ANNOUNCEMENT.

The next session of this department begins September 18th, 1901. The time requisite for graduation is two years. The fees are $75.00 per year, of which $40.00 are due at entrance and $35.00 at the opening of the spring term. Law students are not required to pay matriculation, library, diploma, or other University fees. All the departments of the University are open to law students without additional fees. Matriculants in this department must be eighteen years old, and must pass satisfactorily an entrance examination, covering the elements of an English education. Applicants for admission to the second-year course, in addition to the English examination, must have completed one year's course in a standard law school, or must have read law under advice and direction in some law office for a year, and must stand a satisfactory examination on the work covered by the first year of the course in this department. Applicants for the degree must enter not later than the first day of October. Those who continue in actual attendance upon the exercises of this department during the two years, of two terms each, to wit: the autumn and spring terms, and those who are admitted to the second year of the course, and continue in actual attendance for one year, of two terms, to wit: the autumn and spring terms, and complete successfully the required course of study, receive the degree of Bachelor of Law of the University of Georgia, and are admitted to the bar without examination in court.

At the opening of the autumn term of the first year, Blackstone will be taken up, and lectures on the Constitution of the United States will begin. On arrival here, report at the Chancellor's office, or to the Dean, in the Ivy Building, on the University campus.

ADMISSION.

Applicants for admission to this department must pass a satisfactory examination upon the elements of an English education. Applicants for admission to the second year, in addition to the English examination, must have completed one year's course in a standard law school, or must have read law under advice and direction in some law office for one year, and must stand a satisfactory examination on the work covered by the first year of the course in this department. Applicants for the degree must enter not later than the first day of October. Students not applicants for the degree may enter at any time. No student under the age of eighteen years will be admitted. Students transferred from the Academic Departments must obtain written permission from the Chancellor, allowing such transfer, and certificates from the proper officer of the University showing that they have been satisfactory students in those departments.

The course of study being systematized and compressed into a comparatively short time, it being vastly important that the first principles should be thoroughly understood and mastered, it is urged that each student begin with the class at the opening of the autumn term.

METHOD OF INSTRUCTION.

The best features of the lecture and of the recitation are secured by the method of instruction pursued in this department. Reading is daily assigned in the text-book, the professor comments on the same, and the student is required to recite thereon. By this means each part of the subject is explained to the student, is then read by him, and he is either questioned or hears others questioned thereon.

COURSES OF STUDY.

The course in this department is completed in two years, consisting of four terms. The exercises of the University, including this department, begin on the third Wednesday in September in each year and end at the annual commencement on the third Wednesday in June. The autumn term commences with the college year and closes the day before Christmas.
The spring term commences the day following New Year and closes at commencement.

Two courses of instruction are pursued, to wit: the Study Course and the Lecture Course, arranged as follows:

Study Course.

The class meets one of the professors of law at the morning hour, and the other professor of law at the afternoon hour, daily (except Saturday and Sunday), with a previously assigned part of the text-book (then being read). The professor delivers lectures explanatory of the text, and questions the members of the class on the text and the lecture.

FIRST YEAR.

The autumn term is devoted to the study of Blackstone's Commentaries, Elementary Law, American Law, Constitution of the United States, Constitution of Georgia, Part First of the Code of Georgia, relating to the political organization of the State.

The spring term is devoted to the study of Contracts, Sales, Bailments, Torts, Criminal Law.

SECOND YEAR.

The autumn term work covers the subjects of Commercial Law, Agency, Partnership, Common Law Pleading.

The spring term work covers the subjects of Real Estate, Conveyancing, Domestic Relations, Corporations, Equity Principles and Pleading, Evidence.

In addition to the daily recitations from the regular text-books, the students are required to consult other standard works on all branches of the law.

Lecture Course.

The class meets one of the special lecturers of the department at the noon hour three times a week. The schedule is so arranged that the several courses of lectures do not conflict. The lecturers and their subjects are as follows:

The Chancellor delivers lectures, beginning during the autumn term of the first year and continuing until the end of the course, upon:

- The Science and History of the Law.
- Federal Statute Law, Procedure and Practice.
- Legal Ethics.
- Lectures on Medical Jurisprudence are delivered twice a week during the autumn and spring terms of the first year by Dr. S. C. Benedict, and continuing until the course is completed. The text-book in this course is Reese's Medical Jurisprudence.

Lectures on Parliamentary Law, by Prof. John D. Mell, begin about the middle of the spring term of the second year, and continue for about three weeks. The text-book in this course is Mell's Parliamentary Law.

A course of lectures on the Civil (Roman) Law is delivered by J. H. T. McPherson, Ph.D., Professor of History and Political Science, during the spring term of the second year.

HONORS.

Two members of the law class are allowed places among the Senior speakers on commencement day. The speakers from the law class are chosen by the faculty of the law department for general excellence in all the exercises and branches of study in the department.

The Edward Thompson Company, of Northport, Long Island, offer as a prize their American and English Encyclopedia of Law, to be awarded to such member of the law class as submits the best thesis on a subject to be selected by the faculty of the law department. The prize is awarded annually, and the name of the successful competitor is announced publicly on commencement day by the Chancellor.

A copy of Van Epps and Akin's Digest and Index of the Georgia Reports was presented by the authors, and competed for by the class of 1901 under the like conditions.

MOOT COURTS AND LEGAL EXERCISES.

After the students are sufficiently advanced, frequent moot courts are held, in which one of the professors presides, the judges being taken from the students in other departments of the University. The law students are assigned to act as counsel in the cases on trial, and are sometimes required to preside. In these courts the students are taught the actual practice of law, such as pleading, drawing orders, moving for new trials, advocacy before the court and jury, the use of reports and text-books as authority; in short, all the elements of actual courthouse practice.

Throughout the course constant exercises are given in pleading and drawing deeds, wills, and mortgages, and all kinds of legal documents, including commercial paper. The students are first required to correct the papers drawn by each other, and then the professor in charge reviews and explains both the original and critical exercises. It is the purpose of the department to equip its graduates ready for active practice of the profession.

A moot parliament is organized under the direction of the Professor of Parliamentary Law, the officers being students. The organization and conduct of legislative assemblies are thus practically taught.
EXAMINATIONS.

There are two kinds of examinations—oral and written. Each professor daily examines orally on the prescribed lessons. Written examinations are held at the conclusion of each text-book or branch of study. These examinations are made very searching, and the student is given abundant time to write out his answers without assistance; thus impressing upon his mind what he has learned and disclosing accurately and impartially his progress.

SOCIETIES.

There are two literary societies in connection with the University, viz.: The Demosthenian and Phi Kappa societies. The former was founded in 1801, the latter in 1820. The members of the societies meet in their respective halls every Saturday morning at 10 o'clock. Debates on interesting subjects are held at each meeting. In these debates the student learns self-reliance, readiness of expression, rapidity of thought. To the lawyer, perhaps, one of the most valuable accomplishments is the ability "to think on his feet," and these societies afford a good field for the acquirement of this habit.

TUITION AND EXPENSES.

The tuition in the Law Department is $75.00 per annum, divided as follows: $40.00 for the autumn term, to January first; and $35.00 for the spring term, from January first to commencement. Tuition is payable in advance at the beginning of each term.

No matriculation or library fee is required in this department. The students in law are entitled to the privileges of all other departments of the University, at Athens, without extra charge.

The expenses of the course are as follows:

- Tuition per annum $75.00, total . . . . . . . . . . . . . $150 00
- Initiation fee, literary society . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . 2 00

SYLVANUS MORRIS, Athens, Ga.
were both the corporators and the professors. From that time to the death of Judge Lumpkin, in 1867 (Mr Cobb having died in 1862), the Law Department of the University was conducted under the name of the Lumpkin Law School, and the graduates were awarded their diplomas by the trustees at the regular commencement. The exercises of the law school were suspended during the Civil War.

In August, 1867, Benjamin H. Hill and William L. Mitchell were elected by the Board of Trustees to the two vacancies in the Law Department, and from that time forward the law school has been conducted under the name of the Law Department of the University.

From the time of Mr. Hill's election to the United States Senate in 1877, his connection with the school was nominal, and the classes were under the sole care of Dr. Mitchell until 1881, when Pope Barrow and George Dudley Thomas were elected professors of law. Dr. Mitchell died in 1882 and Mr. Barrow resigned in 1883. In 1884 Andrew J. Cobb was elected, and from that time until 1890 Mr. Thomas and Mr. Cobb filled the chairs.

In 1890 Howell Cobb was elected. In 1893, Mr. Thomas and Mr. Andrew J. Cobb having resigned as regular professors, and become lecturers, Sylvanus Morris was elected.

The chair of Lecturer on Medical Jurisprudence was filled by Dr. R. D. Moore, until 1873, from 1873 to 1879 by Dr. R. M. Smith, from 1880 to 1883 by Dr. John Gerdine, and in 1883 Dr. S. C. Benedict was elected.

From 1873 to the time of his death, in January, 1888, Chancellor P. H. Mell delivered lectures on Parliamentary Law to the class in connection with the Senior Class in the other departments of the University. In 1884 John D. Mell was elected Lecturer on Parliamentary Law.

IMPROVED AND EXTENDED COURSE OF INSTRUCTION.

The Trustees, realizing the rapid growth of this department of the University, and with the hope of extending its usefulness, have added some new and useful features. Distinguished and learned gentlemen were induced to lend their aid to the success and usefulness of the department by delivering lectures on subjects specified. Hereafter, therefore, the method of instruction will be divided into two distinct systems.

The professor will assign daily lessons in the text-books, and the students will be required to recite orally, just as in any other school. From experience, as well as observation, it is believed that the "lecture system" alone, as pursued in so many similar institutions, does not meet the necessities of the case. However learned the lecturer and however attentive the student, the impression left upon the beginner's mind is not so permanent as that produced by his own study of the subject, reinforced by the oral recitations and by the explanations of the professor. Under the plan of instruction outlined, the student first studies with the incentive of desire to learn, and with the knowledge that his fellow-students will hear his oral examinations. Ample explanations and illustrations, together with incidental lectures arising out of the subject of the lesson, from the professor, aid the student's own labor. The consequence is that the student, from pride as well as ambition, learns each lesson, and his knowledge thus acquired is permanently fixed in his mind. The act of reciting fixes in the mind that which is recited. Moreover, the professor is, by this means, enabled to ascertain those points which are not understood by each student, and to adapt his explanations to the need of the entire class.

With this system of daily drilling in the recitation-rooms, and with the proper study which it enforces, the student is taught a sufficient knowledge of the subject to prepare his mind for the incalculable benefits to be derived from lectures. It is believed that a knowledge of the law can not well be obtained under either system unaided by the other; the effort is thus made to derive all the benefits of both. All the good features of the "recitation system" are thus combined with the "lecture system," and the attempt made to reap the fruits of both the general plans of professional education. In addition, this course offers exceptional advantages in the frequent exercises in the actual drafting of pleadings and other legal papers, thus practically impressing upon the mind of the student the principles involved by putting them into actual use. It is not, of course, expected that accomplished lawyers will be turned out in a course so short as this necessarily is. Until the time appears proper for lengthening the term of professional study, the course must be adapted to existing circumstances. But there is no reason why a student of average ability should not acquire in the allotted time a knowledge of the general principles of law, and a sufficient knowledge of "how to study" to carry on alone his advancement in the leisure which usually befalls the young lawyer.

THE LAW SCHOOL VS. THE LAWYER'S OFFICE.

The question is often asked, which affords the better place for obtaining a legal education, a law school or a lawyer's office? The question is generally propounded by one who has tried neither, and is answered by one who has not sufficient knowledge of both to draw an intelligent comparison. While it is true that there is a variety of opinions among those well qualified to determine between the two methods of legal education, the great majority of those acquainted with both methods unhesitatingly decide in favor of the school. It may be well to state some of the reasons which are apparent from a moment's reflection.

It may be assumed that the student does not wish access to the office of the unsuccessful or inexperienced lawyer. The trained and busy lawyer, who takes into his office from sympathy or friendship the prospective student, has no time to spare. The constant thirst of the studious young man for explanation in almost every page of his book must be satisfied with a hasty word or two at intervals in a busy day. If the student hopes also to acquire practical knowledge by performing clerical duties for his so-called preceptor, the chief advantage is lost because no reason is given him why one form is used and another discarded; why one act is right and the other wrong. In short, the student in the busy lawyer's office simply works out what he can for himself, and catches, here and there, with a chance explanation, a glimpse of the law.

In the school, where a sufficient number are collected, the professor derives a revenue which compensates him for the time he spends in instructing. He does not feel that his valuable time is taken from his business, because teaching the class is one of his chief as it is one of his pleasantest duties. The professor has time and, what is equally important, the inclination to explain to the student every principle which he cannot master in his own study. Reciting every day in the hearing of his fellow students, and hearing them recite, together with the eager questions and answers which are constantly arising among so many young men pursuing the same subject, can not fail to impress indelibly upon the mind each day's work. The frequent duty of drawing all legal documents, and their criticism in the classroom, enables the student to understand the reasons for each and teaches him to beware of errors, in his own and in his adversary's work.

The object of the student is not to acquire a fund of information on legal questions, but to train himself to think, reason, and express himself as a lawyer should. The regular day-by-day digestion and assimilation of an assigned part of the subject is the peculiarity of the school. In the office the student reads on one day ten pages, on the next none, on the third fifty or an hundred. Instead of the strength

George Hoadly, of Ohio, and Edmund H. Bennett, of Massachusetts. In this report, which was unanimously adopted, the Committee say:

"There is little, if any, dispute now as to the relative merit of education by means of law schools and that to be got by more practical training or apprenticeship as an attorney's clerk. Without disparagement of mere practical advantages, the verdict of the best informed is in favor of the schools.

"The benefits which they offer are easily suggested, and are of the most superior kind. They afford to the student an acquaintance with general principles, difficult, if not impossible, to be otherwise attained; they serve to remove difficulties which are inherent in scientific and technical phraseology; and they, as a necessary consequence, furnish the student with the means for clear conception and accurate and precise expression. They familiarize him with leading cases, and the application of them in discussion. They give him the valuable habit of attention, teach him familiar maxims, and offer him the priceless opportunities which result from constant and generous emulation. They lead him readily to survey law as a science, and imbue him with the principles of ethics as its true foundation. Disputing, reasoning, reading, and discoursing, become his constant exercise."

In a paper read on January 20th, 1887, before the New York State Bar Association, by Franklin M. Danaher, a member of the State Board of Examiners, occurred the following expressions:

"Observation shows that under modern conditions existing in the profession, an education in law can not be procured exclusively in a law office, and that those who have had the benefit of law-school training are better equipped to enter upon their career and are more likely to succeed therein than those who come to the bar through an office. * * * Members of the bar of the future, to succeed, must have a scientific, well-directed and comprehensive training in a law school. The fact that many of the lawyers of to-day did not have that advantage and still succeed is no reason why the future will not demand it. * * * The great problem of the higher education of the bar can be materially helped toward solution and the bar decidedly improved along lines of public and professional good, by requiring the successful completion of a course of study in an improved law school of all future applicants for admission."
