The post-postcolonial woman or child

Associate Dean for International Programs and Strategic Initiatives Diane Marie Amann examines who is the post-postcolonial woman or child and how international law should protect and empower her.

It’s time for postal banking

Associate Professor Mehrsa Baradaran explores the possibility of the U.S. Postal Service offering banking services to the unbanked population.

Is a tech audit in your future?

Information Technology Librarian Jason Tubinis explains how the Legal Tech Audit can give lawyers a competitive boost.
Burch receives one of the legal academy’s highest honors

Justice Thomas teaches at Georgia Law

Napolitano makes a case for public service

Commencement

Headlines

Yates confirmed as U.S. deputy attorney general

Law school receives $3.4 million from the estate of the late Gov. Sanders

Hirsch Hall Highlights

Key events and institutional briefs.

Georgia Law Review Symposium focuses on evolution of financial regulation

Keynote presentations at the spring conference “Financial Regulation: Reflections and Projections” were delivered by Dennis Lockhart, the president and CEO of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, and Luis Aguilar (J.D. ’79), a commissioner with the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission.

International Criminal Court prosecutor speaks on crimes against children in times of conflict

ICC Prosecutor Fatou Bensouda spoke at a Georgia Law conference titled “Children and International Criminal Justice” in the fall.

Announcing the Challenge Fund

The law school establishes a Challenge Fund that will match, dollar for dollar, all new and increased gifts to the Law School Fund.

Promote your law school by using #GeorgiaLaw