

1-1-1933

Pandora excerpt describing the Harold Hirsch Hall construction

University of Georgia

Repository Citation

University of Georgia, "Pandora excerpt describing the Harold Hirsch Hall construction" (1933). Other Law School Publications. 325. https://digitalcommons.law.uga.edu/lectures_pre_arch_archives_other/325

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Archives at Digital Commons @ Georgia Law. It has been accepted for inclusion in Other Law School Publications by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Georgia Law. Please share how you have benefited from this access For more information, please contact tstriepe@uga.edu.

Artisans labored with sure haste

He acted barber to frowsy grassplots

Squatty, rambling Joe Brown Dormitory, South's finest student housing plant

Main floor of partially completed Harold Hirsch Hall

Exterior of Harold Hirsch Hall. Later, autos were banned from the building's entrance, grass planted in the old roadway.

Old home of Georgia's Law School, passed to Department of Personnel and Publicity.

New finery bedecked the physical being of the old lady while well chosen tonics awakened new life within.

Feverishly hammering, laying brick, setting stone, artisans labored in mid-campus completing with sure haste Harold Hirsch Hall, new law building, home of Alexander King Memorial Library, a devil's food cake in red brick, white concrete.

Finest student housing system in the South, rose Joe E. Brown Dormitory, squatty & rambling, on Lumpkin street.

Colored laboring gangs shuffling & slow, strove with mattock, pick, shovel, paint brush, driven by Yardman Dudley's whiplash tongue. Result: frowsy grassplots lay neatly barbered, sooted walls gleamed with whitewash.

Thus the setting, internal, external, in which an old University, at one hundred thirty-two, took on new life, moved into faster tempo.