

EDITORS' PAGE

Volume two of the Georgia Journal of International and Comparative Law consisted of two proceedings issues which were presented in lieu of regular issues because of the special value of the topics considered in those proceedings. Volume three will consist, however, of two regular issues, presenting articles accepted by the 1972 and 1973 staffs. It is anticipated that this regular issue format will be continued, and in the future, proceedings will be presented either as additional issues or as an inclusion in a regular issue.

The editors express appreciation to the Journal's subscribers for their support during the difficult period inherent in establishing a new publication. The Journal's present position of viability could not have been reached but for the support accorded by the faculty of the University of Georgia Law School and in particular Deans J. Ralph Beard, C. Ronald Ellington and Lindsey Cowen.

A special expression of appreciation is due Professor Dean Rusk. He has been generous in his encouragement and advice, and has shared his experience and intellect with us in a scholarly and gracious fashion. In appreciation for this association, the editors would like to dedicate Volume three to Professor Rusk.
