one of its major purposes of encouraging the development of student research and writing skills. In addition to publishing several Notes and Recent Developments, a Student Symposium on Conflict of Law Issues in North-South Relations is included in Issue Three.

In conclusion, it has been a productive year for the Journal. Student participation has been at an all time high, with favorable results in the quality of our publication.

3. PHI DELTA PHI

The Phi Delta Phi Legal Fraternity strives to foster academic and professional excellence while providing various social activities for the membership. The past year showed a marked increase in chapter membership, especially within the first-year class, and it is expected that this rejuvenation will continue into the 1981 - 1982 year.

Phi Delta Phi sponsors social activities as a break in the law student's academic pursuits. The first social functions of the year are the pre-game warmups during football season with block seating provided for all the members. In addition, the entire school year is filled with such varied activities as sorority socials, shrimp and beer parties, kegs for special sports events, and the traditional Atlanta Braves bus trip.

These activities are sponsored in the belief that it is important to continue to develop one's social skills while in law school, and that the Lumpkin Law School provides a unique opportunity for academic, professional, and social development.

The past year's activities were directed by an outstanding Executive Board consisting of Jimmy Deal, Magister; Terry Atkinson, Vice-Magister; Bill Major, Exchequer; Bob Cheeley, Historian; Sergio Alvarez-Mena, Clerk; and David Dantzler, Social Chairman.

4. Phi Alpha Delta

This past year Phi Alpha Delta has maintained its position as the most active organization in the Law School by not only continuing its annual programs, but also by adding new activities each quarter.

P.A.D. has continued its record of service to the School by again compiling and publishing the Student/Faculty Directory, with this year's edition being the most attractive and complete in the Directory's 14-year history. The Fraternity also continued its legal research program for Georgia practitioners, its program allowing law students to observe for a shift in Clark County Police squad cars, and its quarterly scholarship award. Among the new programs initiated this year were the fall test-taking seminar for the first year students, and awards for those law students rendering outstanding service to the School (namely, Warren Swartz, for his work as third year class president, and Jim Lobb, for his direction of the Juvenile Justice Program). Also, the annual writing award named for late law school dean Henry A. Shinn was reorganized and reinstituted this year.

Phi Alpha Delta has also moved beyond the school boundaries and into the community this year with its most ambitious service project to date - the Juvenile Justice Program. Initiated by local Athens attorney Michael Thurmond, this program in this its first year sent teams of law students into area middle schools and conducted approximately 40 separate sessions with sixth and eighth graders. Topics covered in the presentations which were developed entirely by P.A.D. members included a general overview of the criminal system, Constitutional rights, responsibilities as a citizen, and even international law. Classroom techniques used ranged from traditional lectures, and question and answer sessions, to mock trials with the kids playing all the roles and the questioning of kids who were "witnesses" to a simulated crime. In fact, response from middle school teachers and administrators was so encouraging that expansion of the program is scheduled for next year.

Nor did P.A.D. ignore its responsibility for providing a good deal of social life around the school. Pre-football game warm-ups, and the annual mid-year "Over-the-Hump" party were held, for the entire student body, as was the yearly Law Day student/faculty wine reception. This year also saw the return of the notorious Halloween and swampwater affairs for the more daring of the membership. And begun this spring, with plans for expansion next fall, was the intra-school College Bowl Tournament. However, the social highlight of the year was the first ever winning season (including the first ever win) of the Phi Alpha Delta softball team - the Legal P.A.D.s.

6. Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law

The 1980 - 1981 Academic Year was the most active for the Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law to date. We had the opportunity to sponsor activities nearly every two weeks throughout the course of the year, and the good fortune to host an impressive number of guest lecturers in the general field of international law. Thanks to the increasing support of the international legal programs by the law school and the University at large, this very busy and rewarding year can only serve as a foreshadowing of things to come in this dynamic area at our law school and beyond.

The Society opened the year with a wine and cheese reception for all interested students and faculty on the patio of the law school during the first week of school. We accepted payment of membership dues at that time, and our roll included more than ninety students in all three years of study. Professors Gabriel Wilner and Bernhard Schloh, legal counsel to the Council of the European Economic Community, held informal luncheon seminars which were very well attended.

A delegation of approximately fifteen student members of the Society attended the ABA sponsored International Law Weekend in Washington, D. C. Georgia was the second best represented law school at that meeting, and all of the members came back with good reports of the educational meetings and visits to law firms and governmental agencies. Mr. John Williams, international law research specialist, presented a seminar at the Washington meeting, and later visited our campus to hold a similar meeting and advise both Society and Journal members on specific research problems.

Mr. Larry Johnson of the Legal Department of the United Nations visited the school and gave a dinner speech at Friends Restaurant on the internal workings of the United Nations legal division. Mr. Johnson remains in correspondence with some members of the Society, keeping them abreast of recent developments in public international law.

At the beginning of winter quarter, the Society had the pleasure of a visit by Professor Ferdinand F. Stone of the Tulane Institute of Comparative Law. A reception was held for Professor Stone in the Dunlap Room of the Law School. Professor Stone spoke on the beginnings of international diplomacy in the classical Greek world. The Society learned early in the quarter that its request to host the 1981 Regional Rounds of the Phillip C. Jessup International Moot Court competition had been granted. Mr. Tom Herbelin volunteered to act as regional administrator and coordinator of the event, and preparation for the competition was soon underway. In the meantime, Mr. Ben Landey of Bates, Baum & Landey in Atlanta visited the school and gave a very practical and informative talk on the practice of immigration law.

The Jessup Competition Regional Rounds were held in late May, and our school received many compliments from the participants concerning the smooth operation of every detail. We had a distinguished panel of judges including Professor Louis Sohn, who will be a member of our law school faculty, and other respected attorneys from Atlanta who volunteered their time to serve as judges in the rounds. At the Awards Banquet, Professor Dean Rusk made some comments to the teams present. Mr. Robert Hancock, a third year student at Georgia, was president of the Association of Student International Law Societies, which sponsors the Jessup Competition. While Emory University placed first overall, the Georgia team won Best Brief both at the Regional Rounds and in the national competition held in Washington a short time later.

Spring quarter was as busy as the fall and winter had been. Ambassador Tapley Bennett, United States Ambassador to NATO, visited the school and made a luncheon address to about thirty-five society members. The luncheon was hosted by Professor Rusk. Mr. Darryl Buffenstein of Kilpatrick & Cody in Atlanta gave an informal talk concerning careers in International law, and Mr. Robert Ephros came from Washington to discuss the International Monetary Fund.

The Annual Georgia Journal/Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law banquet was held in late May. Professor Rusk, Dean Beaird, and Professor Wilner addressed an audience of seventy-five interested students, and certificates of recognition and other awards were presented. The winner of the 1981 Rusk Award was also announced. This Award is given annually for the best paper in the field of international law. This year's winner was Mr. Frederick C. Eisenstein, a third year student, who wrote a paper on trans-frontier pollution and its implications in the E.E.C. The amount of the award was $250 this year, increased from the $100 given in previous years. Entries were solicited from Emory and Mercer.

The Society remains deeply indebted to Professor Dean Rusk for his continued support of the international law program and to Professor Gabriel Wilner for his ceaseless efforts to help both the Society and Journal. Members of the Society are grateful to both these men for their support of the Brussels Seminar on the Laws and institutions of the E.E.C., a remarkable opportunity for law students to travel overseas and learn about international law first hand with experts in the field.

Finally, the Society expresses its thanks to Dean J. Ralph Beaird for his support and help on many occasions with with our speakers and programs. With this valuable support, the International Law Society of the University of the University of Georgia has every reason to continue to seek excellence as a leading student organization.

7. Environmental Law Association

Interest in the Environmental Law Association is as high as in any period in the last four years. The group now has 49 registered members with an active membership of 35. In addition to effectively serving as an ongoing resource from which and to which information and debate on environmental issues flow, the ELA has actively sponsored symposia, speakers, outings, and social gatherings throughout the year:

During the fall quarter, world renowned health physicist Dr. Karl Z. Morgan presented a talk on the effects of low level radiation, attended by over 200 people.

Nine students attended the Georgia Institute of Continuing Legal Education's seminar on the basics of Environmental Law, due in large part to the assistance of Dean Beaird.

More than fifteen students and a professor embarked on a whitewater rafting trip on the Ocoee River in Southeastern Tennessee.

During the winter quarter, eight members attended the third annual environmental symposium sponsored by Agnes Scott College. One representative was sent to the 11th Annual Court of Study on Environmental Law sponsored by the American Law Institute and American Bar Association in Washington. Our representative was able to accomplish this with the assistance of Dean W. Ray Phillips and a tuition waiver from the course sponsors. Sam Collier represented the law school at the conference.

During spring quarter, the ELA sponsored a symposium entitled, "Environmental Responsibility: Theory and Practice." The participants were faculty members developing a master's program in philosophy and ecology. Attendance was estimated at 75 and included faculty, students, and local residents.

Two lunchtime speakers were presented to the law school, one each month:
 April: Dr. Eugene Odum, Institute of Ecology, on basic issues in Ecology and law. May: Dr. James Kundell, Institute of Government, on water resources in Georgia. In addition, the group held a party near the beginning and near the end of the school year and sponsored a pot-luck supper mid-quarter.

8. The Fine Print

The Fine Print In-House (In-House) was founded this year by students of the Law School and provides the Law School community with a multifaceted monthly publication. In-House features articles on law by attorneys, professors and students; general articles and commentaries by law students; satire; coverage of Law School developments; and letters to the editor.

In-House in conjunction with the Student Bar Association, will begin in September, 1981 publication of The Weekly Reader, a bulletin of notice to the Law School community on activities and events in the school.

In-House has an active staff of 15, unusually large for a law school newspaper-like publication. Editor-in-Chief for 1981/82 is Bruce A. Reznik and the Managing Editor is Mari Perez.

The founders of In-House have also formed a non-profit corporation called National Law Publishers, Inc. In September of 1981 National Law Publishers will each month put out The Fine Print, which provides the national legal community with compact commentaries on trends and developments in law.

9. The Christian Legal Society

The Christian Legal Society is a national organization comprised of Christian lawyers, judges, and law students.

The University of Georgia chapter of the Christian Legal Society seeks to have a lasting impact upon the legal community as well as upon the individuals who serve as members of the society. Activities of the society include opportunities for fellowship, worship, and interaction with the student body at-large.

Weekly meetings are held at the law school which include Bible lessons, prayer, and fellowship. During the academic year 1981 - 1982 several social gatherings were held including a cookout and a covered dish supper.

VII. SPECIAL EVENTS

A. The John A. Sibley Lecture Series

1. Judge Carl McGowan was the Sibley lecturer for the fall quarter at the School of Law. His lecture, presented October 15, was entitled, "Congressmen in Court: The New Plaintiffs." In it he explored the increasing tendency of individual congressmen (legislative branch) going to the courts (judicial branch) to challenge the actions of their legislative colleagues or decisions of the executive branch.

McGowan, chief judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit, has spent 17 years on the bench of the federal circuit court in Washington. He practiced law in Chicago for the ten years preceding his appointment to the court, and was the close friend and advisor of Adlai Stevenson.

2. Judge Ruth Bader Ginsburg of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit was the winter quarter Sibley lecturer. She spoke on the disturbing trend of conservative and liberal attempts to pre-screen judicial nominees for their activist or restraint-oriented approaches. Her lecture was January 26.

Judge Ginsburg was appointed to the Court of Appeals in June, 1980 after a career of 20 years of teaching and research. Her most recent faculty tenure was eight years as professor of law at Columbia University. She previously taught at Rutgers. Judge Ginsburg has written two books on Swedish law and is the author of a casebook on gender-based discrimination.

3. Thomas I. Emerson was one of the two Sibley lecturers for the spring quarter. Emerson, professor emeritus of law at Yale University, was a keynote speaker for the April 9-11 symposium on the First Amendment co-sponsored by the School of Law and the School of Journalism and Mass Communication.

Emerson, who lectured April 11, is the author of The System of Freedom of Expression. His other works include Political and Civil Rights in the United States as co-author, and Toward a General Theory of the First Amendment. He has argued numerous First Amendment cases on behalf of the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Lawyers Guild.

4. Justice Harry A. Blackmun was the Sibley Lecturer for the spring quarter in addition to Emerson. Justice Blackmun's speech was also the dedicatory address for the Law Library Annex as well as the 1981 Law Day address. He spoke May 2, 1981 before a crowd of approximately 600 on the lawn outside the Library Annex. He related his observations on the state of American justice from the viewpoint of the Supreme Court of the United States.

Blackmun was confirmed by the U.S. Senate in 1970 to his position on the Supreme Court. He was previously a federal circuit judge in Minneapolis, and was formerly resident counsel for the Mayo Clinic.

B. Law Day

Justice Harry A. Blackmun addressed the Law Day audience at an 11:00 a.m. outdoor ceremony May 2, 1981. Before his address, a special ceremony was held in the Law School auditorium to dedicate the portrait of Georgia Governor George D. Busbee. The portrait is a gift by more than 100 friends and associates of the Governor to the Law School's "Hall of Governors." The movement to sponsor the portrait gift was spearheaded by the Dougherty Circuit Bar Association. Holcombe Perry represented the bar association in presenting the portrait, and Board of Regents member

William Divine spoke on the career accomplishments and civic contributions of the Governor.

The new annex was on display for an Open House and tours during the morning of Law Day. First year students served as hosts and hostesses for the tours and the coffee service for alumni and visitors.

The Law Day activities began May 1 with the Russell and Talmadge Moot Court Competitions. The banquet sponsored by the Georgia Law Review and the Moot Court Board, held on the Friday evening of Law Day, was addressed by Judge John C. Godbold of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit. The Student Bar Association hosted a reception for Justice and Mrs. Blackmun before the banquet.

Wrapping up the two-day round of activities was the luncheon sponsored by the Law School Association. LSA president Samuel Zusmann presented Distinguished Service Scrolls to Charles Kimbrell of Miami and Robert Struble of Toccoa.

Justice Blackmun is the fifty U.S. Supreme Court justice to visit the Georgia Law School in the last fifteen years. Previous speakers included Justices Tom Clark, Thurgood Marshall and Hugo Black, and Chief Justice (retired) Earl Warren.

C. Senior Reception and Diploma Ceremony

The Law School Association sponsored a reception for the senior class and their family members on June 12, the evening before graduation. The Diploma Ceremony was held in the Fine Arts Auditorium immediately after the University's commencement exercises June 13. Speaker for the ceremony was Judge James C. Hill, U.S. Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Warren G. Swartz, as senior class president, was master of ceremonies for the program in which 172 seniors participated. Professors Paul Kurtz and Perry Sentell were elected faculty marshalls. The graduates who passed the Georgia bar examination were sworn in by Judge James Barrow in a ceremony the afternoon of graduation at the Clarke County Courthouse.

D. Joint Meeting Weekend

Presentation of a portrait of Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell and a Homecoming dinner highlighted the Joint Meeting Weekend activities of October 17 and 18.

The Joint Meeting Weekend is an annual event which brings together the present and former members of the Law School Association Council and the Board of Visitors. The Board met on Friday and the Council met on Saturday. The Homecoming social and dinner, held Friday night, featured a fall campaign spirit theme. Alumnus Virlyn B. Moore, Jr. gave a humorous talk on "how to get elected."

The portrait of Dr. Caldwell was presented to the School in a 10:30 a.m. ceremony on Saturday, October 18. Caldwell was dean of the Law School from 1933 to 1935 and president of the University of Georgia from 1935 to 1949. He was chancellor of the University System of Georgia from 1948 to 1964. He died in 1977.

Although his tenure as law dean was short, he was able to solidify the status of the School as a newly-accredited institution following its approval by the American Bar Association in 1931, according the Dean Ralph Beaird, who served as master of ceremonies for the presentation. Dr. Merle C. Prunty, Jr., Alumni Foundation Distinguished Professor of Geography, gave the keynote address on the accomplishments of Dr. Caldwell.

McCarthy Crenshaw of Jacksonville, chairman of the portrait committee, made the portrait presentation. It was accepted on behalf of the University by Dr. Virginia Y. Trotter, vice president for academic affairs. The portrait was unveiled by Harmon Caldwell, Jr., Law School Class of 1977, and his son Harmon Caldwell III. Mrs. Gwendolyn Caldwell and many friends of the Caldwell family attended.

E. Symposium on the First Amendment

To examine the separate provisions of the First Amendment as a set of interrelated concepts, and to stimulate new ideas about constitutional problems, were the main purposes of a symposium titled "Perspectives on the First Amendment" held at the School of Law April 9-11.

The symposium was jointly sponsored by the School of Journalism and Mass Communication and the School of Law. Financial support was provided by the Gannett Newspaper Foundation, the Los Angeles Times and other interested groups.

Law faculty member Al Pearson and Journalism professor William Lee co-directed the three-day conference which attracted more than 100 registrants from all over the nation. The purpose of the symposium, according to Pearson and Lee, was to "bring together disparate groups of people who have different views of the First Amendment, expose them to the problems found in areas of the First Amendment other than those of their own concerns, and to try to generate new ideas."

The conference was organized to examine separate provisions of the First Amendment as a set of related concepts, and not to focus strictly on any one application. Themes developed by the panelists included the amendment's application to the political process; religious freedom; and free speech and free press from the standpoints of access to facilities, access to information and regulation of content.

Special lectures by New York Times columnist Anthony Lewis and Yale University professor emeritus Thomas Emerson highlighted the symposium. Lewis, a two-time Pulitzer Prize winner, delivered the Ralph McGill Lecture to open the conference. His talk was entitled, "The First Amendment: Let Our Minds Be Bold."

Emerson, who taught law for 35 years and argued numerous cases on First Amendment issues for the American Civil Liberties Union and the National Lawyers Guild, concluded the conference by presenting the Sibley Lecture. The John A. Sibley Lecture series was expanded to four lecture visits this year in recognition of Emerson's address.

Among those speaking on panels were Lyle Denniston, Supreme Court reporter for the Washington Star; Edward Bloustein, president of Rutgers University and a scholar on privacy; Steven Simmons, an expert on the fairness doctrine applied to broadcasting; and Henry Monaghan, a Boston University constitutional scholar who has argued First Amendment cases before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Also, panelists included Justice Shirley Abrahamson of the Wisconsin Supreme Court, the Reverend Dean Kelley, executive director for religious and civil liberty of the National Council of Churches, Charles Steele, general counsel for the Federal Election Commission, and Bruce Bagni, attorney on the appellate staff for the Civil Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. In addition, eleven professors of law and political science participated in panel discussions. Among them were former law clerks to U.S. Supreme Court Justices Warren Burger, Earl Warren, William J. Brennan, Jr., William O. Douglas, and Lewis F. Powell.

F. Other Speakers and Visitors

The Georgia Society of International and Comparative Law sponsored the visit of John Williams, an international law research specialist who gave a slide presentation on research procedure and advised members of the Society and the Georgia Journal on specific research problems. Ben Landey of the Atlanta firm of Bates, Baum and Landey visited the campus and gave a talk on immigration law. Tapley Bennett, U.S. Ambassador to NATO, gave a luncheon address during the spring quarter.

VIII. ALUMNI RELATIONS

A. The Law School Association

1. The Law School Association Council held its annual fall meeting Saturday, October 18. President Sam Zusmann was chairman for the meeting.

2. The Law School Association's Law Day Luncheon was held May 2 at the Athens History Village Inn. A brief meeting of the council was held on the morning of the Law Day Exercises. The 1981-82 budget for the Law School Fund was adopted.

3. The Law School Association held its two annual breakfasts in conjunction with the State Bar of Georgia meetings on December 5, 1980 and June 12, 1981. Upshaw Bentley, president-elect for 1980-81, was installed as president and took office at the June meeting. Other officers elected were: Barry Phillips, president-elect; Verner Chaffin, secretary and Gary Blasingame, treasurer.

4. Alumni regional meetings were held in Rome, Macon, and Gainesville during April and May of 1981. The Florida and Washington, D.C. chapters of the Law School Association held their annual meetings in June and December. In February, the Law School Association hosted a luncheon for members of the General Assembly who are Georgia law graduates.

5. The Law School Alumni Office assisted planning groups in the arrangements for four class reunions during the past year. The Classes of 1940, 1961, 1965 and 1970 held events in Athens during the fall football season or on Law Day.

B. Board of Visitors

The Law School Board of Visitors held quarterly meetings on October 17, 1980, March 13, and May 1, 1981. Georgia Supreme Court Justice Harold Clarke was elected to the chairmanship of the Board of 1981. New members joining the Board of Visitors at its winter meeting were David Tisinger of Carrollton and Joseph E. Cheeley, Jr. of Buford. Roy Lambert was re-appointed and will serve a second three-year term beginning with 1981.

C. The Law School Fund Campaign

The Law school Fund Campaign for 1980-81 was initiated in December with the mailing of a printed flyer to all law graduates urging them to earmark their year-end gifts for the Law School Fund. The solicitation capitalized on the Georgia Bulldogs' national number one rating and the upcoming Sugar Bowl championship match.

The Law School conducted its second annual Telethon February 23-26. Student, faculty, and volunteers, calling from Athens and Atlanta, received pledges totaling $5200 from 306 donors. In addition to the calls, 454 personal letters were mailed to those who were not reached by the Telethon.

From July 1, 1980 to June 30, 1981, the Law School Fund account received $67,000.00 given by approximately 800 contributors.

D. The Talmadge Fund Campaign

The Talmadge Fund has now evolved into a full-fledged capital gifts development program. The designation, "Talmadge Fund," referred to a three-year phase of the capital gifts program. From the original donors contacted in the Talmadge campaign, $2,414,068 had been raised as of June 1, 1981. In addition, other capital gifts were added to the Law School endowment throughout the last year which brought the total derived from the fund drive to $3,132,643. This is $132,643 over the original goal of $3 million set in 1978. Added to the corpus of Law School private funding established before 1978, the total now stands at approximately $4.7 million.

Featured below are several new funds which were added to the endowment during the last year:

1. The Belton Bagging Company of Belton, South Carolina is the donor of a $141,000 gift in support of the work of the Dean Rusk Center and the international law program.

The gift, provided by the estate of William Carroll Brown, Jr., Belton's president, will be used to provide fellowships in the Dean and Virginia Rusk Fund.

The Belton Company manufactures woven fabrics and wire ties for bale covering and other industrial and agricultural applications.
William C. Brown was engaged in trade with India shortly after World War II which engendered his special interest in international affairs. The executor of the estate is Carroll B. Hart of Belton Bagging Company.
Robert M. Heard of Elberton serves as attorney for the company.

2. The Joseph E. Cheeley, Jr. Law School Library Endowment Fund was initiated in December, 1980. The fund, which will eventually reach $250,000, will be used in support of the law library. Part of the gift is being used to furnish the Joseph E. Cheeley, Jr. Judges and Lawyers Reading Room, a reference and study area for visiting practitioners and judges.

Judge Cheeley is a 1950 law graduate who practices in Buford. His son Joe is a 1980 alumnus of the Law School, and son Bob will graduate in 1982. The Judges and Lawyers Reading Room will be dedicated during the Homecoming activities in October.

3. The Moot Court Program has been endowed through a substantial gift by William R. Ponsoldt, chairman of the board of Erie Manufacturing Company. The gift came in the form of the Law School Association's ownership of two aircraft given by the company, which were then sold. The profit from the sale of the aerospatiale gazelle helicopter and the Mitsubishi MU2K jet went to the Law School Association for the purpose of endowing the Moot Court program.

William Ponsoldt, brother of law faculty member James Ponsoldt, is an industrialist with extensive corporate holdings based in Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

4. A professorial chair honoring former law dean Harmon W. Caldwell has been established in the School of Law. The Harmon W. Caldwell Chair in Constitutional Law was initiated by friends of Dr. Caldwell who contributed memorial gifts at the time of his death. In December, 1980, Mrs. Caldwell began a series of contributions. The Caldwell Chair is now a part of the University of Georgia Bicentennial Campaign. Gifts may be made by alumni and friends in honor of Dr. Caldwell. The campaign goal is $300,000.

5. A gift from the estate of Lucia Smith Wilson totaling $70,000 was given to the School of Law in June. The money will be used to establish a scholarship in the name of Mrs. Wilson's father, Marion Smith. Smith was a well-known Atlanta lawyer and civic leader who served as chairman of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia.

IX. PHYSICAL PLANT

A. Current Structures

In addition to the main law building complex, the School of Law utilized several other structures in 1980-81:

1. Waddel Hall, north campus quadrangle - home of the Dean Rusk Center for International and Comparative Law.
2. Emeriti House - renovated residential structure on south Lumpkin Street utilized for emeriti faculty offices and Rusk Center staff space.
3. Athens Legal Aid and Defender Society - office in Saye Building on north Lumpkin Street.
4. Prosecutorial Clinic - housed in the Office of the District Attorney on Hancock Street.

B. Physical Plant Modifications

During the summer of 1981, the faculty library on the third floor will be converted into the Joseph E. Cheeley, Jr. Lawyers and Judges Reading Room. The refurnishing project, a gift from Judge Cheeley, will include carpeting, chandeliers, wall fabric, and fine furniture. It will continue to function as a faculty library with its book-lined walls, but the interior shelves were removed and placed in the faculty lounge on the third floor.

This lounge area became the library of Professor Louis Sohn, whose offices are next door. The added shelving will house Sohn's personal collection of 15,000 books. A new faculty lounge will be located in what is now the third floor acquisitions processing room of the library.

During the latter part of the summer, the Law School's administrative offices, except those of the Dean and Associate Dean, will be moved to the first floor. The admissions, budget, and registrar's offices will occupy what is now the Georgia Law Review editorial offices when the Review staff moves into the new annex.

C. Physical Plant Addition

The law library annex was opened for full use with the beginning of summer quarter, 1981. The structure was completed by and dedicated on May 2, and the furnishings were installed during the next six weeks.

The construction project, undertaken by the Barge and Company, Inc. of Atlanta, took 18 months and $1.5 million to complete. Architects for the project were members of the Atlanta firm of Jova, Daniels and Busby. The construction was coordinated by the Campus Planning Office of the University of Georgia.

The annex provides 25,000 square feet of space divided among three tiers of shelving and study areas. In addition to the book stacks and reading tables, the annex opened up much needed office space. There are now 20 offices for the editorial staffs of the Georgia Law Review and the Journal of International and Comparative Law, five faculty offices, five library staff offices, the headquarters of the Institute of Continuing Legal Education, and two conference rooms. Other features include rooms set aside for the use of LEXIS, microfilm, and audio-visual equipment.

The expansion in library facilities enables the School to display 90,000 volumes. Some of these, such as the foreign legal periodicals, had been previously packaged in cardboard boxes for storage because there was no room for shelf display. A second set of the more commonly used materials was placed in the annex to allow a more efficient use of them for class assignments.
