The 105th John A. Sibley Lecture
“When and How (If at All) Does Law Constrain Official Action?”

by
Frederick Schauer
Harrison Distinguished Professor of Law
University of Virginia

Hatton Lovejoy Courtroom, School of Law
October 28, 2009
4:30 p.m.
Frederick Schauer teaches courses in constitutional law, evidence and the philosophy of law as the Harrison Distinguished Professor of Law at the University of Virginia School of Law. He also is the Stanton Professor of the First Amendment Emeritus at Harvard’s Kennedy School of Government, where he taught from 1990 to 2008. Schauer served as academic dean and acting dean at the Kennedy School and taught at the Harvard Law School. He is a Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a former Guggenheim Fellow.

A founding co-editor of the journal Legal Theory, he is the author of more than 200 articles for legal and philosophic journals and books on freedom of speech and press, constitutional law and theory, evidence, legal reasoning and the philosophy of law. His work includes: The Law of Obscenity; Free Speech: A Philosophical Enquiry; Playing By the Rules: A Philosophical Examination of Rule-Based Decision-Making in Law and in Life; Profiles, Probabilities, and Stereotypes and Thinking Like a Lawyer: A New Introduction to Legal Reasoning. He earned his A.B. and M.B.A. from Dartmouth College and his J.D. from Harvard University. He holds an M.A. by resolution from the University of Oxford.

A select list of Schauer’s scholarship can be found at www.law.uga.edu/library/acquisitions/schauer%20bib.html
The 105th John A. Sibley Lecture

Welcome to Sibley Lecture

Paul M. Kurtz
Associate Dean for Academic and Student Affairs &
J. Alton Hosch Professor of Law,
School of Law

Introduction of Sibley Lecturer

Michael L. Wells
Marion and W. Colquitt Carter Chair in Tort and Insurance Law,
School of Law

Sibley Lecture - “When and How (If at All) Does Law Constrain Official Action?”

Frederick Schauer
Harrison Distinguished Professor of Law,
University of Virginia

There will be a reception immediately following the lecture in the Rotunda.

The Sibley Lecture Series, established in 1964 by the Charles Loridans Foundation of Atlanta in tribute to the late John A. Sibley, is designed to attract outstanding legal scholars of national prominence to Georgia Law.
Sibley was a 1911 graduate of the law school.