The 104th John A. Sibley Lecture
"Saving Lives, Saving from Death, Saving from Dying"

by
Mark G. Kelman
Vice Dean and Gaither Professor
Stanford Law School

Hatton Lovejoy Courtroom, School of Law
March 25, 2009
3:30 p.m.
With areas of interest ranging from law and economics to cognitive psychology, Kelman has applied social science approaches to diverse legal fields including criminal law, taxation, administrative regulation and disability law. Kelman is also an expert on antidiscrimination law, criminal law and criminal justice, distributive justice, employment discrimination, property, and race and the law. His current research focuses on whether the concept of human welfare, which is used to evaluate the success of policy or the justice of distribution of goods and opportunities, can or should be refined.

In addition to being a long-time teacher of both criminal law and property law, Kelman has served as the academic coordinator, as the academic associate dean and, currently, as the vice dean of Stanford Law School. Before joining the faculty at Stanford in 1977, he was the director of criminal justice projects for the Fund for the City of New York. Kelman earned his Bachelor of Arts and his Juris Doctor from Harvard University.
The 104th John A. Sibley Lecture

Welcome to Sibley Lecture and Introduction

Christian Turner
Assistant Professor of Law,
School of Law

Sibley Lecture - “Saving Lives, Saving from Death, Saving from Dying”

Mark G. Kelman
Vice Dean and Gaither Professor,
Stanford Law School

There will be a reception immediately following the lecture in the Rotunda.

The Sibley Lecture Series, established in 1964 by the Charles Loridans Foundation of Atlanta in tribute to the late John A. Sibley, is designed to attract outstanding legal scholars of national prominence to Georgia Law. Sibley was a 1911 graduate of the law school.