

Brumby receives Distinguished Service Scroll Award

Otis A. Brumby Jr. (LL.B.'65) has been named the 2010 recipient of the Law School Association's highest honor, the Distinguished Service Scroll Award.

This accolade is given annually to individuals whose dedication and service to the legal profession and the law school deserve special recognition.

Currently the publisher of The Marietta Daily Journal and Neighbor Newspapers, and a trustee of the UGA Arch Foundation, Brumby has always been very involved in giving back to both the law school and the university as a whole.

In 2004, he established the Otis Brumby Distinguished Professorship in First Amendment Law, a joint faculty post that is shared between the law school and the Grady College of Journalism and Mass Communication. He also served as a committee member for the law school during the Archway to Excellence fundraising effort. Additionally, he participated in the law school's Dean's Business Roundtable Series last year, which brings alumni back to campus to share their professional experiences with law students in a small group setting.

Although a member of the State Bar of Georgia and the Cobb County Bar Association, Brumby's entire career has been in journalism.

Brumby earned his undergraduate degree from the University of the South, where he majored in political science and minored in economics. After graduating from Georgia

Law, he began working at The Marietta Daily Journal as assistant to the publisher. Two years later, he became publisher.

In addition to his responsibilities at the journal, Brumby launched Neighbor Newspapers in 1969 to serve the Atlanta suburbs.

Today, he and his son Otis Brumby III (J.D.'06) are responsible for publishing two daily newspapers and 27 community/suburban newspapers in 10 counties in metropolitan Atlanta. Named to Georgia Trend's list of "100 Most Influential Georgians" three times, he is also the director of the Georgia First Amendment Foundation.
