

DEDICATION

The Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law is proud to dedicate this volume to Dean Rusk, a statesman of both national and international renown. Born in Cherokee County, Georgia, on February 9, 1909, Dean Rusk graduated from Davidson College in 1931, and in 1934 studied at St. John's College in Oxford, England, as a Rhodes Scholar. He was Associate Professor and Dean of the Faculty at Mills College from 1934-1940. Dean Rusk received his law degree from the University of California at Berkeley, class of 1940. He served in the U.S. Army from 1940-1946, and in the Department of State from 1947-1952, where he was Assistant Secretary of State for United Nations Affairs and for Far Eastern Affairs. He also directed the Rockefeller Foundation as its President from 1952-1960. Most notably, from 1961-1969 Dean Rusk was Secretary of State under Presidents Kennedy and Johnson.

For over 22 years, Dean Rusk has served the University of Georgia as a professor of international law. During that time, he has had a major positive impact on the University of Georgia: his lectures are thronged with students; he has attracted important international visitors, faculty, and students; and private donors have opened their checkbooks. Whatever success the University has enjoyed in building international programs is largely due to his efforts.

The University is in his debt, and it is indeed appropriate to pay him this tribute.

Thomas J. Schoenbaum
Dean and Virginia Rusk Professor of Law
Executive Director, Dean Rusk Center for International and Comparative Law

