The University of Georgia School of Law is routinely recognized as one of the country’s finest public law schools, and this brochure highlights some of the reasons our law school is so highly regarded.
The University of Georgia School of Law is routinely recognized as one of the country’s finest public law schools, and this brochure highlights some of the reasons why our law school is so highly regarded.

Over the past several years, we have added a significant number of new faculty members who are bolstering our scholarly reputation and increasing the depth of our curriculum. We added three outstanding tenure track professors to our faculty this fall. Enhancing the school’s offerings in criminal law, international law and legal history are: Associate Professor Andrea L. Dennis, Assistant Professor Timothy L. Meyer and Assistant Professor Logan E. Sawyer III. Plus, we have added a full-time skills-based instructor, Eleanor Crosby Lanier. Furthermore, three of our faculty were rewarded with new titles, and one was granted tenure.

At Georgia Law, our faculty is expected to pursue a strong scholarly agenda and to contribute to the development of the law. In addition to providing congressional testimony, delivering titled lectures and being cited by the U.S. Supreme Court and other courts, our professors have had articles either published or accepted for publication in journals associated with some of our nation’s top law schools such as California at Berkeley, Case Western Reserve, Chicago, Fordham, George Mason, George Washington, Harvard, Northwestern, Stanford, Syracuse, Virginia, and Washington and Lee. Also, books carrying the work of Georgia professors have or will soon be published by Cambridge University Press, Harvard University Press, Oxford University Press, Yale University Press, Aspen Publishers, LexisNexis and Thomson/West, to name a few.

The credentials of Georgia Law’s incoming classes continue to be among the best in the nation. While here, our students benefit from the academic rigor found in the classroom as our professors do not allow their ambitious scholarly agendas to displace their commitment to teaching. This year, we expanded our service learning programs with the creation of our 12th clinic – the Appellate Litigation Clinic – which will assist with cases in federal appeals courts. Our international study and work abroad opportunities also continue to grow, and currently our Global Internship Program boasts legal placements with more than 60 organizations in more than 30 countries worldwide.

Another indicator of success for an educational institution is the achievements of its alumni. I am very pleased that, during the past five years, four Georgia Law graduates have clerked for the U.S. Supreme Court. Georgia Law graduates who hold faculty positions within the legal teaching academy are also on the rise. This, of course, is in addition to the many former students who have distinguished themselves in the practice of law in the public and private sectors.

I encourage you to spend a few more minutes with this publication to learn more about the vibrant community of learning at the University of Georgia School of Law, one of our nation’s finest law schools.

Sincerely,

Dean and J. Alton Hosch Professor of Law
new titles and appointments
Lonnie T. Brown Jr. has been selected as the new holder of the A. Gus Cleveland Distinguished Chair of Legal Ethics and Professionalism. This chair was previously held by Meigs Distinguished Teaching Professor and former Dean C. Ronald Ellington, who retired in 2009.

Brown joined Georgia Law in 2002 and teaches in the areas of civil procedure, legal profession, ethics in litigation and conflict of laws. Previously, he was an assistant professor at the University of Illinois College of Law and a visiting assistant professor at Vanderbilt University Law School. He served as a judicial clerk for Judge William C. O’Kelley of the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Georgia and practiced law as an associate and partner at Alston & Bird in Atlanta from 1991 to 1999.

His scholarship concentrates on legal ethics in the adversary system, and he has published a number of articles on this subject in various law reviews. He is currently writing a biography of former U.S. Attorney General W. Ramsey Clark, and he has authored several pieces related to this project. In 2004, Brown was appointed by the Georgia Supreme Court to a three-year term as a member of the Review Panel of the State Disciplinary Board for the State Bar of Georgia and served as vice chair during his final year.

He earned his bachelor’s degree from Emory University, where he was a Robert W. Woodruff Scholar, and his Juris Doctor from Vanderbilt University, where he was a Patrick Wilson Scholar and editor-in-chief of the Vanderbilt Journal of Transnational Law.

“When I was in practice, I had the privilege of working with an attorney who was the very embodiment of ethics and professionalism. I teach and write about legal ethics because of his profound influence upon me.”
Assuming the post of associate dean for faculty development, Paul J. Heald is also the holder of the Allen Post Professorship at Georgia Law. In his new role, he will work closely with the law school’s faculty, especially junior faculty, to expand and promote scholarly activities.

Heald joined the law school in 1989 and specializes in domestic and international intellectual property law. He frequently lectures on these topics around the world and has been a visiting law professor at the University of Chicago, the University of Oxford (England), Vanderbilt University, the University of Texas, the University of Regensburg (Germany), the University of Lyon (France), Bournemouth University (England) and the London Law Consortium. He has also served as a judicial clerk for Judge Frank M. Johnson Jr. of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 11th Circuit.

His recent publications have focused on the economic aspects of intellectual property law, including theoretical papers on optimal patent remedies, the role of transaction costs in patent law and the problem of patent pricing as well as two empirical studies on best-selling fiction and musical compositions from 1913 to 1932. He has also written two books on law and literature.

Heald earned his bachelor’s and master’s degrees in comparative literature from the University of Illinois. He then earned his law degree cum laude from the University of Chicago, where he served on the University of Chicago Law Review and was inducted into the Order of the Coif.

“I want to help my colleagues become the best teachers and scholars they can be, encourage critical thinking and a strong conscience in my students, and advance the understanding of the intersection of economics and law through my scholarship.”
Usha Rodrigues became a member of the Georgia Law faculty in the fall of 2005 and was recently awarded tenure. She teaches courses on contracts, business planning and non-public business associations.

Prior to coming to UGA, Rodrigues was a corporate associate with Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati in Reston, Va., where she specialized in corporate law and technology transactions. She also served as a judicial clerk for Judge Thomas L. Ambro of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 3rd Circuit.

Her scholarly interests lie in corporate law, corporate governance and corporate legal history. Her recent work includes “Placebo Ethics: A Study in Securities Disclosure Arbitrage” in the Virginia Law Review. She has also had articles appear in the Florida Law Review, the Journal of Corporation Law, the Washington and Lee Law Review and the Stanford Journal of Law, Business & Finance. Additionally, she is the reporter for the American Bar Association’s Special Task Force on the Impact of the Troubled Asset Relief Program on Corporate Governance.

Rodrigues earned her bachelor’s degree summa cum laude from Georgetown University, her master’s degree in comparative literature summa cum laude from the University of Wisconsin and her Juris Doctor from the University of Virginia, where she served as editor-in-chief of the Virginia Law Review and was inducted into the Order of the Coif.

“My favorite thing about teaching is having an impact on someone’s life. I have had former students reach out and tell me how much they learned at Georgia, and there is no better feeling.”
Andrea L. Dennis has joined the Georgia Law faculty as an associate professor teaching Criminal Law, Evidence and Criminal Procedure. She comes to UGA from the University of Kentucky, where she specialized in criminal law and family law.

Previously, Dennis served as an assistant federal public defender in the District of Maryland and worked for the Office of the Corporation Counsel prosecuting child abuse and neglect cases on behalf of the District of Columbia. She also practiced corporate and patent litigation and antitrust law as an associate at Covington & Burling in Washington, D.C., and served as a judicial clerk for Judge Raymond A. Jackson of the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Virginia.

Her research interests include criminal adjudication, juvenile victims and witnesses, and snitching and witness intimidation. She has recently had articles published in the American Criminal Law Review and the Columbia Journal of Law & the Arts. Additionally, she serves on the Southeastern Association of Law Schools New Scholars Committee.

Dennis earned her bachelor’s degree in engineering with a psychology concentration from the University of Maryland and her Juris Doctor from New York University, where she was a member of the New York University Annual Survey of American Law.

“At Georgia Law, I find the faculty to be engaged, dynamic and supportive, and the students to be interesting, thoughtful and eager to learn. I believe this combination of faculty colleagues and students will make this an exciting place to work.”
Specializing in international business transactions, international environmental law and constitutional law, Timothy L. Meyer comes to UGA from the U.S. Department of State Office of the Legal Adviser. There, he represented the United States in international arbitrations in India and Thailand and in commercial real property transactions all over the world. Meyer also acted as lead counsel to delegations negotiating international agreements with China, Afghanistan and Panama. In 2009, he received both the Superior Honor Award and the Meritorious Honor Award for his work.

Previously, Meyer served as a judicial clerk to Judge Neil M. Gorsuch of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 10th Circuit. He also worked for the U.S. Department of Defense during law school, where he assisted with treaties and other agreements between the department and foreign ministries of defense.

He has an article forthcoming in the Harvard International Law Journal. He has had other works published in the Chicago Journal of International Law and the Fordham International Law Journal, to name a few.

Meyer earned his bachelor’s and master’s degrees in history from Stanford University, where he graduated Phi Beta Kappa. He received his law degree and doctorate in jurisprudence and social policy from the University of California at Berkeley, where he graduated first in his law class, was a member of the California Law Review and was inducted into the Order of the Coif.

“Coming from practicing law at the Department of State, I was drawn to Georgia Law’s wonderful support for international legal scholarship. The law school and the Dean Rusk Center in particular enjoy a reputation as one of the best places in the country to study, debate and teach international legal issues.”
Logan E. Sawyer III has joined Georgia Law as an assistant professor teaching American Legal History, Legal Profession and Corporations. Previously, he held a Law Research Fellowship at Georgetown University. Also, he taught at the University of Virginia. His academic interests focus on the relationship between law and political institutions in American history.

Before he entered the teaching academy, Sawyer served at the White House as associate counsel for the Homeland Security Council and as a trial attorney at the U.S. Department of Justice Office of Consumer Litigation, where he entered government service as part of the department’s Honors Program. In addition, Sawyer served as a judicial clerk for Judge Jane R. Roth of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 3rd Circuit and for Justice Robert F. Orr of the North Carolina Supreme Court.

His research includes the exploration of how constitutional argument has shaped party politics and the fight for federal child labor legislation between 1907 and 1916, which was the basis of his dissertation titled “Federalism and Reform: Constitutional Politics and the Progressive Era Campaign for a Federal Child Labor Law.”

Sawyer earned his Bachelor of Science degree in environmental science and his Bachelor of Arts degree in history from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, where he graduated Phi Beta Kappa. He earned his Juris Doctor as well as both his master’s degree and doctorate in American history from the University of Virginia. While in law school, he served as the articles editor of the Virginia Environmental Law Journal.

“I’m a legal historian because I love the hunt for forgotten and often surprising ideas that can cast new light on the problems of our modern legal system. I try to emphasize in all my classes that lawyers are more than just experts on rules, they are problem solvers.”
Eleanor Crosby Lanier, who has been affiliated with Georgia Law since 2005 as the managing attorney of the Mediation Practicum, was recently named a full-time skills-based instructor to serve the growing needs of this program.

Before coming to UGA, Lanier was a consulting attorney and mediation trainer for The Center for Social Gerontology in Ann Arbor, Mich., which pioneered the use of elder mediation. She also worked as an attorney for the AARP Foundation in Washington, D.C., as a managing attorney for the Georgia Senior Legal Hotline, as a legal services developer for the Georgia Division of Aging Services and as a staff attorney for Georgia Legal Services.

As a registered mediator and arbitrator with the State of Georgia Office of Dispute Resolution, Lanier is qualified to mediate a wide range of disputes, including those under the Americans With Disabilities Act and the Individuals With Disabilities Education Act. She has an article forthcoming in the Family & Intimate Partner Violence Quarterly and is the co-author of “Adult Guardianship in Georgia: Are the Rights of Proposed Wards Being Protected? Can We Tell?” in the Quinnipiac Probate Law Journal and “Ethical Considerations in Medicaid Estate Planning” in the Fordham Law Review. She has received numerous awards and was recently among the first class of inductees into the Elder Rights Advocacy Hall of Fame.

Lanier earned her bachelor’s degree from Vassar College, her master’s degree in political science from UGA and her Juris Doctor from Emory University.

“What I enjoy the most about the University of Georgia School of Law is that it is a dynamic place that combines a strong sense of history with unlimited possibilities for future progression and growth.”
The new director of the Alexander Campbell King Law Library, Carol A. Watson, is no stranger to the University of Georgia. She earned three of her four degrees at the university and has been a member of the law library staff for the past 23 years. In her new role, she replaces longtime director E. Ann Puckett, who retired in July.

Watson began working at the law library in 1987 and was later named the associate director for information technology, which included supervising the law school’s Computing Services Team. She is the vice president/president elect of the southeastern chapter of the American Association of Law Libraries and chair of the Academic Special Interest Section’s Continuing Education Committee.

Her scholarship includes “Effective Project Management: The Art of Creating Scope Statements,” “Project Management — A Law Librarian Survival Skill” and “Behind a Law School’s Decision to Implement an Institutional Repository.” She has also presented on the topic of institutional repositories at several conferences including the AALL’s Annual Meeting and the CALI Conference for Law School Computing.

Watson earned her bachelor’s degree in comparative literature and her master’s degree in education from the University of Georgia. She then completed her Master of Science in Library Service at Clark Atlanta University before returning to UGA to earn her Juris Doctor cum laude.

“The library is the intellectual heart of our law school. It is a comfortable, welcoming space designed for discovery, contemplation and creativity. With spectacular picture windows overlooking scenic and historic North Campus, it is also one of the most beautiful facilities in the country.”
Assistant Professor Fazal Khan is part of a team which was recently awarded a three-year National Institutes of Health grant to create an interdisciplinary center on the ethical, legal and social implications of epigenetics research. Khan will be serving as one of the primary legal consultants for the center alongside principal investigators from Oregon Health & Science University.

E. Ann Puckett, professor of law and director of the Alexander Campbell King Law Library emerita, has been inducted into the inaugural class of the American Association of Law Libraries Hall of Fame. The Hall of Fame was created to recognize AALL members whose contributions to the profession and service to the association have been significant, substantial and longstanding. A nationally recognized leader in law library management, Puckett served as director of the law library for 16 years before retiring this past July.

Associate Professor Peter B. “Bo” Rutledge was selected to serve as a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Vienna School of Law for the 2010–11 academic year. While in Austria, Rutledge will be conducting research on international dispute resolution. He will also be working toward the completion of his new book Arbitration and the Constitution, which is currently under contract with Cambridge University Press, as well as co-authoring a new edition of International Civil Litigation in the United States.
Richard B. Bilder joined Georgia Law for the fall semester as a visiting professor teaching International Dispute Resolution. He comes to UGA from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, where he is the Foley & Lardner-Bascom Emeritus Professor of Law.

Bilder specializes in international and foreign relations law, international organizations, admiralty law, contracts and torts. His scholarship includes numerous articles as well as the book Managing the Risks of International Agreement. He was also a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Cambridge.

Previously, Bilder was an attorney-adviser in the U.S. Department of State Office of the Legal Adviser. He also served as vice president of the American Society of International Law, on the board of editors of the American Journal of International Law, on the executive council of the Law of the Sea Institute, as chair of the International Law Association Diplomatic Protection of Persons and Property Committee, on U.S. delegations to international conferences and as an arbitrator in international and domestic disputes.
Teaching in the areas of employment discrimination and torts, William R. Corbett will join Georgia Law as a visiting professor for the spring semester.

He currently holds the Frank L. Maraist Professorship at the Louisiana State University Law Center, where he has been a member of the faculty for nearly 20 years. During that time, he has taught primarily in the areas of employment law, labor law and civil procedure. Corbett also served as vice chancellor for academic affairs at the Law Center from 1997 to 1999. Before going to LSU, he practiced labor and employment law with Burr & Forman in Birmingham, Ala.

Corbett has written several books and numerous articles on labor, employment and torts topics, and he is a frequent lecturer on these subjects. He is also the executive director of the Louisiana Association of Defense Counsel. He has previously served as the executive director of the Louisiana Judicial College and as a visiting associate professor at William & Mary Law School.

William B. Chandler III is serving as a visiting professor at Georgia Law for the fall semester teaching Advanced Corporations.

Since 1997, he has served as the chancellor of the Delaware Court of Chancery, a position he was appointed to after serving for eight years as a vice chancellor of the court. From 1985 to 1989, Chandler was a resident judge of the Superior Court of Delaware. He has also worked as an associate at Morris, Nichols, Arsht & Tunnell and as legal counsel to former Delaware Gov. Pierre S. du Pont IV. Additionally, Chandler has taught at a number of law schools including Vanderbilt University, Washington University in St. Louis and The Ohio State University.

Chandler is a member of the American Law Institute, the board of advisers of the Yale Law School Center for the Study of Corporate Law, the Third Year Advisory Board of Washington and Lee University School of Law, and he is a trustee of the Weinberg Center for Corporate Governance at the University of Delaware.

Erik F. Gerding comes to Georgia Law from the University of New Mexico as a visiting associate professor for the fall semester. He will teach Corporations and Contracts. His areas of specialization also include securities regulation, regulation of financial institutions, law and finance, law and economics, and commercial law.

His research focuses on the intersection of securities and financial institution regulation as well as corporate law and governance. He is also interested in cognition and risk, particularly how investors and lawyers process information about risk and uncertainty. He has written articles in the University of Washington, the University of Wisconsin and the University of Connecticut law reviews. He also has a book, Bubbles, Financial Regulation, and Law, under contract with Routledge Press.

Previously, Gerding worked as an associate in the New York and Washington, D.C., offices of Clearly Gottlieb Steen & Hamilton, where he represented clients in areas such as securities offerings, financings, mergers and acquisitions, joint ventures, and cross-border transactions.
Elizabeth Weeks Leonard

Visiting Professor of Law
B.A., Columbia University
J.D., University of Georgia

Elizabeth Weeks Leonard, a faculty member at the University of Kansas, joined Georgia Law for the fall semester as a visiting professor teaching Torts and Health Care Finance.

Leonard was recently honored at the University of Kansas with the Immel Award for Teaching Excellence and with the Meredith Docking Faculty Scholar Award, a university-wide honor for faculty who have distinguished themselves early in their careers. She has also received the American Society of Law, Medicine & Ethics’ Health Law Scholars Award, which recognized her as one of four emerging health law scholars nationwide. Her scholarship includes articles in the Washington University Law Review, the North Carolina Law Review and the Wake Forest Law Review.

Before becoming a professor, Leonard was an associate in the Health Industry Group at Vinson & Elkins in Houston. She also served as a judicial clerk for Judge Jacques L. Wiener Jr. of the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 5th Circuit and for Chief Justice Thomas R. Phillips of the Supreme Court of Texas.

Kim Van der Borght

Visiting Professor of Law
LL.B., LL.M., Aggr., Ph.D., Free University of Brussels
Pg.D., University of West England

Kim Van der Borght joined Georgia Law for the fall semester as a visiting professor teaching a course on international and regional trade agreements. He comes to the School of Law from the University of Brussels Centre for Economic Law & Governance, where he also teaches courses on international commercial arbitration, trade and business law, and commercial law.

Van der Borght is an accredited arbitrator (CEPINA), a member of the International Trade Law Committee for the International Law Association and is listed on the governmental roster of panelists for the World Trade Organization. He is also an independent adviser for the Strategic Council on the International Relations of the Flemish Region, a governmental advisory body.

His scholarly interests include the law and policy of international and regional organizations dealing with international trade. Additionally, Van der Borght serves on the editorial board for Human Rights and International Legal Discourse and is a corresponding editor for International Legal Materials.
