EXCERPTS FROM REUNION COMMITTEE MEMBERS

letters to classmates...

In a society that places increasing importance on instant information, we should take time to pause, to reflect and to remember. Our 25th reunion gives us a chance to do just that. All of us have memories of our law school days. All of us have memories of our law school classmates. All of us have memories of our law school professors. For me, I vividly remember sitting in the back row of Classroom F eating Peanut M&Ms and drinking a Coke during Georgia Practice, all the while wondering why I was dumb enough to take a class from Dean Ellington during my third year. To this day, whenever I eat Peanut M&Ms and drink a Coke, I think of my efforts to avoid being called upon in that class.

—Stephen L. “Steve” Cummings, Class of 1987

It’s hard to believe we graduated from our beloved law school 50 years ago this year!

—Justice George H. Carley, Class of 1962

I remember the quality of our professors, not just our first year, but throughout law school. In thinking back to those days, it occurred to me that I never thanked them or the administration for providing us with these excellent professors. It’s a little late, but thank you.

—Steven L. Beard, Class of 1977

My time both in and out of the classroom at Georgia Law left me with lifelong friends. We saw each other through good times and bad and continue to do so out here in the real world.

—Christopher M. Gant, Class of 2007

Is it possible that 35 years have passed since our graduation from law school? With great fondness, I remember that day in June when we received our diplomas in the Fine Arts Building. Stan Jones was the president of our class. Jack Watson gave our commencement address. It was a day of celebration and excitement.

—David B. Bell, Class of 1977
