Biographies

Daryl R. Buffenstein serves as Partner and Co-Chair of Berry Appleman & Leiden's Atlanta office. Prior to joining BAL, Mr. Buffenstein was co-chair of the national immigration practice group of Paul, Hastings, Janofsky & Walker LLP for over twenty years. He has testified on numerous occasions before Congress on business immigration issues and has written key business provisions in every major piece of immigration legislation over the past 16 years.

Mr. Buffenstein is a founding member of, and functions as General Counsel for, the Global Personnel Alliance (GPA), a loose consortium of internationally active companies interested in global personnel mobility. He is a past national President of the American Immigration Lawyers Association (AILA) and subsequently served a four-year term as AILA's General Counsel. As President of AILA, in response to efforts in Congress to radically restrict immigration, Mr. Buffenstein led a successful national campaign to defend legal immigration. He was the 1997 recipient of AILA's Founders Award, which honors the person or entity which had the most significant impact on immigration in the preceding year. He was one of the original founders of the American Business for Legal Immigration (ABLI), an alliance of major national business organizations such as the National Association of Manufacturers, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, AILA, the American Council on International Personnel, and others (now Compete America). He is a frequent speaker and writer on business immigration issues.

Mr. Buffenstein has also been listed in The Best Lawyers in America and Who's Who in American Law and the International Who's Who in Business Law.

Kenneth Klein, a firmwide Practice Leader for Mayer Brown's Tax Transactions & Planning department, concentrates his practice on international taxation, tax planning, tax transactions, tax controversies, and public policy. His tax practice experience has included planning, structuring/restructuring, mergers and acquisitions, other transactions, regulations, legislation, private letter rulings, examinations, administrative appeals, and amicus briefs. He has represented domestic and international clients in numerous industries, including manufacturing, financial institutions, software, transportation, pharmaceuticals, services, real estate, agricultural, trading, and entertainment, among others.

Prior to working at Mayer Brown, Ken worked at the IRS, first as Assistant Branch Chief and Attorney, Legislation & Regulations Division and General Litigation Division (1977-1981), and later as the Associate Chief Counsel (Technical) (1988-1990). Klein was an associate and then a tax partner at Cadwalader, Wickersham & Taft from 1981-1988 and 1990-2002. He also was Fellow of the American Society of International Law (1976-1977).

Mr. Klein received his B.A. magna cum laude from the University of Delaware, his JD cum laude from the University of Georgia—where he was Articles Editor of the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law—and his MLT (LLM in taxation) from the Georgetown University Law Center. He has been named as a leading tax lawyer (Chambers USA 2005 & 2006), named to the World's Leading Tax Advisers (Euromoney/International Tax Review, 2007), named as among the Best Tax Lawyers in Washington, DC (Washingtonian Magazine, 2005, and Washington Post Magazine, 2006 and 2007) and named to Super Tax Lawyers in Washington, DC (Super Lawyers 2007 Magazine).

Terry Labat currently serves as the Senior Advisor to the Assistant Secretary of Commerce for Manufacturing and Services, the division of the International Trade Administration that works to enhance the competitiveness of U.S. industry, both domestically and internationally. Ms. Labat provides advice on trade policy and domestic policies and regulations that affect the business environment. She helps coordinate the work of thirteen offices that contribute to the development of U.S. trade and domestic regulatory policies, help resolve commercial and trade-related problems, and perform industry analyses.

Prior to assuming her current responsibilities, Ms. Labat served in a variety of Director positions at the Department of Commerce, overseeing various industries, including pharmaceuticals, biotechnology, medical devices, and telecommunications products and services. She was the Director of the Secretariat of the national Tourism Policy Council, an interagency council working to increase tourism exports and create U.S. jobs.

Ms. Labat has also served as Senior Counsel for Trade Agreements in the Office of General Counsel in the Department of Commerce and as Attorney-Advisor at the U.S. International Trade Commission (ITC). In those positions, she helped to negotiate international trade and investment agreements that opened markets for U.S. exports and investments, including telecommunications and tourism, and provided legal advice to the ITC Commissioners in antidumping, subsidy, and unfair trade investigations. Ms. Labat has been a member of several U.S. delegations, representing U.S. interests at the WTO, OECD, APEC, WHO, and the UNWTO. She has also been a legal consultant to UNCTAD.

Ms. Labat holds a B.A. and J.D. from the University of Georgia and received a Licence spécial en droit européen from the Université libre de Bruxelles. She is married and has one son.

Frederic F. Manget joins Georgia Law this fall as a visiting professor teaching intelligence law. He is a 22-year veteran of the Central Intelligence Agency, where he has spent most of his career as a legal adviser in the Office of General Counsel. Manget joined the CIA in 1986 and was promoted into the Senior Intelligence Service in 1995. In 2002, he received the Attorney General's Distinguished Service Award for support of the prosecutions for the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania. He also received the Department of Justice Public Service Award. Manget has published articles on intelligence and the law, winning the Studies in Intelligence Award in 1995.

Prior to joining the CIA, Manget was an associate with private law firms in Atlanta. He served in the U.S. Army Reserve Judge Advocate General's Corps, retiring after 32 years with the rank of colonel. While in the reserves, Manget received a Meritorious Service Medal for work done in reorganizing CIA support to the military reserves. Manget earned his A.B degree in political science, summa cum laude, and graduated with Phi Beta Kappa honors from the University of Georgia, his M.A. from Oxford University as a Rhodes Scholar and his J.D. from Vanderbilt University. He was also a Distinguished Graduate of the U.S. Air Force ROTC program and a Commandant's List graduate of the Army's Command and General Staff Officer School.

C. Donald Johnson joined the University of Georgia School of Law in June 2004 as the director of the Dean Rusk Center - International, Comparative and Graduate Legal Studies. In this role, he is responsible for the management and direction of the center's mission of promoting an understanding of international legal and policy issues by hosting conferences and visiting scholars and by facilitating international research, graduate and foreign studies, and outreach projects.

As a former U.S. congressman and ambassador, he brings to Georgia Law a distinguished career in both the public and private sectors. Prior to his current role, Johnson served as vice-chairman of Fleishman-Hillard Government Relations, Inc., in Washington, D.C., a subsidiary of Fleishman-Hillard, the largest public affairs communications firm in the world. There, he specialized in international trade and investment, national security and foreign policy and assisted such clients as the government of Hong Kong with bilateral trade, human rights, constitutional reform and domestic security law issues. His other clients included foreign and domestic corporations and foreign governments. Johnson previously dealt with similar international legal and policy issues as a partner at the law firm of Patton Boggs in Washington, D.C.

In 1998, he was nominated to the rank of ambassador by President Bill Clinton and for over two years served as chief textile negotiator and principal adviser to both the president and the U.S. trade representative on all textile and apparel trade matters.

In 1993-94, Johnson served as the U.S. congressman for the 10th district of Georgia. While in this position, he was a member of the House Armed Services and the Science,

Space and Technology committees and focused on national security and international economic policy.

Johnson also served in the Georgia State Senate from 1987 to 1992, where he was chairman of the Appropriations Committee, vice-chairman of the Judiciary Committee and served as an assistant floor leader for Gov. Joe Frank Harris. In addition, his public service also includes a four-year stint at the U.S. Air Force Judge Advocate General's Office (two years in Turkey) and serving as trade counsel to the U.S. House of Representatives Ways and Means Committee.

He holds a master of laws degree from the London School of Economics and earned his bachelor's and law degrees from the University of Georgia, where he served as articles editor for the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law. He obtained a certificate in private and public international law from The Hague Academy of International Law in The Netherlands.

Peter B. "Bo" Rutledge is an associate professor and his teaching and research interests include international dispute resolution, arbitration, international business transactions and the Supreme Court. An accomplished teacher, he was selected "Professor of the Year" by law students at the Catholic University of America for four straight years (2003-07). He is co-author with Gary Born of the book International Civil Litigation in the United States (Aspen Publishers, 2007) and has published numerous articles in journals such as the University of Chicago Law Review, the Vanderbilt Law Review, the University of Georgia Law Review and the Journal of International Arbitration.

A former law clerk at the U.S. Supreme Court for Justice Clarence Thomas and the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 4th Circuit for Chief Judge J. Harvie Wilkinson III, Rutledge regularly files briefs and advises lawyers in matters before the Supreme Court and lower courts.

In addition to his academic and legal work, Rutledge regularly comments on public policy matters. He has testified on several occasions before Congress, regularly has spoken to broadcast and print media and given speeches around the country on matters such as international dispute resolution, arbitration and the Supreme Court.

Before entering the teaching academy, Rutledge practiced at Wilmer Cutler & Pickering (now Wilmer Cutler Pickering Hale and Dorr), where his practice included international dispute resolution and Supreme Court matters, and at Freshfields Bruckhaus Deringer, where his practice concentrated on international arbitration.

He holds a B.A. magna cum laude from Harvard University, an M.Litt. in Applied Ethics from the University of Aberdeen (Scotland) and a J.D. with high honors from the University of Chicago, where he served as executive editor of The University of Chicago Law Review and was inducted into the Order of the Coif.

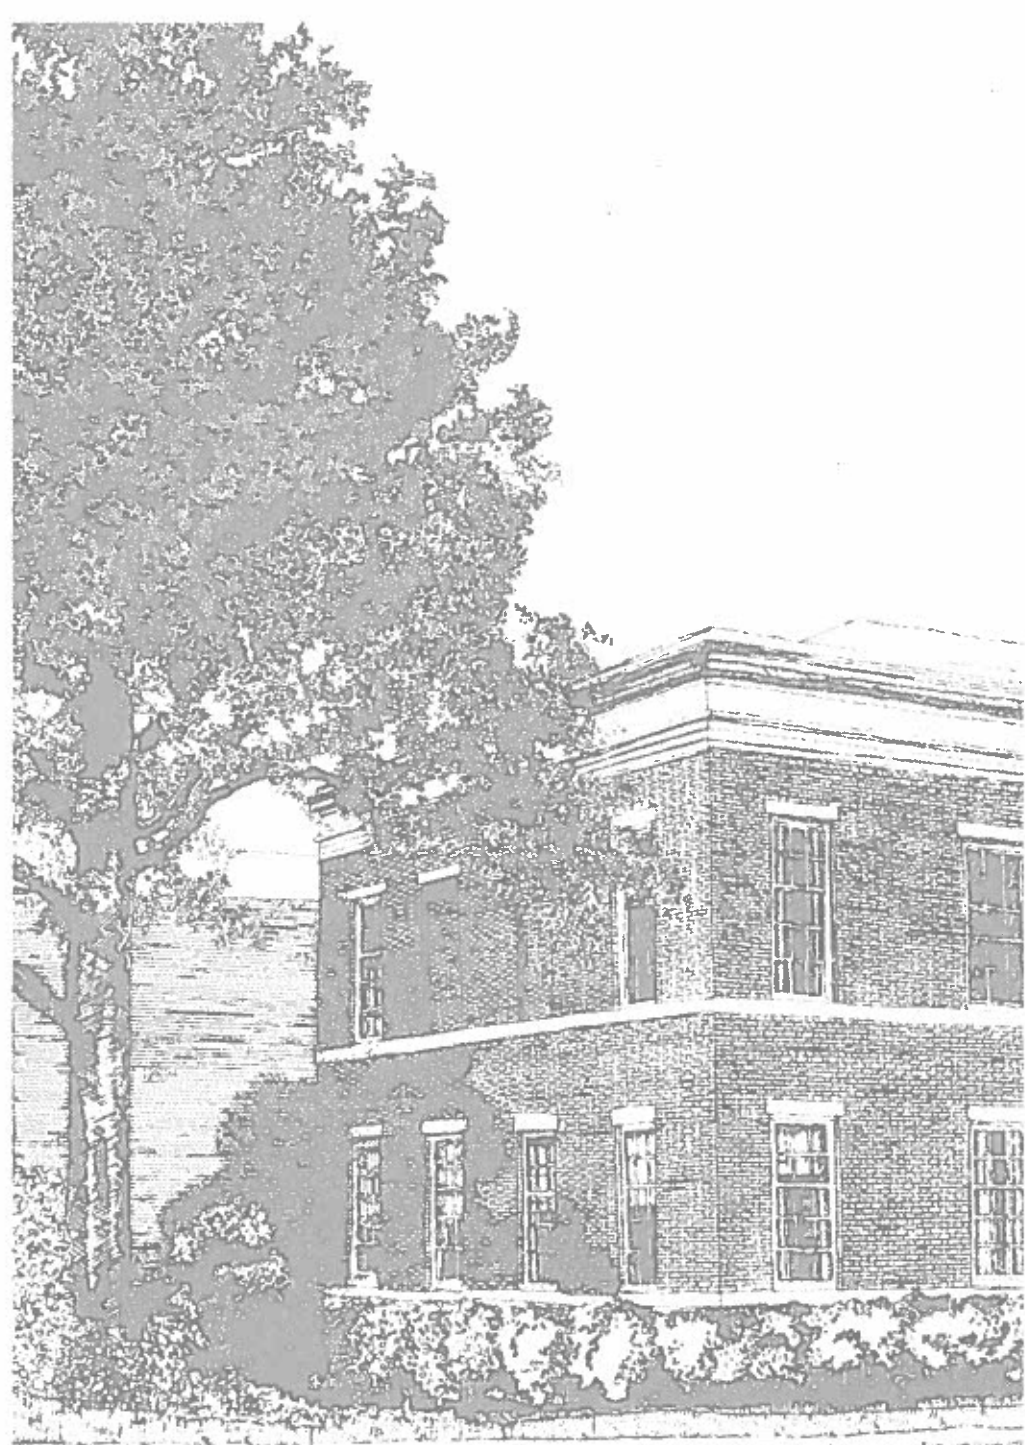

Associate Dean Gabriel M. Wilner joined the University of Georgia School of Law faculty in 1973 and serves as executive director of the Dean Rusk Center -- International, Comparative and Graduate Legal Studies as well as Charles H. Kirbo Chair in International Law. In addition to his current courses, he has taught private international law (conflict of laws), comparative law and maritime law. Wilner also serves as director of the law school's LL.M. (Master of Laws) program and the Brussels Seminar on the Law and Institutions of the European Community and Union -- a three-week intensive course on EC law -- since its inception in 1973.

Wilner has served as legal advisor and consultant to various United Nations institutions and to African and Asian regional institutions. He has also served as arbitrator in transnational disputes and was a drafter of the 1988 Georgia Arbitration Code. In 1991, he received the Whitney North Seymour Arbitration Medal from the American Arbitration Association.

Wilner has published on international law, domestic and international arbitration, international development law and private international law (conflict of laws). He also serves on the editorial board of the Columbia Journal of European Law and was a member of the advisory board of editors of the Journal of Maritime Law and Commerce for 20 years. He has been the faculty advisor to the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law since 1973 .

Wilner served as an associate in the legal department of the American Arbitration Association from 1964-66 and then practiced law in Brussels, Belgium, for two years. From 1964 to 1969, he was director of studies at the Hague Academy of International Law. In 1969, he became a member of the Office of Legal Affairs of the United Nations, where he remained until joining the UGA law faculty in 1973. He took a leave of absence from the university to serve as a legal officer in the technology transfer division of the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD) in 1976-77, 1978 and 1979. He served as a legal consultant to UNCTAD from 1980 to 1985 and to the United Nations Commission on Transnational Corporations from 1985 to 1990.

He earned a B.A. from the College of William and Mary, a D.P.A. from the University of Exeter in England and received his law and master of laws degrees from the Columbia University School of Law, where he served as editor-in-chief of the Columbia Journal of Transnational Law. He was also a doctoral student at the Université Libre de Bruxelles (ULB).
